Residents question Hein on interest conflict charge

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling residents pressed Trustee William Hein Tuesday night to explain a "conflict of interest" resulting from his employment at Wheeling Auto Parts Inc., a firm that does business with the village.

Hein, however, stuck by his "there is no conflict" statement of several months ago and apparently did not satisfy the residents' inquiries.

More than 70 residents attending a village board accountability session at Eugene Field school, listened while a half-dozen people questioned Hein's association with the auto parts firm at 141 S. Milwaukee Ave.

In October, The Herald disclosed that the village bought more than $16,000 of auto parts in the 1972-73 fiscal year from two companies owned by Hein's family. According to village treasurer's reports, the village bought $13,624 in goods from Wheeling Auto Parts and another $3,050 of supplies from B. C. Auto Parts, Inc., 221 N. Lake St., Mundelein.

THE ISSUE was raised Tuesday by Titi Hedlund, 125 Berkshire Dr., when she asked each trustee to explain what he felt was a conflict of interest. (Mrs. Hedlund's husband, Otis, was narrowly defeated in his bid for the village presidency in the 1973 village election.)

Hein fielded the question, saying "each one of the trustees and each of the officials in the village of Wheeling filed a statement of economic interest." The trustee said he did not think it was a conflict to work for Wheeling Auto Parts and to also serve on the village board.

According to Hein, sales to the village did not increase his income since he is paid a salary. "I don't do business with anybody," he said. "I work for a salary like anyone else."

Several residents, however, said that while the sales may not have increased Hein's salary, they did benefit his family. Gordon P. Hein, the trustee's father, is president of both B.C. and Wheeling Auto Parts.

TRUSTEE ED BERGER said the conflict had come to the attention of the village through the newspaper. "But I think that had been decided by legal talent that there was no conflict," he said.

Residents complained that although

Koeppen speaks out on indictments

Wheeling Trustee John Koeppen broke precedent at the village board's fourth accountability session by making a lengthy statement on recent indictments against six former and present village and Cook County officials.

Koeppen again asked residents not to inquire about the indictments, saying the trustees could not comment on the advice of their attorney. He did, however, explain that the village board had mixed feelings on the matter when it was discussed in a closed-door session.

"There was much discussion in the executive session that night," Koeppen said. He said the board was not unanimous on what action should be taken about the indictment of Building Director William Bieber and Environmental Commission Chairman Michael Valenza.

DURING THE executive session, the village attorney advised the board that it might face a lawsuit if they suspended either man from office and that man is found innocent. The trustees then asked Bieber and Valenza to voluntarily seek a leave of absence, and both men complied.

"When it was all explained, when we all walked out of that room, some of the trustees may not have been happy about it, but we all abided by it," Koeppen said.

The trustee said it was most difficult for the board members to "bite their tongues" and not comment on the matter when residents were so concerned about the indictments. He said the board could not comment for fear of legal complications in the case.

Koeppen suggested that residents read the newspaper accounts of the Bieber and Valenza matter. "I think The Wheeling Herald explained the situation on Mr. Bieber and Mr. Valenza," he said.

THE TWO WERE named in indictments issued last month following a year-long investigation into alleged shake-downs in Wheeling.

Bieber is charged on 15 counts, including extortion, perjury, conspiracy and filing a false income tax return. He pleaded innocent on all counts.

Valenza was indicted for extortion and conspiracy to commit extortion in connection with the delivery of more than $1,700 of furniture which he allegedly received as part of a shake-down of Wickes, Inc. He has also pleaded innocent.

there might not be a legal conflict, there was a moral conflict. Some questioned the fact that Hein voted to approve the October purchase of an auto lift and alignment equipment from B. C. Auto Parts for $4,360.65. Wheeling Auto Parts was second low-bidder for the equipment.

"The man should not have voted. He should have abstained," said one resident. "The man voted and then arrogantly told us there was no conflict of interest. It's a matter of morality. It would have been just as easy for you not to have voted."

Hein said he voted on the matter because he has an obligation to the village to vote for the "lowest possible bid. So it's a pretty tight line on a moral or a legal obligation," he said.

THE TRUSTEE said it took a lot of thought to decide whether to vote on that purchase. "As far as abstaining, you're right, it took a lot of thought," he said. "I had two obligations. One as a trustee and one as a citizen of the Village of Wheeling."

Other trustees giving their definitions of conflict of interest varied slightly in their interpretation of the law. Trustee Don Jackson said he would be in conflict of interest "if I was asked to make decisions that would affect my livelihood. I think these two should absolutely be kept separate," he said.

Trustee Ed Berger said a conflict of interest would be "anyone using his position as an elected official to further his own gain." Trustee Ron Bruhn said he would be in conflict of interest "if I was offered a promotion to resign something in the village."

While Trustee John Koeppen did not define conflict of interest, he said he has never sold paint or glass to any of the projects in town "because I voted for them. It's taken bread and butter away from my family."

Trustee Al Lang and Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon did not attend the accountability session.

Residents tell opposition to more liquor licenses

About half of the Wheeling residents attending the last two village board accountability sessions said they did not want the number of village liquor licenses increased.

Trustee Al Lang is seeking residents' opinions on the liquor licenses because he has received a large number of requests for new licenses.

About 61 of the more than 120 people attending the two sessions said the village already had enough liquor licenses. There are currently 21 liquor licenses, including two licenses for not-for-profit clubs.

Of those residents favoring more liquor licenses, 40 said they would like the licenses to go to grocery stores like the Jewel, National or Dominicks.

ABOUT 40 residents said they would like to see additional licenses created to allow private recreational clubs to serve liquor to members. While there are no such clubs presently in the village, La Cancha Raquet and Swim Club is planned for 1225 S. Wheeling Rd.

Only 30 residents said they would like restaurants in Wheeling to be allowed to obtain beer and wine licenses. These licenses would cater to the 19-year-old trade.

Fifteen residents said they would like to see more restaurants granted a Class A license, which would entitle them to stay open until 4 a.m. Restaurants must seat at least 200 persons to qualify for this license.

Although liquor licenses are controlled by Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon, he only has responsibility for issuing or revoking those licenses created by the village board. Any new licenses have to be approved by the village trustees.

Lang will continue his survey during the remaining two accountability sessions and then meet with his committee to decide whether to recommend the creation of new licenses.

EXPLORING ALL FIELDS of science, the students at St. Joseph the Worker School in Wheeling, have developed projects for the annual science fair that is being conducted as part of "Choose Catholic Schools Week." Eighth graders Vicki Binbesie, seated, and Doris Juengel studied osmosis.

St. Joseph School hosts science fair this week

by JILL BETTNER

A rocket-powered car, volcanoes and trained mice are the subjects of some of the science projects developed by students at St. Joseph the Worker School in Wheeling for a science fair this week at the school.

The fair is one of several activities being conducted as part of "Choose Catholic Schools Week," designated by the U. S. Catholic Conference and the National Catholic Educational Assn.

Working at home and in science classes, students have researched and created a variety of projects that were displayed for parents last night in an open house at the school.

All children in the first through eighth grades were required to enter a project in the fair and write a paper explaining their methods and findings. The students explored a variety of subjects including the growth of bacteria in plants, the reproduction cycle of the fruit fly, diseases of the eye, distillation of water and osmosis.

ONE GROUP trained several mice to follow a path through a maze, another built a model of a dam and several constructed small volcanoes.

The workings of a car engine were studied by one group who took the engine apart and completely reassembled it.

The projects will be graded by classroom teachers and also judged for prizes by a group of science teachers at Wheeling High School.

First, second and third place honors will be awarded to students in each grade whose projects are judged to be the best in the competition.

A display of art projects and items made in elective classes offered for the first time at St. Joseph's this year is also included in the week-long schedule of activities celebrating "Choose Catholic Schools Week."

AN ALL-SCHOOL music program will also be presented at 10:30 a.m. Friday.

Parents interested in enrolling students at the school next year may register their children anytime this week by contacting John Topper, principal at 537-4181.

The schedule of tuition fees at St. Joseph's next year will be the same as this year. Charges are $200 for one child, $250 for two, $300 for three and $25 for each additional student in the same family.

Trustee accounting session at 7:30 p.m.

Wheeling Village Board members will be available to answer residents' questions at 7:30 tonight at the board's fifth accountability session.

Tonight's meeting will be at Nathaniel Hawthorne School, 200 Glendale Ave. After a brief introduction, the trustees will field questions from the audience. The session is scheduled to last one hour.

Stavros dismissal plea denied

by LYNN ASINOF

A motion to dismiss charges against James Stavros, indicted former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, because of pretrial publicity was denied yesterday in U.S. District Court.

Stavros' attorney, Joel Murray, asked that extortion charges against his client be dropped because of publicity resulting from a press conference called by U.S. Atty. James Thompson to announce the indictments. Murray contended that newspaper, radio and television coverage of Stavros' indictment and arrest has made it impossible for his client to get a fair trial.

Judge Hubert Will denied the motion, saying it was premature. The judge said he would consider the charges of pretrial publicity when he interviews prospective jurors for the case.

THE HEARING yesterday was the first of three scheduled on motions to dismiss charges against Stavros because of pretrial publicity. Stavros was indicted on charges of extortion and conspiracy in three separate indictments last month, and is appearing before three different judges.

The matter was originally scheduled for hearing today, but was discussed in court yesterday when Stavros was given permission to leave the northern district of Illinois for a vacation.

A trial date for Stavros is scheduled to be set March 1 when Judge Will will rule on any other pretrial motions entered by Murray. The judge gave Murray until next Thursday to file his pretrial motions.

Murray said he plans to file motions in all three of the pending Stavros cases. "They will be motions to dismiss all of the indictments on technical legal grounds and possibly other constitutional grounds," he said.

OTHER HEARINGS scheduled on the charges against Stavros are not scheduled until March 29 when he will appear

No new leads in $15,000 bank robbery

The investigation of Tuesday's $15,000 robbery of First Arlington National Bank continued Wednesday with no new leads. "We're still kicking it around," said a Federal Bureau of Investigation spokesman. "We have a lot of ends to tie up. The best thing to say is we're still investigating it." Bank officials said the loss from the early-morning hold up of First Arlington's drive-in facility was about $15,000. They labeled early police reports estimating the take up to $100,000 as erroneous.

Extortion indictment stands

U.S. District Judge Hubert Will Wednesday refused to dismiss an extortion indictment against James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic Committeeman. Joel Murray, Stavros' attorney, had asked that charges against his client be dropped because of what he charged as prejudicial pretrial publicity. The judge, who granted Stavros permission to leave the northern Illinois district for a vacation, is expected to set a trial date March 1 in a seven-count extortion indictment returned Jan. 31 against Stavros by a federal grand jury.

Fire starts as car hits pump

Arlington Heights firemen were called to Northwest Auto Wash, 900 W. Euclid Ave., Wednesday when a car was driven into a gasoline pump. A fire department spokesman said a small amount of gasoline was spilled from the hose. A spark ignited the vapors, he said, causing an explosion. The fire was quickly doused by station attendants but a rising ball of black smoke was reportedly visible for three miles. No one was injured and the damage to the pump was estimated at $1,500 by the fire department.

Peskin bribe trial delayed

The federal trial of Bernard Peskin, former state representative accused of passing bribes to six ex-officials of Hoffman Estates, has been postponed until March 11 to give out-of-state witnesses time to travel to Chicago. The trial had been scheduled to begin Monday. Six former village officials indicted with Peskin in a zoning bribery scheme have pleaded guilty.

Prospect Heights refiles

Backers of Prospect Heights incorporation have filed a new petition calling for a March 13 circuit court hearing on their referendum proposal. The new petition asks for five changes in the previously proposed boundaries of the new municipality, including deletion of part of the Rob Roy Golf Course. The changes for the most part cover properties already involved in annexations to neighboring villages.

Bomb charge 'unfounded'

The attorney for Palatine Patrolman Richard J. Sikorski Wednesday called bomb threat charges filed against his client "completely unfounded." Departmental charges were placed Tuesday against Sikorski by Chief Jerry Bratcher, who said evidence has been found linking the patrolman to the Feb. 11 bomb threat telephone call. Sikorski testified Feb. 12 before the village police and fire commission on behalf of ousted Police Chief Robert Centner. He told the commission he had been the subject of possible frame ups and harassment by dissident policemen who wanted to force Centner out of office.

GOP group opposes RTA

The Wheeling Township Republican organization has voted unanimously to oppose the Regional Transportation Authority as it will be presented in the March 19 RTA referendum. In the same resolution, however, the GOP organization endorsed the concept of a mass transit authority for the six-county metropolitan area. The organization also endorsed Jeanette Mullen of Barrington for the Republican nomination for state treasurer, over Harry Page of Springfield. Both resolutions had been recommended by the organization's executive committee. The unanimous vote against the RTA proposal means that precinct captains of the organization will be instructed to campaign actively against the referendum question. An estimated 65 persons were present for the vote.

Funds for crime-fighting units sought

Atty. Gen. William J. Scott said he is seeking funds to create two crime-fighting bureaus to take on "white collar" crime in Illinois and to help county state's attorneys prosecute tough cases. Scott said he applied for $1.4 million in state and federal grants to set up the Financial Crimes Bureau and the Prosecution Assistance Bureau. The units would be staffed by 16 attorneys, investigators and clerical workers.

Budget chief critiques Blair's tax plan

This year's squabbling over tax relief got up a full head of steam yesterday as Budget Director Harold Hovey said Robert Blair's tax plan presented Monday would cost the state as much as $163.5 million a year — rather than the $51.5 million Blair estimated. Hovey did not mention a competing plan advanced Tuesday by House Democratic Leader Clyde Choate of Anna.

The nation

Order food for 'People in Need' plan

The organizers of the Hearst "People in Need" program, hoping to have enough food to feed 20,000 people by Friday, scouted distribution sites and lined up trucks and volunteers yesterday. FBI special agent Charles Bates, meanwhile, said he felt Patricia Hearst was safe and would be freed unharmed. He said he thought the "people" program met the demands and deadline of the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Safety unit opens aerosol hearings

The Consumer Product Safety Commission said yesterday there are an estimated 12,000 injuries every day associated with aerosol spray products. Richard Simpson, commission chairman, gave the estimate at the opening of a two-day hearing on whether the government should clamp tighter controls on products sold in aerosol containers. Industry spokesmen said aerosols are generally safe when used as directed.

Dunlop opposed to auto price hikes

The government's top price controller said yesterday he opposed any new price hikes on 1974 model cars and trucks and indicated the auto industry ought to stick to an anti-inflation pledge made just three months ago. The statement by John Dunlop was aimed squarely at General Motors Corp.

Lack of anti-busing action hit

Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., said lack of congressional action to halt court-ordered busing of school children is a major factor in erosion of public confidence in Congress. Allen told a Senate panel that Congress must act soon to "shackle the unlimited discretionary powers of federal judges to tyrannize the people of our nation."

Union chiefs: lawmaker 'friends' needed

Union leaders, meeting in Miami Beach, said yesterday they need a net gain of 23 "friends" in the House and seven in the Senate in the 1974 elections to get a "veto-proof Congress" that can override President Nixon on labor legislation. AFL-CIO President George Meany accused Nixon of the "most ruthless use of presidential veto power in history."

Israeli withdrawal continues

U.S.-built Israeli M48 Patton tanks rumbled across the Israeli causeway into Sinai yesterday in the final hours of the withdrawal from the west bank of the Suez Canal under the military disengagement agreement that defused the front with Egypt. In Jerusalem, meanwhile, Prime Minister Golda Meir announced the formation of a new Israeli government excluding the hawkish Likud bloc demanded by Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, and presumably without Dayan himself.

Viet youth, passenger die in skyjack try

A Vietnamese youth pulled the pin on his hand grenade yesterday, killing himself and another passenger when his attempt to hijack an Air Vietnam airliner to North Vietnam was foiled by the American co-pilot. Ten other persons were wounded in the blast, and the prop plane was badly damaged. In Cambodia, air force planes destroyed two American artillery pieces captured by Communist rebels.

Heartland campaign for Heath, Wilson

Prime Minister Edward Heath and Labor Party leader Harold Wilson — exchanging angry verbal sideswipes in an increasingly bitter election battle — carried their campaigns yesterday to Britain's industrial heartland where the Feb. 23 general election could be won or lost. An Opinion Research Center poll, shows Heath's Conservatives 6 per cent ahead of Wilson's Labor party.

Seek to modernize Geneva Conventions

Representatives of 115 nations attempted to bring the rules of war up to date yesterday in Geneva. The conference, organized by the International Committee of the Red Cross, is expected to modernize the Geneva Convention of 1949 in view of the trend toward guerilla warfare.

High court gives police more leeway

From Herald news services

In a pair of 6-3 decisions, the U. S. Supreme Court yesterday gave police and federal authorities greater leeway to use evidence obtained from authorized wiretaps, and to conduct searches without a warrant.

In both rulings, Justices Potter Stewart and Byron R. White joined President Nixon's four court appointees to provide the majority. Justices William O. Douglas, William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall dissented.

The wiretap case originated in Chicago, where officials obtained a court order to tap telephone conversations of Irving Kahn and "others yet unknown." Later, evidence from the wiretapping was used to bring gambling charges against Kahn and his wife, Minnie.

U. S. District Judge Thomas R. McMillen and the 7th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals barred use of the wiretap evidence against Mrs. Kahn on the ground she was not a person "unknown" to investigators when they applied for court authority, and her name should have been listed.

But Stewart, who wrote the majority opinion, said there was nothing in the 1968 Crime Control Act which would support such a conclusion.

In the other case, White declared for the majority that arresting officers are entitled to conduct a warrantless search of a home by showing that a third party "who possessed common authority" over the premises gave consent.

The issue arose when police arrested William Earl Mattlock, a bank robbery suspect, in the yard of a rural Pardeeville, Wis., home rented by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Marshall. The Marshalls' daughter, who said she occupied the same room with Mattlock, gave the arresting officers permission to search the premises.

White held that "when the prosecution seeks to justify a warrantless search by proof of voluntary consent, it is not limited to proof that the consent was given by the defendant, but may show that permission to search was obtained from a third party who possessed common authority or other sufficient relationship to the premises or effects sought to be inspected."

Walker to release 'emergency' gas

From Herald news services

Gov. Daniel Walker, saying he is "confused like everyone else" about the federal allocation system, announced Wednesday that about 12 million gallons of extra gasoline may be available in Illinois this month.

Walker said he intends to release the unused gasoline in the state's emergency pool — set aside for use by police, fire and other emergency vehicles — by the end of this month. There is currently about six million gallons in the pool, he said.

In addition, Walker said, the Federal Energy Office FEO has promised to allocate an extra six million gallons of gasoline to the state, primarily for use in the Chicago area.

Walker said he has no immediate plans to urge Illinois stations to adopt a gasoline purchasing plan.

He said his office would be watching to see whether a minimum purchase plan — $2 for compact cars and $3 for full-size cars — adopted by some stations in the Chicago area helps reduce waiting lines.

Walker's announcement came as a new wrinkle was injected into the energy mess — a court challenge to the way the government is dispensing gasoline.

U. S. District Court Judge Dorsey Watkins ordered federal energy director William Simon and representatives of 25 major oil companies to appear in his Washington court tomorrow to defend the latest gas allocation plan against an attack by Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel.

Mandel filed suit Wednesday challenging the dispensation of an extra 2 per cent of gasoline to Maryland, charging it was less than the state really needed.

The suit asked the court to order Simon and his office to release immediately an additional 20.5 million gallons of gasoline among retail stations in Maryland.

Mandel said, "We have been misled, given erroneous information and we must get our fair share of gasoline or we face a crisis in the coming week."

Depending on how it comes out, the suit could have far-reaching implications in the energy crisis and the role of the Federal Energy Office.

Meantime, the FEO and the federal government were attacked from another quarter, with a spokesman for the nation's gasoline station owners warning the government it was "sitting on a powder keg" that could explode in a nationwide shutdown of gasoline pumps unless it granted a substantial increase in retail prices.

Charles Binstead, president of the 70,000-member National Congress of Petroleum Retailers said he made it "very clear this is a serious situation" in a meeting with FEO deputy chief John Sawhill.

He said there were no threats, but told Sawhill ways would have to be found to head off an uprising by station owners being hurt by reduced gasoline supplies. The dealers are looking for a formula that would allow them to increase prices by one-tenth of 1 per cent for each 1 per cent cutback in gasoline allocations.

Simon said earlier he was "terribly concerned with the plight of gasoline dealers," caught between a profits squeeze and long lines of angry motorists.

Kissinger and Congressmen at hemisphere conference

Sen. Mike Mansfield

Carl Albert

From Herald news services
Secretary of State Henry Kissinger — accompanied by a high-powered Congressional delegation — flew to Mexico City late yesterday for three days of talks with Western hemisphere foreign ministers.

Underscoring a bipartisan flavor and the apparent importance the United States places on the gathering, those accompanying Kissinger included the two highest-ranking Democrats in Congress — House Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma and Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana.

Also along: Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., and Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., both chairmen of subcommittees on hemispheric affairs; and Rep. William Mailliard, R-Calif., nominated to be the new U.S. ambassador to the Organization of American States.

The foreign ministers of all the Latin nations except Cuba have been in Mexico City — at the so-called "Conference of Tlatelolco" — since Monday, girding for the meeting with Kissinger and trying to forge a common front to achieve a "new dialogue" between the U.S. and their nations.

Among the scheduled topics: the Panama Canal and the American role there; the energy crisis and how it affects both developed and developing countries; and the "economic coercion" some Latin governments have accused the U.S. of using.

Henry Kissinger

On the eve of Kissinger's departure, President Nixon announced an agreement with Peru on compensation for U.S. firms nationalized by the Lima Government since 1968, and that could set a pattern for resolving the issue of nationalization in other Latin countries.

After Mexico City, Kissinger will head for the Middle East and an effort to settle the Israel-Syria tangle.

Navy man says he stole for Pentagon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Navy Yeoman Charles F. Radford testified Wednesday he stole secret White House documents on the Vietnam peace talks and other matters at the request of two Pentagon admirals as soon as he started White House clerk duty in 1970.

Radford's testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee implied the Joint Chiefs of Staff were kept in the dark about some aspects of Vietnam diplomacy, and it seemed to contradict Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's assessments of the scope and nature of the alleged "Pentagon spy ring."

Radford said the late Adm. Rembrandt Robinson, his first boss as a Pentagon liaison clerk at the National Security Council, taught him from the outset how to steal information the Joint Chiefs wanted and cautioned him "not to take any chances" of getting caught.

Robinson was killed in a helicopter crash in Vietnam but Radford said his successor at the White House, Adm. Robert O. Welander, continued to pass his information to the office of Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Moorer and Kissinger have both dismissed Radford's pilfering as the independent work of an overzealous enlisted man — "trying to get brownie points," in Kissinger's phrase — that produced only trivia.

Radford said his spy work included funneling the secret papers of Kissinger and Gen. Alexander Haig back to the Pentagon after working for them as a stenographer on at least four trips to Vietnam, China and other Far East areas.

Radford said the downfall of the spy ring began Dec. 13, 1971, when columnist Jack Anderson published an article saying Kissinger had instructed the National Security Council Nixon wanted U.S. policy to "tilt toward Pakistan" in the Indo-Pakistani war.

Investigators subsequently decided that information came from Welander's office, which was abruptly closed. Welander and Radford were transferred.

But Radford denied he gave any information to anyone other than his military superiors, charging that security was extremely lax both at the White House and the Pentagon and there were at least seven other persons who could have fed the material to Anderson.

Welander is to testify today. Radford left the hearing room with a police escort, got into a Navy car and rode away without saying a word.

Impeachment — 'broad view' by Democrats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democrats on the House Judiciary Committee said Wednesday the impeachment inquiry staff has concluded that President Nixon can be impeached for noncriminal offenses and is ready to ask the White House for evidence.

Several Committee Democrats who attended a closed meeting with John M. Doar, special counsel for the inquiry, said he told them the staff had adopted a "broad view" of impeachment.

A committee source told UPI earlier this week that the broad view meant Nixon could be impeached for instructions to subordinates to commit illegal acts and abuse of the power of the presidency, as well as indictable offenses.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., told newsmen the report, to be released today, was "solidly approved by the staff," an indication it probably would be acceptable to most committee members. He emphasized, however, there would be no committee vote on a definition of impeachable offenses.

Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-Calif., said he interpreted Doar's explanation as meaning the conclusion was so broad that not even the impoundment of appropriated funds could be excluded from the definition.

Nixon asks to continue controls on health care

From Herald news services

President Nixon said Wednesday he will ask Congress to continue wage-price controls on doctors, hospitals and other providers of health care until enactment of his comprehensive health program.

The Economic Stabilization Program authority expires April 30, but Nixon, in a special health message to Congress, said that he would submit legislation to continue controls on the health care industry.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Casper W. Weinberger, who met for 25 minutes with Nixon Wednesday, said he reiterated his interest in passage of national health insurance legislation this year. Aside from energy, this is "clearly the highest priority in the domestic field," Weinberger said.

The requested legislation would specify that controls remain in effect until passage of the administration proposal and require that there be no period during which controls are not in effect.

His message made no mention of intended spending on the major initiatives. But HEW officials said for the first time at a White House briefing that the program would cover about 80 per cent of personal health costs.

Top labor leaders have assailed Nixon's health insurance legislation as being designed to protect the profits of doctors and insurance companies rather than the health of the American people.

The AFL-CIO Executive Council released an analysis of the administration proposal and urged the House Ways and Means Committee to approve instead the Griffiths-Kennedy bill that would provide health insurance through a Social Security-type bill.

The AFL-CIO 10-page analysis said the administration plan for utilizing private insurers would provide benefits only after the insured persons had paid substantial out-of-pocket expenses.

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace will announce tomorrow that he's seeking a record third term — a move generally seen as setting the stage for his fourth bid for the presidency. While Wallace will be making his announcement in the House chamber in Montgomery — launching his first active campaign since he was paralyzed in an assassination attempt in 1972 — backers from 22 states will be meeting in Houston to plan a 1976 presidential run.

The first Republican to serve as governor of Virginia this century — Linwood Holton — was named by President Nixon Wednesday as assistant secretary of state for congressional relations, ending reports that he would get a top post after leaving office Jan. 12. An early foe of Holton — Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio — said he now had no objections, but warned Holton the job "can boil down to being kind of an errand boy for Congress."

Fate giveth, the government taketh away: when Sgt. Donald Wayne Morrison led a squad exploring caves in South Vietnam's Central Highlands in 1968, he thought he made the find of a lifetime. Unearthed in one of the caves: ammunition cans stuffed with 500,000 South Vietnamese piastres and $150,000 in U.S. $50 bills. He used to keep it as sort of a "finder's keepers" common law right. Not so, said U.S. claims court in Washington, ruling it belonged to the U.S. government. Which left Sgt. Morrison wondering who needed it more.

Noting that public confidence in Congress is at its lowest point in decades, Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, suggested the image might be bolstered by televising sessions. The idea is not expected to take hold, as several Congressmen quickly pointed out that might only make things worse.

A member of the Indiana State University faculty for 12 years — Max Lynch — got a pink slip for reading the Bible in the classroom, and ignoring orders to desist. He may take his case all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, but says, "Right now I'm just sort of waiting for the Lord to tell me what to do next."

The high court gave great solace Wednesday to Mollie Lewis, convicted in New Orleans four years ago for swearing at a police officer. The court said you can't make laws like that, and cleared Mollie's record.

The matriarch of the Kennedy clan — 83-year-old Rose Kennedy — is in a West Palm Beach, Fla., hospital for tests after suffering "persistent headaches."

Show biz: for the fourth week in a row, comedian Redd Foxx — reporting illness — failed to report to the "Sanford and Son" set. Three scripts already have been revised to exclude him, and the series itself is now in question. . . . opera diva Maria Callas, knocked out of her much-publicized New York comeback by a sore throat Sunday, will try again in Toronto tonight.

Some people have all the luck: Mr. and Mrs. Ted Allen of Newport, Ore., went beachcombing recently for Japanese floats, which occasionally wash up on Western shores. They found a 50-gallon drum full of gasoline.

The right to die: Part 4

Does Illinois need a law to allow death with dignity?

In Illinois the law gives us many things, but not the right to pick the moment of our own death. In other states there are such laws and in this concluding part of a series the legal implications of a prearranged death are discussed by Herald staff writer Karen Blecha.

by KAREN BLECHA

In Illinois the right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness is protected by law. The right to die is not.

There are no statutes giving an individual the legal power to choose ahead of time what kind of medical treatment he wants or does not want when he is dying. Efforts to pass such laws have been thwarted.

A "right to die with dignity" bill was introduced into the Illinois House of Representatives a year ago. The bill would have allowed persons at least 18 years old to sign a statement indicating they do not want medical treatment that would only prolong life. It would then be illegal for a doctor or a hospital to knowingly ignore the patient's wishes.

To be valid, the document would have to be signed by a doctor attesting the person to be "of sound mind" and witnessed by another person not related and not a physician.

The House Committee on Human Resources recommended passage of the bill, but it never got to the floor for a vote.

"Opponents labeled it the 'euthanasia bill,'" said Rep. Raymond Ewell, D-Chicago, principal sponsor. "They did not make any distinctions between death with dignity and killing people. The amount of mail received opposing the bill was tremendous. It had absolutely no chance of passing."

Ewell proposed the bill after talking with some of his elderly constituents who expressed concern over dying and a horror that their lives might be prolonged by machines.

"The bill provided for a medical will. It says 'I want to slide off as easily as possible,'" Ewell said. "A person ought to be able to make that decision."

Ewell admitted his bill was ahead of its time, but feels the tide is turning towards seeing the bill for what it really is. He plans to re-introduce it, probably next January.

Three Northwest suburban doctors interviewed said they see nothing wrong with legalizing such a document. They have "pulled the plug," as turning off the machines is called, on terminal patients for years. They also administer pain-relieving drugs even though they know it might hasten death. Knowing what the patient wants to be done would make it easier for both the doctor and the family.

BUT THE doctors said they would not want to see any laws dictating when the plug should be pulled. Currently the doctor decides when there is no chance for recovery or rehabilitation. He is the one to give final approval if the family or patient decides the machines should be turned off. He wants to keep it that way.

"Death is such an individual thing and there are so many complicating factors involved that I don't think a standard could be set that would cover every case," said Dr. S., a Northwest suburban internist.

The Rev. Garry Scheuer, pastor at the First Congregational Church of Des Plaines who has counseled dying patients and their families, echoes Dr. S. "It might be impossible to ever legislate the right to die," he said. "Every case is absolutely 100 per cent individual. I see a great danger with the whole consideration of the right to die because you are putting death into the hands of human beings."

BUT REV. SCHEUER and many theologians do believe extraordinary treatment should be stopped if there is no hope for a quality life. Even Pope Pius XII, in 1957, reasoned that when a patient is in a final and hopeless state of unconsciousness, keeping him alive by machine is not morally obligatory, and the machine can be turned off.

The Illinois Right to Life Committee holds a similar view, according to Marcy Sneed, an Arlington Heights resident and vice president of the committee.

"We maintain that to use any extraordinary means to extend life can be excessive cruelty to the patient and sometimes a terrible expense and drain on a family," she said. "The physician has every right to decide when that life is incapable without any extraordinary measures and should allow a person to die in his own and God's own time. But I would not deprive anyone of oxygen, intravenous feeding or surgery because I don't consider that extraordinary."

MRS. SNEED is adamant about a child's right to life, no matter how deformed or retarded. "We don't believe that deformed, retarded or handicapped should be criterion for whether a child should be allowed to live," she said. "The child has a right to life."

Now death is merciful. He calls me hence.

Gently, with friendly soothing of my fears

Of ugly age and feeble impotence

And cruel disintegration of slow years

—Hans Zinsser

The committee, Rev. Scheuer, the Pope and most doctors oppose any direct or deliberate act to take a person's life. That act has been called euthanasia which literally means good death. Some people qualify the term with passive and active. Passive euthanasia would include stopping treatment and turning off life-giving machines. Active euthanasia means the intentional killing of one person by another. But most people and many doctors take euthanasia to mean only one thing: murder.

ONLY TWO doctors in American history have been tried for euthanasia. Both have been acquitted.

Last week a jury found Dr. Vincent Montemarano, a well respected 34-year-old surgeon in New York, innocent of a murder charge. Montemarano had been accused of injecting a lethal dose of potassium chloride into the veins of a dying cancer patient.

The other case involved Dr. Herman Sander, a general practitioner in New Hampshire, who in 1959 allegedly killed a dying cancer patient by pumping air into her veins.

"Euthanasia is the rarest of all crimes to be detected," said Thomas Hanlon, an attorney in Mount Prospect. "I'm not saying it happens, but there may be a huge number of killings of ill people that we are not aware of. There are very few autopsies, only in cases of violent death. If a demise is expected and terminal, it is easy for a physician just to write up a death certificate."

The doctors interviewed said they have had patients beg for death, but they refuse to kill them. One said he simply ignores the patient and leaves the room. Another said he explains to the patient he is doing all he can to make him comfortable and if the patient wishes, he can get another doctor.

"I don't believe in the intentional killing of one person by another," said Dr. S. "I know of no doctor who would support such a policy."

DR. M., another Northwest suburban internist, said he believes doctors do not practice active euthanasia primarily because of the legal ramifications. Society sets the tone of behavior for the doctor, he said, and currently society abhors most mercy-killing.

Someday society may change its mind. People over 65 years old are expected to increase from 18.5 million in 1966 to 24.5 million in 1980, which will be about one out of every eight persons. If doctors can conquer cancer and heart disease, the leading causes of death will be eliminated. More people will live longer and the earth may become overcrowded. Then maybe society will decide a person is no longer useful after a certain age, and euthanasia might legally be put into practice.

DR. S. and Dr. Graham Vance, internist, president of the medical staff at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines and on staff at Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, said they would not be able to give a fatal injection even if society demanded it.

"Euthanasia may come if the public sees people living longer and costing society more and more," Vance said. "But it would take a new generation of doctors to comply with this. I could not do it."

Dr. M. is not opposed to euthanasia, but said he has a preferable alternative.

A house for the dying

"I think society needs a type of hospital where if I were afflicted with a painful, disabling or incurable disease I could go to achieve maximum comfort for my remaining days," he said. "The hospital's purpose would not be to save lives but to relieve pain and suffering, both physical and emotional."

No new leads in $15,000 bank robbery

Police are without new leads in Tuesday's $15,000 predawn robbery of the First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility.

Arlington Heights police questioned commuters yesterday morning in an unsuccessful effort to gather new information. A detective said a woman claimed to have made a deposit in the outside depository during the time of the holdup, but saw nothing unusual.

Bank officials set their loss at $15,000 yesterday. Earlier announcements had placed the amount at $100,000 and then $20,000.

An agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said, "We're still kicking it around. We have a lot of ends to tie up. The best thing to say is we're still investigating it."

Police said they hoped a commuter may have witnessed the robbery or seen the waiting getaway car parked next to the facility at Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road. The intersection is passed by thousands of commuters daily on their way to the Chicago and North Western Ry. station.

BRUCE DODDS, executive vice president of the bank, said early police bulletins of $100,000 were erroneous.

"The amount is $15,000. We have never had that amount ($100,000) in there. It is physically impossible to have that much money there," he said.

Dodds blamed the "exaggerated" amount released earlier on the teller's fright. "If you hear the tapes of the call to police, you can hear she is very upset — as well she might be."

The 23-year-old woman teller was surprised by a masked gunman as she opened the building at 6:45 a.m. Tuesday. The gunman forced her to open the safe and then fled after taking her out of the building and locking her keys inside.

It is believed the gunman and an accomplice fled to the Northwest Tollway in a dark late model sedan without attracting notice.

KIRLEAN PHOTOGRAPHS of psychic energy were shown by Michael Zaeske, executive director of the Ancient Astronauts Society in a talk yesterday at Adlai Stevenson High School. Phenomena such as the photos, taken through a process called "thoughtography," and unexplainable happenings are studied by the society. Zaeske's talk is part of a series of activities at the school in a program called "Focus on Phenomena."

Incorporation petition filed by Prospect Heights

by TOM VON MALDER

A new petition calling for a vote on Prospect Heights incorporation is set for a March 13 hearing in Cook County Circuit Court. Several boundary changes were made, including the deletion of a section of the Rob Roy Golf Course.

The incorporation-sponsoring Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. had included a strip along the west and north edges of the golf course in its previous incorporation petitions.

The idea was to permit Prospect Heights to exert some control over the future of the golf course. At the last court hearing, however, the owners of the golf course (the McDonald Family Trust), the contract purchasers of the property (Kenroy Inc. of Skokie) and neighboring Village of Mount Prospect all had objected to incorporation because of the golf course.

The golf course, on the north side of Euclid Avenue east of Wheeling Road, is currently the subject of a rezoning and annexation petition before the Village of Mount Prospect. Kenroy wants to build 4,501 apartments on the site.

THERE WERE four other boundary changes made by the PHIA. These were:

- Deletion of Patriot Park, west of Schoenbeck Road and south of Palatine Road, as it has already been annexed to Arlington Heights.

- Deletion of the so-called Chesny property, north of Willow Road and east of Waterman Avenue, which is currently the subject of an annexation petition before the Village of Arlington Heights. With guarantees that the property will be developed as single-family homes rather than the originally proposed apartments, the PHIA has no further interest in the property.

- Deletion of the E. F. Smetana residence, 201 S. Wolf Rd. Smetana appeared in court as an objector to his house's inclusion in the Prospect Heights plans. Since then he has had his property annexed to the Village of Wheeling.

- Addition of two Village Pump gas stations, at Hintz and Elmhurst roads and at Wolf and Palatine roads, at the owners' request.

Property west of Schoenbeck Road and south of Hintz Road, owned by six men including Don Schmitt of Schmitt's Nursery, will still be included in the incorporation proposal, despite the owners' objections. Also still included is All-gauer's Fireside Restaurant, 2555 N. Milwaukee Ave., which also had objected.

BOTH Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights officials yesterday indicated their communities will continue to oppose Prospect Heights incorporation, despite the boundary changes.

Mount Prospect Village Trustee Richard Hendricks said his village's objections were based on two factors, only one of which was the Rob Roy Golf Course. "The one remaining item we would object to would be the inclusion of a part of Pal-Waukee Airport," Hendricks said.

The matter will probably be discussed at the March 5 village board meeting, Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert said. "The (village) board hasn't indicated any other course (except to continue to object). We haven't talked about the changes."

Teichert did think the PHIA move was a step in the right direction. "I'm glad," he said. "At least they're making an effort to get away from the controversial issues."

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Village Pres. Jack Walsh said the two changes affecting Arlington Heights do not touch on his community's basic objection to incorporation. "We're concerned about a straight-line border," he said.

Arlington Heights officials have long objected to Prospect Heights' boundaries extending to the west side of Waterman Avenue.

Objectors have until March 8, five days before the hearing, to file objections in the circuit court. The incorporation petition was filed Feb. 8 with 337 signatures, well above the required amount.

Stavros plea denied before both Judge Abraham Lincoln Marovitz and Judge Philip Toner.

Also indicted with Stavros were Nicholas Phillips, a Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals employee and Stavros' cousin; William Bieber, Wheeling director of building and zoning; Michael Valenza, former Wheeling trustee and chairman of the environmental commission; William Hart, former Wheeling trustee, and Ira Colitz, a county zoning board member who resigned following the indictments.

All six have pleaded innocent to the charges. The indictments followed a year-long investigation into alleged shakedowns in Wheeling.

School news notes

1,281 books to be exchanged

Students at Frost School in Mount Prospect have already contributed 1,281 books to trade with classmates in an all-school book exchange set up recently by the student council.

The children are bringing in books they no longer want to exchange with other students. Students in the class which bring in the highest number of books each week earn the right to be first in their selection.

Career awareness session

Sixth graders at Field School in Wheeling participate in a career awareness session each Wednesday afternoon, designed to acquaint them with many different kinds of professions.

Several professionals have visited the class to talk about their jobs with the students. Among them have been a florist, mortician, architect, artist, pilot and author.

In the near future, the children are scheduled to hear from a nurse, dental hygienist, gymnast and lawyer.

Edible art project

Third grade students at Sandburg School in Wheeling recently enjoyed participating in an edible art project.

The children constructed pioneer log cabins using pretzel sticks for logs. According to third grade teacher, Ann Crowe, the cabins required a great deal of labor because the building material was so tempting.

The cabins are on display in the school's learning center.

Parks may buy Omni-House bus

The Wheeling Park District tonight will review an agreement to purchase the bus now owned by Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau.

For several months, the park district has been talking of purchasing the bus for a minimal fee and then sharing the vehicle with Omni-House on a pre-arranged schedule.

The agreement originally proposed by Omni-House was not accepted by the park district since it did not give special priority to park use. Park Supt. Dave Phillips will update the board on the status of the bus purchase.

The park board also will review its plans to associate with the Northwest Special Recreation Assn., a cooperative group of area park districts formed to provide recreation for the handicapped.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the Heritage Park recreation building, 222 S. Wolf Rd.

Disadvantages 'outweigh benefits'

Abandon landfill plans, panel urges

by JOE FRANZ
A special committee in Buffalo Grove has recommended the village drop the idea of annexing a sanitary landfill proposed for unincorporated Lake County.

The landfill has been proposed by Browning-Ferris Industries Inc. for a 98-acre site northeast of Weiland and Busch roads. The firm wishes to use the area as a place to dispose of garbage for a 10-year period.

The committee's report to the village board states that it believes the benefits that would be derived from the landfill are outweighed by the disadvantages.

The vote on the landfill proposal was 4-3. Thomas Dame, chairman of the Environmental Control Commission, David Saidel and Donald Schindler, of the Board of Health and Patrick Shields, a member of the plan commission voted to recommend rejection of the proposal.

THOSE RECOMMENDING approval of the landfill were Park Board Pres. Eugene Muryn, Village Administrative Assistant William Balling and John Walker, an environmental engineer. Trustee Clarice Rech, chairman of the special committee, did not vote.

Those voting against the proposal said a sanitary landfill was not the "highest and best use" of the property. If the land is put to its best use, those members said the village will receive more tax revenue than with the landfill.

According to those opposing it, the location of the landfill could inhibit the future growth of the village. Since there has been no land use plan established for the ultimate use of the property, the members said there is no way of telling if the landfill is the most beneficial use.

The members also said the landfill could have an adverse effect on residents in nearby Horatio Gardens. The report states the landfill could affect the water supply in the area.

Residents in Horatio Gardens and the Pekara subdivision have raised objections to the Browning-Ferris proposal. The residents said they fear heavy trucks going to and from the landfill will damage the roads.

BROWNING-FERRIS officials, however, have said it will put up a bond to cover any damages its trucks will do to the roads.

Another reason given for rejecting the project, the members said, is road access to the site is currently inadequate. The present road system will not be expanded for at least two years.

Finally, those opposing it state in the report, "The village may not be able to exert the control necessary to inspect, monitor and prevent nuisances involved with a sanitary landfill operation. The village staff at the present time is inadequate to do the surveillance necessary to insure a good operation."

Those in favor of the landfill said even if the village rejects the proposal it would be possible to operate it in Lincolnshire or under county zoning as long as a permit from the Environmental Protection Agency is obtained. Thus, the village should annex the property and exercise maximum control over it, those members said.

Those members said the EPA has adequate standards and regulations to prevent the area from becoming a health hazard or public nuisance.

IF THE LANDFILL is rejected by the village, members favoring it said increased garbage rates could result because scavengers would have to go farther to dump refuse.

The members also said the landfill would not be a detriment to village growth. As a result of the landfill, they said the residents of Horatio Gardens would ultimately get a park site at no cost to them. The owners of the property have said they will donate land for use as a park after the landfill is closed.

Members favoring the landfill said before the proposal is accepted, they would recommend a number of measures be taken to assure it is operated properly.

Mrs. Rech said that before the village board makes a decision on the landfill, the question concerning contiguity between the property and the rest of the village must be resolved.

The landowner has proposed connecting the landfill with the village by annexing 3,000 feet of the Soo Line tracks. Railroad officials, however, have said they are not sure if they will allow the tracks to be annexed.

If the railroad refuses to allow the annexation, the work of the committee might have been for nothing, Mrs. Rech said.

The village board will consider the committee's recommendation Monday night at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Few raise cattle in suburbs

4-H members pursue interests outside farming

by BETTY LEE

Local 4-H clubs are steering away from the traditional agricultural projects and are undertaking those that are more in tune with suburban living.

In the Northwest suburbs where raising cattle, growing vegetables, canning food and other farm activities are nearly impossible, the club's members are devoting time to nature studies, public speaking, arts and crafts, sewing and other activities.

"The clubs are setting programs that are not strictly agricultural," said Betty Lash, a community worker for the North Cook County 4-H Cooperative Extension in Arlington Heights. The extension service is a University of Illinois program.

She added that the main purpose of 4-H clubs remains the same despite the different activities... to teach boys and girls to be better citizens, to be leaders in the community and to be a better, all-around person.

CHILDREN LEARN to adapt to suburban living by the activities that are available to them. Currently there is a film series on nutrition to teach club members the importance of vitamins and nutrients in their daily meals.

For younger children whose interest may not hold well in reading textbooks, the extension service offers comic book learning geared to those in third to sixth grades.

From building model airplanes to collecting newspapers for recycling, the club members decide on their own what projects to pursue. Currently there are nine clubs in Arlington Heights, led by parents who are knowledgeable in particular activities.

A new member will be screened to the appropriate club even though most clubs carry varied projects.

"WE PLACE THE child in appropriate clubs and sometimes we get parents to start a new one and lead it," Mrs. Lash said. Children who wish to join should call the Farm Bureau Building at 201 N. Dunton at CL 3-6460.

Older children who have been in 4-H clubs can participate in the junior leadership program, said Mrs. Lash. These children can volunteer to help younger members in special meetings and workshops.

Each summer the 4-H members center activities around the 4-H state fair. More ambitious members also enter contests in the Illinois State fair. Last summer area 4-H clubs participated in an exhibition at the Future of America Fair held at the Arlington Race Track.

The University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Service will move this fall to a new two-story building still in construction on the west side of Hicks Road, just north of Euclid Avenue in Rolling Meadows. The extension service will share the building with the Cook County Farm Bureau.

The Stevenson basketball squads will face the Lake Zurich teams the same evening. The sophomores will meet at 6:45 p.m. and the varsity game will begin about 8 p.m.

Profits from the dinner will be used for extended band trips and new equipment, according to Dave Habley, band director. Dinner chairman is Gloria Helke, secretary of the Stevenson Band Parents Organization.

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1.25 for children under 12 and may be purchased from band members at the door.

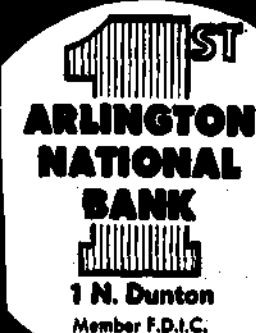

The dinner menu includes spaghetti and meat sauce, Italian bread, salad and a beverage. A bake sale will also be conducted during the dinner.

HAPPY GUARDSMEN show off their new horns as Russ Larson, right, Schaumburg Chamber of Commerce president, and Dick Lowthorp, Guardsmen director, share the joy. The drum and bugle corps is made up of 150 youths from the Northwest suburbs and Chicago. It competes across the U.S. and Canada.

The Guardsmen march on...

In the face of adversity... The Guardsmen Drum and Bugle Corps keeps marching on.

When the Harper College fieldhouse went up in flames last summer the Guardsmen lost trophies collected over its 12-year history and $5,000 in equipment.

And, they made their way to competition in New Orleans last August despite 42 breakdowns by the three old buses maintained by parent-members.

When the group lost its director in September, all the horns used by the Guardsmen went with him, but this didn't stop them either.

Five months later, $10,000 worth of new horns have arrived and the group is continuing to strive for a national championship in time for our country's 200th anniversary celebration in 1976.

DURING THEIR history, the Guardsmen have traveled to six states and to Canada and have won about $150,000 in prize money and trophies.

The group, drawing membership from the Northwest suburbs and Chicago, has no big sponsors. It draws some support from local VFW and American Legion posts and the Schaumburg Chamber of Commerce. Money for most of the Guardsmen's expenses is raised through parade participation, trophies won and its parent booster club.

Despite fund-raising efforts, money for the new horns had to be borrowed and the marching musicians are still transported on the "three old buses" maintained by fathers and friends.

The determination of the Guardsmen members was demonstrated by their participation in the Park Ridge Christmas parade where a mix of borrowed horns was used.

"They all showed up and looked like what they are, a first class drum corps," said Dick Lowthorp, director.

"What we need now is strong financial backing," he added, emphasizing, "These kids have the talent to become national champions" if the money comes forward to help.

"WHAT WE are trying to build is a youth program," said Ray Hardy, a Schaumburg Chamber of Commerce member and Guardsman parent.

"Our objective is to bring kids together from all areas, and to give them an interest that teaches good sportsmanship, citizenship and an opportunity to travel."

The Guardsmen now have 100 members in its "A" corps for 14-to 21-year-olds and a 50-member cadet corps for 8 to 13 years olds.

No musical background is needed for new members. The corps provide uniforms and instruction. For information, call 893-1000.

Company works harder, and it pays off

by LEROY POPE

NEW YORK — Sometimes a small company can succeed where a big company has failed because it is willing to turn the clock back to an earlier era and work harder.

W. & G. Instruments Inc., of East Hanover, N.J., is an example. The firm was founded in 1966 to market a line of sophisticated telecommunications instruments made by a German firm, Wandell & Goltermann.

International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. had been handling the German line for some years but had pushed sales up only to $400,000 a year and never had succeeded in tapping the biggest potential American customer, the Bell Telephone System. ITT's failure with the line surprised the Germans because telecommunications was the original business of the huge conglomerate.

BREWSTER JAMESON, a Harvard graduate, and Donald E. Foreman, educated at Purdue and Bradley, who were in ITT's instrument division, thought they knew the reasons for the failure. They resigned, formed W. & G. Instruments and took over the Wandell &

Business today

Goltermann line. In the first year they pushed sales to $1 million.

They then went after the Bell System's business. At that time, Bell made instruments of the type W. & G. wanted to sell. Only on rare occasions would they turn to an outside supplier and then only to American firms.

Towards the end of their first year Jameson and Foreman persuaded Bell to use a Wandell & Goltermann test set in Bell's new 3,000-channel L4 carrier system. Since then Bell has bought hundreds of these German-made sets.

"We realized from the start that if we were going to sell this line we would have to turn the clock back and adopt a marketing and servicing policy the mullibillion-dollar conglomerates say they no longer can afford," says Jameson.

JAMESON SAID he and Foreman decided they would have to "go for broke" and "never count today's costs." Jameson says that was the philosophy of American business firms years ago but seldom applied today. "We decided we would always stand ready to spend our last cent in support of what we sold if that was necessary," Jameson said.

That meant guaranteeing virtually unlimited service on the German-made equipment, carrying a big inventory of parts and being ready with the engineers and technicians to go wherever necessary for service on instant notice. It also meant providing backup equipment to the customer without charge when failures occurred. It entailed the constant risk of expenditures heavy enough to throw the young company into insolvency. It also meant long hours of hard work.

For example, W. & G. discovered a fault in the tuning oscillators of the L4 test sets that caused long-term drift. The customers didn't know about it. Between them, W. & G. and the German firm spent half a million dollars to retrofit the oscillators and solve the problem.

THIS POLICY paid off. W. & G.'s sales grew steadily and changes in the telecommunications industry produced new markets. It began to supply instruments to such firms as General Electric, MCI, Western Union, Raytheon, Stromberg Carson, Collins Radio, Lenkardt and ITT. Now it is building a plant at Livingston, N.J., and has obtained a second sophisticated foreign product line from Trend Communications, Ltd. of Britain which makes test equipment for high-speed teletype and data communications machines.

'Sharpest dip since '70'

Sales, profits outlook bleak, businessmen's survey shows

Optimism about sales and profits in the second quarter of 1974 took the steepest drop since the start of 1970, according to some 1,500 businessmen participating in Dun & Bradstreet's latest Survey of Businessmen's Expectations.

The interviews of executives in manufacturing, wholesaling and retailing were conducted between Jan. 14 and Jan. 25, when uncertainties abounded about the length of the oil embargo, the actual amount of the shortfall, the possibility of government controls and other factors.

Paced by the pessimism of retailers, the D&B Sales Optimism Index and the Profits Optimism Index (the percentage of businessmen expecting increases minus the percentage expecting decreases) sank to the lowest levels in any quarter in three years.

THE SALES OPTIMISM Index of retailers plunged to 38 from 66, while that of all concerns went to 57 from 72. The Profits Optimism Index of retailers fell to 36 from 50, while that of all concerns fell to 47 from 59. The last previous survey was made in October, 1973, prior to the imposition of the oil embargo.

While the energy crisis was a major factor in dimming optimism about second quarter prospects, 78 per cent of the businessmen surveyed did not feel it would affect their volume for the year as a whole.

This percentage ran as high as 83 per cent for manufacturers of non-durable goods, but was only 78 per cent — the lowest — for wholesalers. Only 15 per cent overall expected the energy crisis will cut their annual results. The average reduction was projected at 9 per cent.

Some 6 per cent of businessmen surveyed anticipated increased volume due to the energy crisis. Some neighborhood retail operations said they expected a boon, while manufacturers of sporting goods and hobby supplies were optimistic.

Questioned about what aspect of the energy crisis would have the greatest impact on their businesses, the interviewees most frequently cited materials shortages. Transportation stood second on this list, except among retailers, where it was first.

RETAILERS SAID they feared a two-edged cut from gasoline shortages — delay in delivering merchandise for their shelves, and inability of customers to travel to their stores. About one-fifth of retailers believed they would suffer most from the energy crisis by losing customers. Retailers in all lines cited increased unemployment, layoffs in the auto and aircraft industries, shortened hours and the decline in consumer confidence.

For manufacturers, difficulties in transporting raw materials to plants and transporting finished products from plants were mentioned, along with difficulties of employees driving to their jobs. Wholesalers said they expected the travel of their salesmen will be severely restricted.

The materials mentioned most often as being in short supply were plastics, petrochemicals, certain manmade fabrics and yarns, paper and metals.

The pinch in plastics is expected to be felt by a wide range of industries all the way from the makers of baseballs, stereo tapes, packaging materials, shoes to thermos bottles.

The shortage of petrochemicals will affect paint manufacturers and fertilizer producers, while for apparel manufacturers interest centers on polyester-cotton blends.

Concerned about paper shortages were lithographers, book publishers and manufacturers of envelopes and business forms. Tight supplies of steel were noted by durable goods manufacturers of metal stamping products, heat exchangers, surgical equipment, bearings, pulleys and farm machinery.

Neil Hartigan to address state Chamber parley

More than 400 business representatives from throughout the Chicago area are expected today to attend an Illinois State Chamber of Commerce conference on state and federal laws. The session at the O'Hare Inn, Des Plaines, is entitled, compliance or confusion — laws vital to Illinois employers.

Gov. Neil Hartigan will address the luncheon session. Panelists will update employers in these areas of interest: environmental protection and energy, labor relations; equal employment opportunity, and general government regulations.

We have some news to share with our neighbors.

Kemper Insurance has grown a lot since we moved here to Long Grove two years ago. In fact, we've outgrown our name.

Insurance alone simply doesn't fully describe us anymore. Because, in addition to writing all types of insurance, we're in reinsurance, investment advisory services, banking, consumer finance, real estate and safety consulting.

So now we've changed our name to the Kemper Insurance and Financial Companies. And the publicly-held corporation which is a part of these companies is no longer Kemperco. Now it's Kemper Corporation.

We also have a new corporate symbol and a new look to our advertising; all designed to reflect our spirit of service and growth.

Many of you have helped us grow. Even more of you will be helped by our growth. It will helpfully mean more jobs for people in this community. More business for local stores and services.

Harper board needs to learn manners

The Harper College board last week proved once again that it is incapable of doing the gracious thing when confronted with any campus group that is not entirely predictable.

The episode, which occurred at the Harper board meeting and revolved around the role of the new student member of the board, is a good example of why relations are becoming increasingly strained among factions on the campus.

Last year the faculty senate asked for a non-voting seat on the Harper board and ended up hearing a lot of rhetoric from board members about how good communication was between the board and faculty. A faculty member sensibly pointed out at the time that "communication can't be any good if one side in the communication says it isn't." However, the board persisted in the position that it could unilaterally declare the presence of good communication.

NOW THE BOARD is faced by Gerald McGlothlin, a sophomore student who is a non-voting member of the board by act of the legislature. They can't get rid of him, but in an almost farcical chain of events last week they proved that they have no idea how to treat him.

To begin with, we should note that McGlothlin, inexperienced as he is in "boardmanship," has about as much finesse as the proverbial bull in a china shop. But he appears to be an intelligent person and he certainly is a hard worker, so mature board members could probably give him the help and encouragement he needs to become effective.

But so far, the Harper board (or at least its majority) shows little inclination to do that. The first thing they did last Thursday, after McGlothlin presented them with piles of material justifying a change in the college calendar so the first semester would end before Christmas, was to defeat a motion to reconsider the calendar by a tie vote.

Education today

by Wandalyn Rice

The motion to reconsider would essentially have resulted in referring the whole question to the college administration for study, with a report due back in March. Once the board defeated the motion, they referred the question to the administration.

YES, I KNOW that sounds strange, but somehow, according to board member Ross Miller, passing a motion asking the administration to study the calendar would mean the board was not using the proper channels to bring up the question. "People who go through channels are heard in this college," Miller said.

He didn't explain why simply referring the question to the administration without a vote was staying within channels while referring the issue by vote was not. But by this time McGlothlin was looking irritated. Doubtless he thought the vote was defeated simply because he had suggested it.

The next problem the board had to face was the issue of whether McGlothlin would be allowed to make and second motions on the board and whether he would be allowed to attend closed sessions. By law, he cannot vote and his presence cannot be counted as part of a quorum, but those are the only limits that are spelled out.

McGLOTHLIN is taking the position that he has all rights of board members, including the right to make motions, except those rights specifically denied him by law. That is a position being taken by student members of college boards around the state.

The board, however, had a legal opinion that said McGlothlin should not be allowed to make and second motions because that might throw the legality of the board's actions into question. So, on that issue the board really had little choice — they can't violate that legal opinion until and unless the case is reversed in court.

However, on the question of whether McGlothlin could attend closed sessions (which can be held to discuss personnel, land purchase and a few other things) the board had more leeway. So they botched it.

Board member Milton Hansen made a motion that the board go on record saying McGlothlin would be allowed to attend all closed sessions. Board Pres. Jessalyn Nicklas said that wasn't necessary because McGlothlin had never been denied access to closed meetings.

BOARD MEMBER Ray Blakeman, attending his first regular meeting since he was appointed to the Harper board in January, said he was concerned about having McGlothlin in the closed sessions and added, "I think I would have to think very seriously about my position on this board if there is no forum for free-wheeling discussions where board members can express themselves without fear of something becoming a public issue before it is ready."

(Personal note to Mr. Blakeman: I suggest you read Illinois Revised Statutes, Chapter 22, Sections 41-44, commonly called the Illinois Open Meeting Law. Briefly, under that law "free-wheeling" discussions outside of the public view are prohibited.)

The board finally adopted the motion that McGlothlin be admitted to closed sessions. The vote was 4-2, with Mrs. Nicklas and Blakeman voting no and Miller abstaining.

After the meeting was over, it was clear that the issue had frayed the nerves of some board members.

THE UNANSWERED question coming from the whole incident is — why? Wouldn't it have been much easier to act graciously toward the student board member, unanimously adopt the resolution admitting him to closed sessions (since, as Mrs. Nicklas said, he has already been attending them) and vote to agree to review the calendar?

What possible threat could those actions have created toward the orderly operation of the college? I don't know, but it was clear during the discussion that some board members, particularly Mrs. Nicklas and Russ Miller, thought they saw some kind of threat.

Everyone knows that, for public officials the appearance of impropriety can be as damaging as actual impropriety. Perhaps the Harper board should realize the appearance of unresponsiveness can also be damaging.

Viator to participate in research project

St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights has been selected to participate in a year-long research project on new teaching techniques by the University of Massachusetts.

The project, funded by a $400,000 grant from the federal Office of Health, Education and Welfare, will include studies of classrooms using new techniques, materials and curriculums, and evaluating faculty.

Ken Peck and Brother Donald Houde, associate principal of curriculum development, are serving as coordinators of the project.

A University of Massachusetts survey team visited the school to assist St. Viator personnel. The school recently held a faculty workshop on the project.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Sobel made only correct play

When Helen Sobel, probably the greatest woman bridge player, first played at the Cavendish Club she was young, very attractive and couldn't have looked less like a bridge player.

Playing at four spades she drew trumps; laid down the ace of clubs to drop East's king and proceeded to wind up losing two clubs and one heart.

Her partner, a self-styled expert, said, "You played the clubs wrong, but you were lucky."

About a month later she made a similar successful play and drew the remark, "You'll never learn, will you?"

Helen's play was not only correct it was the only correct one. She needed two club tricks and the play of the ace insured this result against adverse distribution.

She would be sure of two club tricks against 3-2 break. It was the 4-1 breaks that might bother her.

Suppose that an honor failed to drop. She would continue by leading toward dummy's jack. If West held the king and queen he could only score two tricks.

Suppose East held them. West would show out. The jack would force one of the top honors. Later on the third club would be led from dummy and Helen's 10 would become a winner.

The Carradine family: a close, talented group

HOLLYWOOD — The Carradine family of Hollywood held a reunion this week marking only the second time in its history that all six members of the clan had ever been under the same roof.

The occasion was the 68th birthday of patriarch John Carradine, the saturnine character actor who has played in a hundred movies.

Paying him homage were his five sons, Bruce, David, Keith, Christopher and Robert. Bruce and David are his sons by wife No. 1, Ardanelle. The other three are by his second wife, Sonia. Both ex-mates live near San Francisco.

DAVID IS the star of "Kung Fu." Robert is the co-star of the new television series, "The Cowboys."

Keith and Bruce are actors too. Only Chris is innocent. He is an aspiring architect. But the brothers are all close companions, making no distinctions between full-brother and half-brother.

They affectionately greet one another with kisses on the cheek and subdued good cheer. The fact that their father is working in an episode of "The Cowboys" at Warner Bros. gave them a good excuse to get together.

"I didn't encourage any of the boys to be actors," Papa John said. "But I didn't discourage them either. When they asked me for advice, I said, 'Don't!' My advice was to get a good liberal arts education and play as much Shakespeare as possible."

"Both David and Bruce played a lot of Shakespeare. And David and Keith are very close although they were not raised together. David got Keith an agent and Keith went along when David tried out for a part in "Hair." Keith got the role and played in the show for a year in New York.

"WE'RE A CLOSE family, although we never seem to get together all at the same time. David has had Keith and Robert and me in his 'Kung Fu' series."

"David's ambition in life is to have us all appear in the same movie together. And I just think that boy will find a way to do it."

Carradine was interrupted by the arrival of his son Robert, youngest of the clan. There was much hugging and kissing all around.

David's girl friend, Barbara Hershey — the actress who changed her name to Seagull — also arrived. It was her birthday, too. She carried her 16-month-old son, Free. David is the father.

A birthday cake was brought into the private dining room of the Warner Bros. commissary where the party was being held and they all fell to with a will. Even young Free got a taste.

ALASKA PIPELINE will cross the Yukon River on suspension bridge to be erected in the foreground. Oil industry representatives complain that delays in its construction aggravate fuel shortages. (EPA Document)

The environment

Oil reps talk about energy and ecology

by LEA TONKIN

"Remember when sex was dirty and the air was clean?" Now we're adjusting to a new way of looking at things, said the oilmen who sponsored an Illinois Petroleum Council seminar in Chicago this week.

The confab was called to quash the "considerable misinformation" we're hearing about energy shortages. Of course, the environmental effects on petroleum came up for discussion. M. R. Thomasson, manager of forecasting and corporate planning for Shell Oil Co. out of Houston, Tex., said we're losing oil every day because of the hangups caused by environmentalists in the construction of the Alaska pipeline. And there's the problem of delays in granting offshore leases, he added.

The need to strike a balance between energy and environmental needs also was emphasized by petroleum expert W. W. Wally Wilson of the Continental Bank, Chicago. Opposition to superports and the shutdown of offshore drilling on the West Coast are environmental "constraints" cited by Wilson.

What the oilmen went to considerable trouble to point out is that we're hooked on energy to support our high standard of living, and that we'd better do everything we can to provide for an increased energy supply.

Among measures the government could take to ease the situation, says Shell, are:

- Assist in overcoming site and environmental obstacles in the development of nuclear energy.
- Permit strip mining, given adequate safeguards of coal.
- Reduce product import requirements by facilitating, through land-use policies, the siting and construction of new refineries and power plants.

Council to meet Feb. 28

The Northwest Environmental Council will meet at 8 p.m. Feb. 28 in the Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd. The program, "Energy — Problem or Crisis?" will be presented by three speakers. They are George Travers, environmental information director for Commonwealth Edison Co.; George Meier, manager of marketing development and planning for Universal Oil Products; and David Hoglund, special program adviser for energy environment, which is part of the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Invitations have been sent to environmental commissions and committees throughout the northwest area.

Lakeshore management parley

Responsibility for lakeshore management will be the subject of the first public meeting of the Illinois House Committee on Lake Michigan Saturday. The session will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the board room of the Metropolitan Sanitary District quarters, 100 E. Erie, Chicago.

The causes and effects of lakeshore erosion will be studied by the committee. Usage policies for the lake and shoreline will be studied. Recommendations will be passed along to the Illinois House of Representatives.

In addition to committee chairman Rep. Robert Mann, D-Chicago, members include Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, vice chairman; Rep. Harry Leinenweber, R-Joliet, secretary; Richard F. Kelly Jr., D-East Hazel Crest; Rep. William Kempiners, R-Joliet; Rep. Arthur Telser, R-Chicago, and Robert L. Thompson, D-Chicago.

Representatives of the Illinois Department of Conservation, the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission, City of Chicago Department of Development and Planning, Army Corps of Engineers, Illinois Bureau of Water Resource Management and the Lake Michigan Shoreline Advisory Committee of North Shore communities will participate in the initial meeting. Other interested persons are invited to attend.

Seek air-conditioner guides

Gathering dust, stringent regulations for noise levels generated by home air conditioners are being adopted on a piecemeal basis. The Air Conditioning and Heating Institute is calling on the federal Environmental Protection Agency to draw up "as soon as possible" a national sound code for air conditioners.

In a paper presented at the recent institute of Noise Control Engineers in Washington, D.C., ARI said the EPA can do this under the regulatory powers accorded by the Noise Control Act of 1972.

Sound codes have proven effective where they have been adopted, says Herb Gilkey of the institute. But he claims that regulations on the books in some regions are gathering dust, and the lack of consistent standards makes it difficult for manufacturers to make nationally distributed products to satisfy them all.

"If you talk about lowering sound levels by five decibels, it sounds small. But to lower the sound by five decibels means the sound output has to be reduced by 68 per cent," he said. Another problem legislators must take into account, Gilkey adds, is the number of existing air conditioners — estimated at 10 million.

You've tried some whiskeys that growl.
Now try a new kind of whiskey.
Crow Light. It whispers.

Take a sip of Crow Light. We think you'll agree that other whiskeys — even the lightest Scotch, smoothest Canadian or mildest Blend — taste heavier by comparison.

That's fitting. Crow Light is an entirely new and different kind of whiskey created to be the lightest whiskey ever made in America.

Lighter than Scotch, smoother than Canadian

Crow Light is light...lighter than Scotch. (That's true in color, taste and strength). And if you think Canadian is the smoothest whiskey, try Crow Light. "Crow Light is smoother," say the Canadian whiskey drinkers we've talked to.

Real whiskey down to its toes

Crow Light is real, 4-year-old whiskey, all right. But it's distilled and aged a very special way. Result: Lightness no other kind of whiskey can touch. Some whiskeys growl. But Crow Light Whiskey whispers. And you can get a lot farther with a whisper than a growl.

Crow Light.
The whiskey that whispers.

Congress pay increase senseless

We are pleased to see that both congressmen from the Northwest suburbs, U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, and Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, are opposing President Nixon's proposal for a hefty pay boost for members of the House and the Senate.

Both Crane and Young have joined in sponsoring resolutions in the House which would reject the President's request that congressional salaries be raised to $52,726 per year by March, 1976. Congressmen and senators now receive $42,500 yearly, plus liberal expenses.

With the congressional payroll now at $22.7 million per year, it would be swollen by nearly $5 million yearly when the full pay increases had been achieved.

The President called for annual increases of 7.5 per cent, which would boost the total payroll slightly less than $2 million in each of the next three years, resulting in a total increase of 24.2 per cent over the three year period.

Under the law, congressional pay raises recommended by the President go into effect automatically unless vetoed by either the House or the Senate. If this proposal is voted down in either house prior to March 6, congressional salaries would be frozen for another four years.

A companion proposal by the President would also give hefty pay boosts to top officials in the Executive and Judicial branches of the government, including the comptroller general of the General Accounting Office, the public printer, the librarian of Congress, the Capitol architect and their deputies.

In these days of rising unemployment and taxes and ever-waning confidence in government officials, such largess would be a slap in the public's face.

Said Crane, "At a time when the federal government should be looking for every possible means of reducing federal spending, it would be the height of hypocrisy for government employees, most of whom are vastly overpaid anyway, to receive substantial salary increases. The current proposal is totally out of line."

We couldn't agree more.

Crane right on solar bill

U.S. Rep. Crane last week also found himself on the short end of a vote on solar energy research, in which he was one of only two members of the House to oppose the measure.

The bill, which now must be approved by the Senate, would authorize $50 million through fiscal 1979 for a solar energy research program to be conducted by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the National Science Foundation.

Aside from the fact that $50 million scattered through three arms of the federal bureaucracy over five years would hardly go far toward accomplishing anything, we agree with Crane's contention that there is ample research being conducted by private industry, which is better equipped to do the job.

It appears to us that Crane's refusal to stampede with the herd in this instance represents the kind of rationality that is needed in the energy crisis.

Rep. Philip Crane

Demonstration criticized

On February 1, I had the pleasure of attending a program at the Samuel Kirk Developmental Training Center, and I am writing to you about your type of coverage.

A well-planned program was provided to accept an American flag, from our congressman, that had flown over our Capitol, and to dedicate a new flag pole that had been generously donated by the Union Oil Company.

The reporters and photographers from your newspaper were there to cover this proud American tradition — I thought! A telephone call to one of your editors informed me that these people were at Kirk Center to cover a "confrontation" between an "Impeach the President" group and Congressman Philip Crane. This confrontation group couldn't even wait for the flag to be raised, but broke into the program, and pretended they didn't know what was going on. I just can't feel this group is so vitally interested in our country, when they can't even tell that our flag is going to be raised in all its glory.

Instead of pictures or a story about the planned flagpole dedication ceremony or other portions of the program, your front page carried only the confrontation. When I inquired about possible further coverage, your editor told me that your paper felt the published article and picture was the most newsworthy, so there would be no further coverage. Did he really mean newsworthy or did he mean controversial? This article stated that this impeachment group had tried for four weeks to set up a meeting with Congressman Crane. Did your reporter check out the authenticity of this statement with Congressman Crane's office? I did, and was told they had called once, and that was the day before their rude interruption of another planned program.

letters to the editor

I feel that the Palestine Herald has shortchanged the students, parents, faculty and administrators of Kirk Center, plus all participants who gave so generously of their time. A great deal of effort and planning went into this program. Hopefully, other people in our community feel that raising the American flag over a special school like Kirk Center is newsworthy and deserves at least equal coverage.

Mrs. Anne Countryman
Palatine

Dear Ms. Holiday
I have been summing for the past week about the debacle your impeachment group precipitated at the Kirk Center last Friday, February 1.

On that day a group of people dedicated to the lives of handicapped children gathered to dedicate a flagpole and a United States flag to the aims and goals of Kirk Center.

Without warning you people egregiously broke in and stole the ceremony with your demands on Congressman Crane. And you obviously did it with malice aforethought, having alerted the press and photographers of your intentions the day before.

No matter what the merits of your cause, Ms. Holiday, you broke in, with premeditation, and stole something that belonged to others.

I, among not a few others, believe your actions are not a great deal different than those of a certain notorious band of plumbers. I think you should be ashamed.

Robert Creek

'Communists out to get us'

It is urgent that you take the time to sit down, turn the boob tube off, set your can of beer aside and write your senators in Washington at once on three very important matters.

First, America must not have gas rationing. There are other means to keep us going other than rationing. Mobility is what made this nation great. To stop our mobility would be to stop America, and this is just what the liberals in this country would like to happen. Did you know that there is more oil in the Gulf of Alaska than in the field where the Alaskan pipeline is coming from? Ask your senators what is being done about this and why we are not taking oil from the Gulf which is closer.

Second, plans are again forming right now in Washington to pass the bill on "convention on the prevention and punishment of the crime of genocide." It was voted down the last time, but the people who want to run this nation are at it again. This bill, if passed, would overthrow American sovereignty. Ask your senators to vote against it, and if not, why not?

Third, Russia wants the Suez Canal opened for the use of their ships. This is and was the real reason for the last Middle East war. Now Russia wants to get control of the Panama Canal, which it will if we give up our rights to this area. News has been released that we would turn over the waterway to Panama within a year. With the United States out of that area, how long do you think it would take Russia to take over?

Americans, I have said it before and I will say it again. The Communists are out to get us, and God forbid if they do it will be our own fault. Anyone who thinks that Russia has changed its spots is just a damn fool, and this goes for the people in Washington as well as my neighbor. If the shoe fits, then wear it. If the shoe does fit, I hope you have enough sense to do something about it, or don't you give a damn?

Why are Congressmen going?

by ARNOLD B. SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON — When delegates to the 1952 Republican National Convention began shifting allegiance from Taft to Eisenhower, Ed Vergeles, a photographer, was said to have analyzed the situation with mixed metaphor of classic proportions:

"The rats," he growled, "are starting to leave the bandwagon."

By mid-February 1974, 21 incumbent members of the House of Representatives had announced they would not seek re-election. The list comprised 15 Republicans and six Democrats and it was longer by five than the entire pre-election retirement roster of 1972.

It looks to some as if a stampede might be in the making.

Several theories are going around about the retirements, which may reach 30 or more before the last of the candidate filing deadlines in mid-summer.

One, focusing on the Republicans and Watergate, holds that smart GOP officeholders are acknowledging the inevitable — that their party and its candidates are in for an electoral disaster in November.

Republican leaders spent most of last year and are continuing this year to quell the smallest sign of panic over Watergate. National Chairman George Bush has been telling all who will listen that Americans are not the sort who would punish the innocent with the guilty. And the GOP response to losing a Pennsylvania congressional seat it had held for 25 years was that Watergate was no factor because the Democrat won by only 200 votes.

There is another theory, somewhat less comforting to Democrats, but accounting for the unexpected departure of some of their veterans as well as the Republicans. It holds, Bush to the contrary, that the voters will want to "throw the rascals out," regardless of party, and that 1974, in the words of campaign consultant Hank Parkinson, will be "the year of the political virgin."

Advocates of this proposition saw some verification late last year when Democrat Brendan Byrne, who had never run for elective office, clobbered Republican Rep. Charles Sandman, a veteran Republican congressman and state senator, for the New Jersey governorship.

Both theories about the unusual run of retirement announcements probably have some validity, but they are based on the assumption that no one holding public office would give it up unless defeat seemed assured anyway.

However, there is another possible explanation for some of the decisions to retire. Some among the hundreds of decent and honest men and women serving in Congress may have decided that they do not choose to remain in a line of work increasingly regarded as a haven for crooks and incompetents.

The reason for raising this possibility is that a large number of good public servants are going to be seeking reelection in primaries this spring and summer and in the general election in November. If these people are removed from office merely because they are Republicans (Theory 1) or merely because they are running for re-election (Theory 2), the voters will have been suckered and the country will have been badly served.

With apologies to Ed Vergeles, the message here is, "Don't throw the baby out with the bad apples" (UPI).

Tax relief a threat to taxpayers

All this talk about tax relief is beginning to make me nervous.

Gov. Daniel Walker wants to give us tax relief. House Speaker W. Robert Blair wants to give us tax relief. House Minority Leader Clyde Chouteau wants to give us tax relief.

And in the meantime, State Comptroller George W. Lindberg is shaking his head and saying it can't be done. Lindberg keeps counting the money in the treasury and keeps reporting that it is going out faster than it is coming in.

In the first seven months of this fiscal year, the state spent $80 million more than it took in, Lindberg says.

Nonetheless, Blair has come up with a proposal which he said will save us, collectively, $61.5 million in taxes. Chouteau went him considerably better, with a promise of $130 million.

Blair would simply eliminate the state utility tax for you and me, and give added property tax breaks to the elderly and low-income families. Chouteau would up our individual exemptions under the state income tax from $1,000 to $1,500.

Blair said loss of utility tax revenue will be made up through the normal growth rate of Illinois industry and commerce, which would continue to pay the tax. Chouteau said we can make up the income-tax revenue by boosting that tax on corporations, which requires nothing but a little of constitutional amendment.

And there comes old sourpuss Lindberg again, saying things like: "Presently, an economic slow-down is forecast for the second half of fiscal 1974. A slow-down traditionally reduces the state's revenue growth and tends to increase public aid spending (which he adds is already up $109 million in the first six months)."

Blair said eliminating the residential utility tax would save the average family $14.70. (If RTA, with its 5 per cent gasoline tax is approved, I figure to come out about $1.90 in the hole. That is, if I can find enough gas to buy, on which to — but never mind about me.)

Chouteau said the average family of five with an income of $10,000 would save $62.50 per year. (I don't know how to translate that to my family, but if experience is any gauge, I got a notion which way that figure will go.)

Gov. Walker has not yet revealed his plan, but everyone knows that he is anxious to give the people some tax relief, every bit as anxious as Blair. In fact the two of them were so anxious during the last two years that they were able to hammer out a legislative program which resulted in no tax relief at all.

Last year, the governor wanted to just give everybody 10 bucks back, but Blair wouldn't let that program through the House. Blair wanted to reduce the state sales tax, but the governor vetoed that program. (Blair now says that fiddling with the sales tax would be a lot more expensive than fiddling with the utility tax.)

Anyhow, when our legislators finally get done with the business of getting themselves nominated for reelection in the primary and go back to work in April, they will have not one, not two, but three tax relief plans to work on.

And I always have this uneasy feeling that after they get done struggling with tax relief they will have fashioned a plan which will relieve me of more tax money.

The song is wrong—in fact, it's not a 'gas' Play:

Fun-seekers still go out—but they stay close to home

by KAREN BLECHA

As far as entertainment is concerned, the heck with the gas crunch.

Not even a gasoline shortage can stop Northwest suburban residents from eating out, skiing and getting away from it all when they want to.

Residents polled by The Herald said getting enough gas to get back and forth from work is their biggest problem during the gas crisis. Housewives admitted they do all their shopping at once, forsaking small side trips for planned-ahead routes.

But people still have to go out and have a good time. They're just doing it closer to home.

"People are still going to restaurants," said Larry Buckmaster, executive director for the Chicago and Illinois Restaurant Assn. "But we're finding that they are not traveling more than five miles to eat."

BUCKMASTER said fast food and expensive restaurants in densely populated areas are doing a better business than last year. The restaurants really feeling the crunch are those 20 to 30 miles away from their patrons, such as Chateau Louise in Dundee, he said. Sunday now is the bad day in the restaurant business because people are afraid to venture out when no gas stations are open, he said.

People are still packing the theatres and movie houses in the area. Mill-Run Theatre in Niles, closed until March 1, is nearly sold out for the first two weeks after it reopens. Arlington Park Theatre in Arlington Heights hasn't been affected by the fuel shortage at all, according to Karen Alton, publicity director. She said their patrons not only come from Chicago and the suburbs but also from surrounding states.

"We have discovered that if it's a play or star people want to see, it doesn't matter if they have less gas, bad weather or inflation," she said.

In some movie theatres in the Northwest suburbs, the attendance is up. In others it is about the same.

"Our only problem has been on Sundays if the show is sold out and people are still waiting in line," said Kathy Puryear, manager of the Mount Prospect Cinema in Mount Prospect. "Then they scream about the gas and how much they wasted getting here."

RICHARD RODEMS, manager for the ABC Woodfield 1 & 2 Theatres in Schaumburg, said he thought people "wouldn't eat just so they could see some shows."

The gasoline shortage has been a boost for business at the Arlington Park Towers, where people can go for a weekend to snowmobile, swim, eat, see a show and play tennis.

According to Joseph Duellman, manager of the Towers, people are coming to the hotel to get away for a weekend instead of going far away. The convention and meeting business hasn't changed because the hotel is near the Chicago and North Western Ry. station and runs a courtesy service to O'Hare Airport. The service has had no trouble getting gas, according to a spokesman.

Ski slopes close to the Chicago area are more crowded than ever. Villa Olivia in Bartlett is doing a better business than last year, according to a spokesman. Alpine Valley in East Troy, Wis., an hour away from the Chicago area, reported up to 4,000 skiers for one day and a night. Devil's Head Lodge in Wisconsin, about 100 miles from Chicago, is doing more weekend and overnight business than usual as well as more midweek skiing because there's more gas available then, according to a spokesman.

BUT PLACES like Boyne Mountain, Mich. 350 miles from Chicago are losing most of their Chicago skiers. Everett Kircher, president of the Boyne Country Ski Resort, said his Chicago skiers are down about 90 per cent.

"I don't understand it," he said. "All they have to do is get enough gas to get out of Chicago. There is plenty of gas up here."

Steven Tsalkis, head of the Wisconsin Travel Service in Mount Prospect, has one answer to the problem. Two weeks ago he started arranging bus transportation for weekend getaways to Wisconsin. Last weekend, buses, which leave from Mount Prospect on Friday at 6 p.m. and return Sunday, carried 350 persons.

People are still taking short weekend trips, but according to a recent survey by Continental Bank in Chicago, some are postponing longer trips.

The survey, taken last month and including both suburban and Chicago residents, showed that 35 per cent of those polled altered their 1974 vacation plans because of the fuel shortage. Forty-eight per cent of those postponed their vacation, 29 per cent canceled it, 11 per cent chose a closer destination and 13 per cent will go by means other than car.

The survey showed that 64 per cent of the respondents are also curtailing their weekend travel and that 71 per cent are dialing down their home thermostats.

Sales: Retailers reporting decline in business in suburbs

by LEA TONKIN

The gasoline shortage is separating the serious shopper from the browser in the Northwest suburbs, a number of retailers report. But they chalk up lackluster February sales as much to the winter blahs and the poor economic outlook as the fuel problem.

"We can eliminate the person who is not a conscientious buyer right away," says Tom Landeck, a salesman for Homefinders, Realtors in Buffalo Grove. "People who are using their own car are usually more sincere." The gasoline squeeze brought an end to the traditional free ride for all prospects interested in looking at new homes. "The trend now is to get them to use their own car," Landeck said. The current lull in home buying results from the general economic conditions and the shortage of fuel, he added. "The streets seem to be abandoned," said a salesman at Square Deal Shoes in Des Plaines. He says business is down, possibly the result of the gasoline shortage and other problems.

IN DOWNTOWN Mount Prospect, Galen Parriott of the Hotter Than Mothers Music store says "I know only one thing—that business is slow." Customers gripe about the gas shortage, "but it's just the way the nation's economy is right now," Parriott said.

Regional shopping centers feel the pinch, too, storekeepers say. At the Randhurst center in Mount Prospect, Mrs. Jean Buczak of the Randhurst Card Shop says, "People are coming in smaller numbers. The mornings are pretty dead. The evenings aren't too bad, but the girls say they aren't as busy as they used to be since the gasoline shortage. Last week I was short 1,600 people compared to a year ago."

Commenting on the gasoline supply problem and a possible cutback of business at Woodfield center in Schaumburg, Gerry Dempsey, assistant manager, said, "It would be difficult to say if it caused a decrease or increase. I don't think it's helped any."

Steve Sprague, manager of the Baskin-Robbins 31 Flavors ice cream store at Woodfield, says traffic is down 10 per cent. "I know our percentage (sales) increase in January was less than last year," he said. Sprague depends on drop in business from shoppers at the mall.

SOME RETAILERS report no adverse effects caused by the gas shortage. "Business is great," says Ed Oleszek, manager of the Jewel Food store in downtown Arlington Heights. "We're getting more people in the morning and later in the afternoon, rather than in the middle of the day. It used to be Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Now its Monday through Sunday." Oleszek said, "Shoppers may be out purchasing gas, maybe that has something to do with it."

The U.S. Department of Commerce reports this week that the franchise industry expects a 6.5 per cent rate of growth this year compared to 16 per cent climb during 1973. Projections have been reduced further as the energy shortages deepen, the department said.

Yet Bob Stillings, north Chicago zone manager for the 7-Eleven food stores division of Southland Corp. in Rolling Meadows, says the gasoline boondoggle has been a boon for convenience stores. "With the gas shortage and stations closing early, our cigarettes and milk business has picked up considerably," he said.

AT PALATINE DRUGS in Palatine, manager William Dale reports no change in shoppers' habits, "except that they're possibly coming in at the times when they would also be picking up the kids at school or meeting the train."

The Rolling Meadows Barber shop and the Suburban National Bank of Elk Grove Village report no change in customer habits.

According to Hugh Muncy, president of the Illinois Retail Merchants Assn., February is traditionally a slack sales period for many retailers.

The Continental Bank, Chicago, reports in its winter survey that Chicago area families are pessimistic about business conditions. Of the 14 per cent who indicated they would buy a new car during 1974 in the survey, 79 per cent said they would purchase a small car because of the fuel shortage.

School:

NIU student in big trouble; he can't make it to DeKalb

by WANDALYN RICE

Ted Pamp of Arlington Heights has been working on his master's degree in education from Northern Illinois University since 1971—but he isn't taking any classes this semester because he's caught between the gasoline shortage and the requirements of the NIU education school.

The course Pamp intended to take this semester was "Introduction to Education Research," a course required for his major in adult education. The class is being offered in Fox Lake this semester and also at the NIU campus in DeKalb, but Pamp would have to drive to DeKalb each week if he wanted the course—and the driving distance is about twice as far as it is to Fox Lake.

Right now, Pamp said he isn't sure whether his not taking the course this semester will actually delay his degree, but, he says, "It's sure slowing me up."

THE REQUIREMENT that is causing Pamp trouble is one set by the education school which limits the number of hours a student can take off campus through the school's continuing education program while working on a master's.

Students majoring in secondary education may take 15 class hours off campus and 15 hours on campus. In elementary education, students may take 24 hours off campus and 6 hours on. Pamp has taken 15 off-campus hours toward his degree in adult education and school officials have said the rest of his courses must be taken on the DeKalb campus.

The requirement, according to Wallace Wheeler, graduate adviser for the education school, has recently been relaxed by a vote of the education faculty. Other graduate schools at NIU, Wheeler said, have eliminated the requirement for on-campus courses entirely.

"It used to be that we only allowed nine hours of credit through continuing education," Wheeler said. "The trend has been to offer more and more courses off campus."

THE TREND, however, has been no help to Pamp this semester. He said he considered signing up for the course on the DeKalb campus but did not "because of this blooming fuel situation. I didn't want to get into anything if I couldn't be sure I could get there all the time."

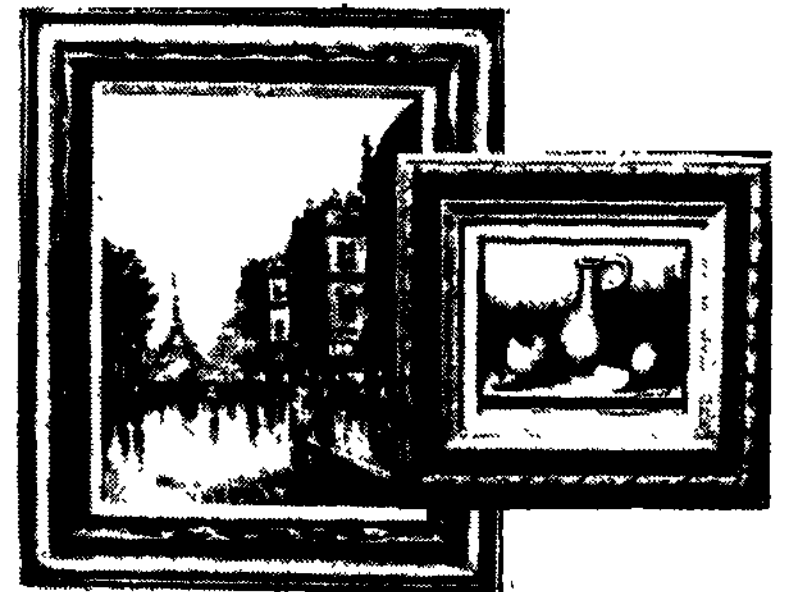

Next year, Pamp said, he will finish up his degree after he takes an early retirement from his job as a meteorologist for United Air Lines.

"I hope to graduate with my daughter once I finish a semester at NIU," he said.

Pamp said he can't really understand why the education school has the requirement for on-campus courses when other graduate schools do not. And Wheeler said he doesn't have a detailed explanation either.

The requirement, Wheeler said, "is set by the faculty through a vote. I guess there is some feeling that a student has the advantage of the library on campus that they don't have off campus—at least that's the reason that's frequently cited."

Energy crisis topic

The energy crisis will be discussed by Herbert M. Sampson at the Feb. 21 meeting of the Northwest Suburban Chapter, National Assn. of Accountants.

Sampson is chairman of the board and president of Northern Petrochemical Co., Des Plaines, and group vice president of the parent firm, Northern Natural Gas Co.

The meeting will be held at Lancers Restaurant in Schaumburg. It will begin with a social hour at 5:30 p.m. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m.

Dinner to fete Austrian representative to UN

Dr. Peter Jankowitsch, permanent representative of Austria to the United Nations, will be honored Friday night at a reception and dinner hosted by Austrian Consul Eduard Adler and the American-Austrian Society of the Midwest. President of the American-Austrian Society is Arlington Heights businessman Joseph Schneller. The ambassador is visiting Chicago as guest of the society.

Dr. Peter Jankowitsch

The dinner at 7 p.m. in The Palmer House will "honor Dr. Jankowitsch for his leadership achievements in the United Nations as well as recognize and further strengthen the traditional ties between Austria and the Chicago area," said dinner chairman Schneller.

Jankowitsch has represented Austria in the UN Security Council since January, 1973 and was Council president in November, 1973 when the UN took its decisive action in sending troops to enforce the Arab-Israeli cease-fire.

He was appointed in 1972 as Austria's permanent representative to the United Nations with rank of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary and was elected chairman of the UN Committee on Peaceful Uses of Outer Space.

Jankowitsch will be in Chicago for two days. On Friday he will attend a luncheon at the Museum of Science and Industry as guest of director Dan McMaster, meet with Chicago area press representatives, and attend the reception and dinner at The Palmer House. On Saturday he will attend a private luncheon hosted by Consul Adler.

Heart disease program set for March 2

A public program about heart disease will be held at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, on Saturday, March 2, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sessions will be held in the chapel and adjacent conference rooms and will be repeated each hour.

Aimed at detection and education, the program will include free blood pressure tests. Participants can also play "Risko," a game that helps estimate an individual's chances of suffering a heart attack or stroke. The score is based on answers to questions about age, heredity, weight, smoking habits, exercise, diet and blood pressure.

Stress testing will also be demonstrated. It involves exercising on a treadmill while an electrocardiograph unit records the heart's activity. Stress testing simulates the various activities a person normally performs.

Films entitled "I Am Joe's Heart" and "Understanding Stresses and Strains" will be shown. Nutritionists will discuss the relationships between diet and heart disease.

Lions, Cards to contend for championship

by PAUL LOGAN
Swimming Editor

Will the flu bug be the equalizer between two fine teams — St. Viator and Arlington — at the Highland Park District swim meet?

Will Saturday afternoon's championships be as close as last year's?

Will this state qualifying meet, scheduled to begin at 2 p.m., be as exciting as 1973's thriller?

The answers to these questions are — in order of the asking — maybe, could be, should be.

St. Viator, the defending champion, and Arlington, the runner-up, head the list of area teams competing at the Little Giants' pool. Also from the Mid-Suburban League will be Hersey, Wheeling, Rolling Meadows and Buffalo Grove.

Rounding out the field will be Barrington, Deerfield, Lake Forest, Libertyville, Stevenson, Waukegan, Zion and the host school.

"I would say it would be pretty close," said Arlington head coach Don Andersen of the showdown. "I have the feeling that illness has got to hurt St. Viator."

Twice these talented teams have met with the Lions winning the dual meet 41-39, and also finishing ahead of the Cardinals in the New Trier West College Events, 131-120.

Saturday's meet could be closer, according to Andersen, because some of St. Viator's swimmers might not snap back from the sickness that slowed most of the team two weeks ago. That bout with the flu bug cost the Lions of Coach John Fleck the Suburban Catholic Conference championship.

Andersen recalled that one of his stars — Charlie Dunn — had been sick during last year's season for a week. According to his coach, Dunn never really regained his strength.

"We're coming around," said a very optimistic Fleck. "We should be ready for Saturday."

However, the answer as to how much the Lions have come around and how ready they are won't be known until the weekend.

As to the question of closeness in the final score, this year's district edition will be hard pressed to match the tenseness of the '73 test.

Going into the 400-yard freestyle relay, St. Viator trailed Arlington 201-199. If the Lions' relay was touched out by the Deerfield team, it would have ended up a co-championship. However, Ed Fitzsimons — the Lions' returning senior sprinting star — finished first in anchoring the relay. Thus, St. Viator ended up with 231 points compared to Arlington's 225.

Fleck said he expected both Arlington and Highland Park to give his team the most trouble. Both Deerfield and Highland Park were also in little contention until late in the meet, finishing with 200 and 196 points, respectively.

At the Central Suburban League championships last weekend, Deerfield finished fifth and Highland Park tied for sixth.

"I saw the meet," said Fleck. "I wasn't too impressed (with the showings of these district foes). I don't think they rested for the meet at all."

Asked if he thought the district title would go down to the last relay again, Fleck said, "I hope it does. We'll take it."

St. Viator, barring a disqualification, is expected to win the final relay because it boasts the fastest team in the field. The Lions have gone 3:24.5. Making up Saturday's team will be Rick Yasky, Chris Kennedy or John Newcomer, Mark Rohl and Fitzsimons.

The first-place winners in each event, the top four in diving and any swimmer or relay team that equals or surpasses the minimum state qualifying times will qualify for the state finals, scheduled for next Friday and Saturday at Evanston.

Figuring to be a double winner for St. Viator is Fitzsimons. He's one of the top performers in the state in the 50 and 100 freestyles.

Fleck also is expecting these Lions to qualify — Yasky in the 200 and 500 freestyles, Rowe in the 100 free, Kevin Szarabjka in the breaststroke, Mark Nelles in the backstroke and the medley relay team of Nelles, Szarabjka, Monte McCollum or Newcomer and Rowe.

Andersen is hoping for a pair of double winners — Joe Nitch in the 200 and 500 frees and Dunn in the individual medley and backstroke. As far as qualifiers go, he is banking on Kiernan Mack and Pete Wroblewski in the breaststroke, divers Jeff Munk and Glen Seaman, the medley relay of Rob Carsters, Mack, Dunn and Dale Patterson and the free relay of Patterson, Dan Stubing, Jeff Hoseman and Nitch.

Several coaches figure the diving competition to be one of the weakest in the state. This is to Hersey's advantage with two fine divers in Jeff Speakman and Tim Brennan. They finished 1-2 in the MSL meet. Hersey received its first state MOVE OVER, BROTHER. Forest View's Doug Schlak shows his stuff in the freestyle. Schlak joined older brother Cliff in the conference meet record book with his 100 freestyle effort Friday of 49.5. Cliff owns the 200 free mark set in '72. Schlak also won the 50 freestyle as the Falcons finished in a tie for sixth overall.

Wildcats end Cards' string

Wheeling's sophomore swim team made some history Saturday afternoon at Olympic Pool. For the first time in the five years of Mid-Suburban League meets, a team other than Arlington finished first.

The Wildcats of sophomore coach Jim Whittington captured three firsts on route to a 244-point performance. Arlington, which went into the meet with an identical 6-1 dual meet record, finished with 207 points.

Tony Lauber had a hand in all the firsts, winning the 100 free in a record time (54.0) as well as the 200 free (2:02.8) and anchoring the 400 free relay team to another record (3:47.4). Also on that team were Jeff Stevenson, Keith Wales and Dave Mede.

Arlington led all teams with four winners. Mark McCullagh set a record in the 500 free for the Cardinals (5:40.6) with teammates Glen Seaman taking diving (286.10) and Steve Nowack the 50 free (25.2). The medley relay of Mark Cormier, Kevin Lotzer, Jeff Zeller and Jeff Zawadzki won in 1:37.5.

Buffalo Grove's Mike Yasky captured two events — a record-setting performance in the individual medley (2:20.7) and a win in the backstroke (1:04.2). Dan Spaulding, who swam for Wheeling last year, took the breaststroke for the Bison (1:12.4).

Elk Grove's Jay Perry rounded out the scoring with his showing in the butterfly (1:05.8).

Arlington, disqualified in the final relay, finished with 207 points and second place overall. Then came Elk Grove (148 points) in third, Forest View (144) in fourth, Buffalo Grove (145) in fifth, Rolling Meadows (117) in sixth, Prospect (60) in seventh and Forest View (94) in eighth.

Bolin, Schlak are big guns at NTE

Last year the New Trier East District was the springboard to a state individual title for Prospect's Rick Fox.

This Saturday, starting at 2 p.m. in the Winnetka pool, two other swimmers could be making their first step toward personal glory.

Elk Grove's Scott Bolin and Forest View's Doug Schlak are the area's biggest threats — the former in the individual medley and the latter in the 50 or 100 free.

Also competing besides the Grenadiers and Falcons will be teams from Prospect, Maine North, Schaumburg (two swimmers), New Trier West, Niles North, Glenbrook North, Glenbrook South and hosting New Trier East, the heavy favorite to win the team title.

Bolin is the defending district champ in the IM. He also won the breaststroke last year. However, he'll be going in the backstroke Saturday afternoon. He's gone 2:02.4 in the IM and his 57.1 in the backstroke in the recent conference meet (both records).

Schlak will probably receive his biggest test from NTE's Dave Dale. This move-in from Maine South has gone 22.5 and 49.2 compared to Schlak's 22.7 and 49.1. Of the two events, Schlak probably has his best chance for a state title in the 100 free.

Everybody who doesn't swim the 200 and 500 freestyle events has to breathe a collective sigh of relief knowing NTW's Andy Veris has chosen them over the 100 free and the IM.

"I think he could win the state meet in any one of them," said his coach, Jim Spreitzer. "It's been one of the fun things in this season as coach to keep the other kids and their coaches guessing where Andy's going to swim."

Elk Grove expects to be the area's strongest representative at New Trier. Coach Pete Weber hopes for qualifiers from these Grenadiers — Brent Bolin in the butterfly and IM, Jim Henry in the butterfly, Mark Fournier in the 50 free and the medley relay team of the Bolin brothers, Henry and Fournier.

Prospect coach Roger Huegerich said he'd be counting on these Knights to qualify — Brad Busse in the breaststroke, Chris Prinslow in the backstroke and the medley relay team of Prinslow, Busse, Jim Lyon and Gary Eichhorst.

One other Forest View swimmer that might come through for Coach John Hillary is Kevin Redig in the 200 freestyle.

District information

MSL CHAMPS AGAIN. Arlington's swim team successfully defended its title, at the Mid-Suburban League's meet Friday, becoming the first team in the five-year history of the meet to post back-to-back outright titles. Coaching the Cardinals are

qualifier ever when Al Zasady took second last year.

Two other Huskies that have the best shots at qualifying are Bob Larue in the 50 free and Chris Tague in the 500 free.

Wheeling, Rolling Meadows and Buffalo Grove are looking for their first state qualifiers. For the Wildcats, the long wait may be over.

Wheeling's Paul Lindquist, a strong senior sprinter, has gone below state qualifying in both the 50 and 100 frees. Teammate Bill Modica has done the same in the 500 free. He also could turn the trick.

Rolling Meadows might have its best shot in diving with Jeff Slack. He finished third in the conference meet. Unless a Mustang swims the best race of his life, Rolling Meadows and Buffalo Grove competitors will be out to mainly gain district experience.

Hosting Highland Park coach Bill Ratliff said he expected the meet to again be a four-team affair as was last year's.

"This year's team (his) is stronger overall," said Ratliff. "I think it's probably more balanced (in scoring potential).

"If it goes down to the last relay, we're in trouble. I hope we've got it won before the last relay."

The Little Giants have a strong medley relay (1:44.0), butterfly (55.5), IM'er (2:05.0), backstroke (57.6) and a pair of breaststrokers (1:07 each).

"We haven't rested all year," said Ratliff. "We've waited for the end."

"We went into the conference with 38 points in bed," explained Deerfield coach Art Edstrom of his team's so-so showing in the league showdown. "This flu thing is really raising havoc."

The Warriors also have a strong medley (1:44.0), free relay team (3:25.0), butterfly (55.1), freestyle (22.9 and 50.8) and 500 freestyle (5:03).

"We're a young team," admitted Edstrom. "And the competition's getting better all the time."

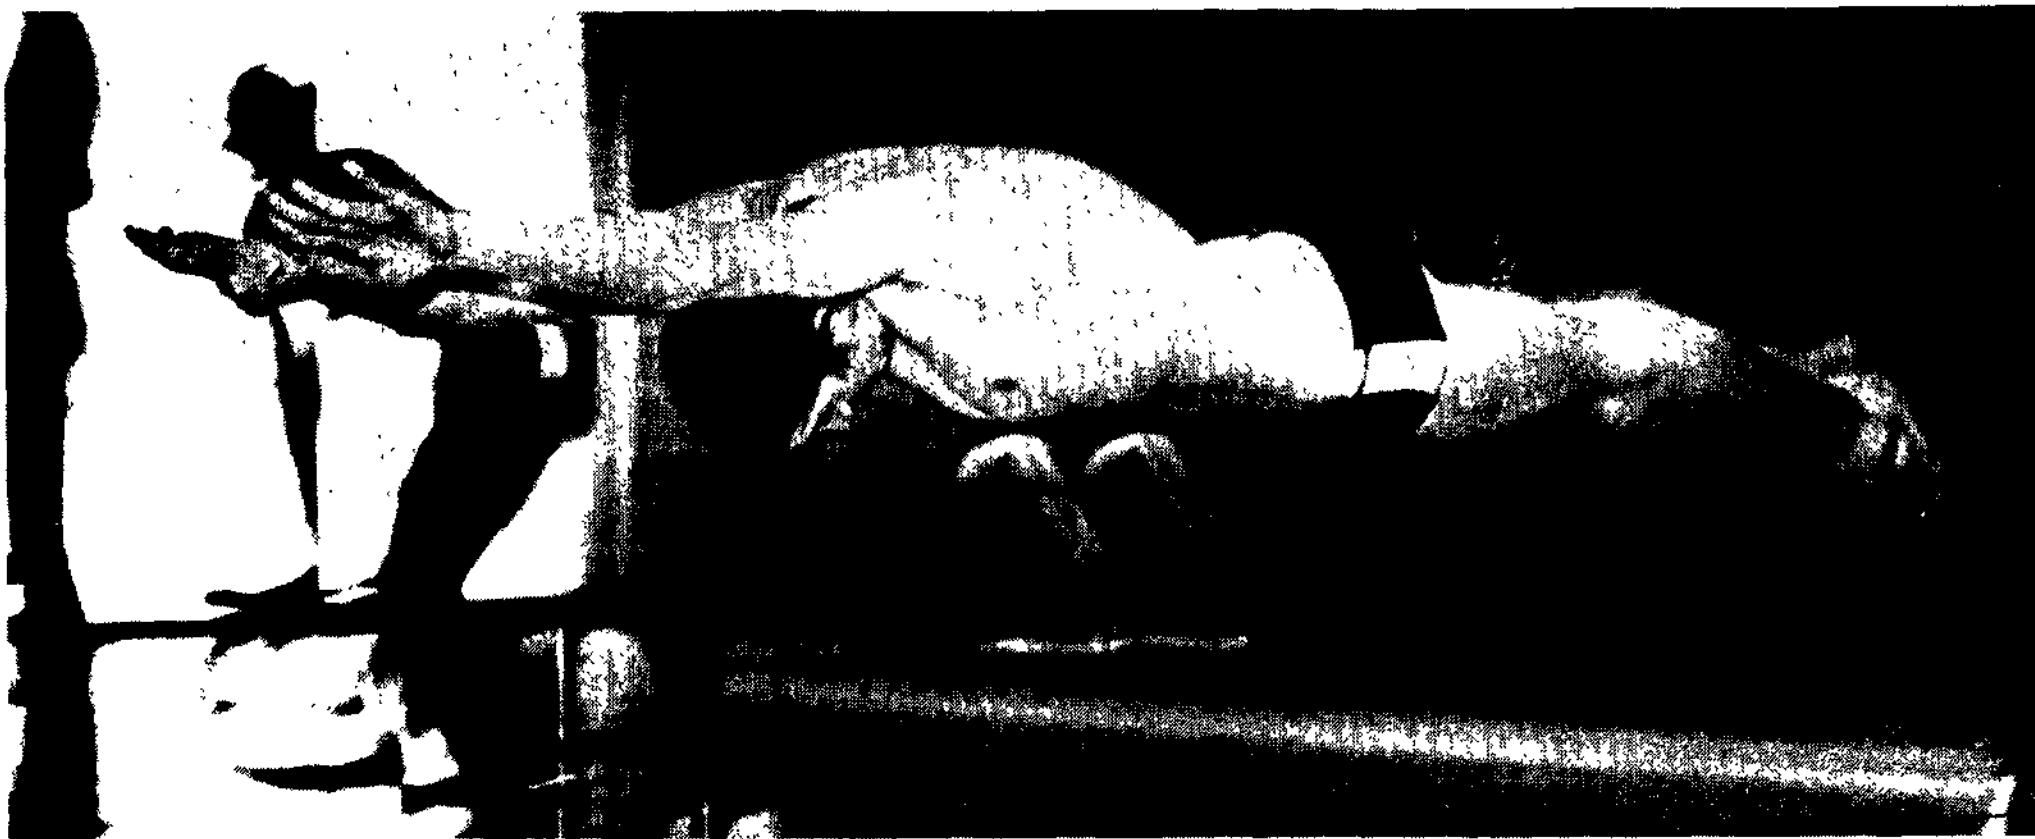

Dickson's diving chances show promise in district

Maine East diver Chris Dickson is a safe bet to advance into the 43rd Illinois prep swimming championships after district qualifications are held this weekend.

Dickson will compete at 9:30 a.m. Saturday in the Maine East hosted district. He won the Central Suburban League diving title last weekend and hasn't been beaten in dual meet competition all season.

Preliminary diving will be held in the morning hours at Maine East's one-day district. Swimming events begin at 2 p.m. on Saturday.

The hosts will also attempt to qualify their 200 medley relay team of Wayne Westman, Greg Erickson, Scott Strauss and Carl Anderson. Westman will seek Arlington's Dixie O'Brien, a junior, helped his team to a league title last week with his showing in the individual medley.

New Trier West splashes to team championship

Dickson, Polz capture league swim honors

by MIKE KLEIN

Maine East's Chris Dickson and Maine North's Don Polz were the only local winners this past weekend at the Central Suburban League varsity swimming championships.

Dickson scored 370.40 points to win in diving. He hadn't been defeated all season during dual meets.

Polz swam 1:05.91 to win the 100 breaststroke. Oddly, former Maine North teammate, Jeff Rusk, now of Niles North, placed second in 1:06.05. Maine East's Greg Erickson was fifth in 1:07.17. And East's Wayne Westman was the runner-up, 59.74 seconds, in 100 backstroke. Highland Park's Todd Kell won in 58.53.

No other local individuals earned awards for finishing first-to-sixth at the championships, held in Maine East's pool. But the Demons were fourth in 200 medley relay.

Westman, Erickson, Scott Strauss and Carl Anderson completed the 200 medley relay in 1:45.90, less than one second behind Maine South which won in 1:45.17. East's fourth place time bettered its previous season best of 1:50.07 by nearly five seconds.

The meet went pretty much as expected with New Trier West amassing 244 points for an easy win over runner-up Glenbrook North which scored 161.

Top local team finish was 82 points and eighth place for Maine East. Maine North scored 46 points for ninth while Maine West was 12th, and last, in the field with 10 points.

New Trier West's Andy Veris, the state champion favorite in almost any event he chooses to swim, captured the 200 individual medley (2:05.51) and 500 freestyle (4:49.44) at the league championships.

Veris was an easy winner in the 500, finishing before Glenbrook South's Brad Stetson, second in 5:01.74. But Veris had to hold off Glenbrook North's Scott Andrews (2:05.06) in the 200 IM. Andrews had a victory in the 100 butterfly (54.85).

Veris will probably compete in the 200 and 500 freestyles at IHSA districts. He has also anchored New Trier's 400 freestyle relay this season. The Cowboys didn't use him there in conference finals but won anyhow in 3:24.22. Swimmers were Rob Schoder, Pete Fischer, Bob Chandler and Karl Smith.

Other event winners included New Trier West's Fischer in 100 freestyle (51.16), Glenbrook South's Stetson in 200 freestyle (1:51.36) and Niles North's Sam Kramer in 50 freestyle (22.89).

Maine South opened the meet by winning the 200 medley relay in 1:45.17. Swimmers were Rich Rummel, Brian Loughlin, Bob McCullough and Dane Kozie.

Awards were only made for swimmers who placed first-to-sixth, but placings were kept down through 12 finishers.

Maine North was seventh in the 200 medley relay (1:47.90) behind Dan Larson, Polz, John Monaghan and Mike Vernon. Maine West finished ninth (2:01.15), entering Stewart Seaholm, Nick Menninger, Doug Benton and Don Roque.

Monaghan gave Maine North a seventh in 50 freestyle (23.44) and eighth in 100 butterfly (58.57). East's Strauss was ninth in the latter event (58.79).

Other points for East were scored by Westman's eighth in 200 individual medley (2:14.46), Strauss' 10th in 200 freestyle (1:57.41) and Mike Caldron's 12th in diving (242.05 points).

Maine East was ninth (3:49.47) in the 400 freestyle relay and North placed with (3:57.99). East swimmers were Rick Reeve, Bob Gullberg, Bob Grazian and Alan Andrews. North swam Vernon, Larson, Andy Michalow and Jim Kyles.

Maine West also gained points from Paul Dyer's 11th place (5:26.25) in 500 freestyle.

Fremd girls capture cage title; topple Forest View

Fremd High School's girls basketball team proved too much for Forest View to handle Tuesday night.

Showing plenty of quickness, firepower and defense, the girls of Fremd coach Carol Plodzien won the first annual Mid-Suburban Conference basketball championship 61-31 at the Fremd gym.

The impressive season-ending victory left the Fremd team with a perfect record of 9-0 this year. Last year they won the four games they played leaving a sparkling two-year perfect record of 13-0.

"I think we're a very fast team," said Plodzien after the 30-point conquest of Forest View coach Mary Viereg's South Division winners. Fremd easily won the North Division to qualify for the playoff game.

Viereg would quickly agree that Fremd's lightning-quick.

"Fremd pressed the whole ball game," said Viereg, who added that her team was guilty of a "lot of turnovers" because of it.

The fairly large crowd saw Fremd jump out to a 35-15 lead after one half of play, coasting to victory. Three girls hit for double figures for Fremd — Colleen Cannon with 15, Heidi Giesler with 13 and Sonja Peterson with 10. Cannon fired in seven field goals and was perfect from the foul line in her only try.

Forest View was led by Barb Koehn with 10 and Carol Dunphy with eight.

"The full court press has been very effective for us," admitted Fremd's coach. "And the kids have developed quick passing techniques which have helped tremendously."

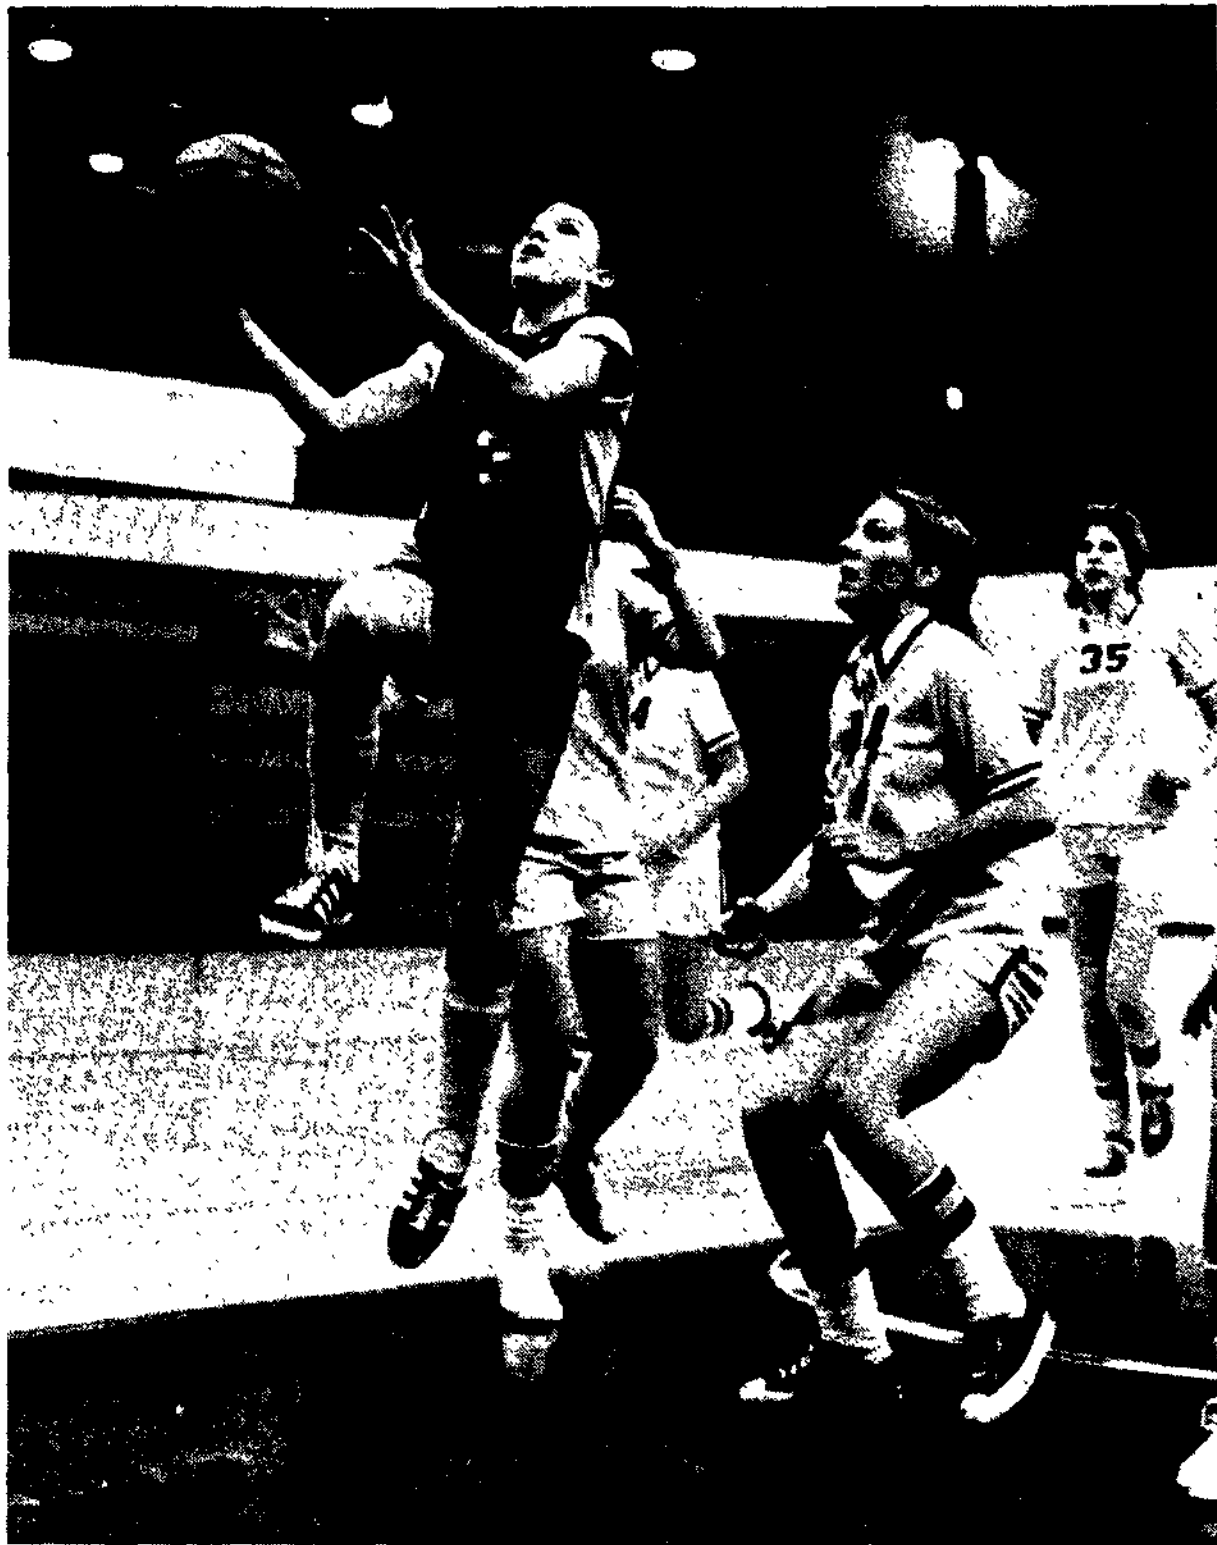

Also making up the winning team were Renee Koontz, Mary Lou McCaffrey, Vicki Limberg, Connie Bruns, Pam Lechner, Tilly Risko, Kim Johnson, Kathy Uhrich, Liz Bullard, Kristy Meyer and Jan Meyer.

The South Division champs from Forest View besides their leading scorers were Barb Bloomquist, Diane Hagen, Lynn Miller, Judy Peluso, Kim Smid, Nancy Lancaster, Jan Betterman, Kim Karaffa, Karala Karaffa, Lee Peterson, Deb Brinkman, Sue Artemenko and Donna DeBrande.

2 Buckeyes, Wildcat top Fire's list

by PAUL LOGAN

The packed, posh penthouse in Park Ridge gave every indication that there definitely is another professional football team in Chicago.

Television cameras, radio tape recorders and notebooks worked as the Chicago Fire held its first suburban news conference yesterday in its new offices off Northwest Highway.

The Fire, Chicago's entry in the new World Football League, announced the signing of 18 players as well as the naming of a new executive vice president, Al Lange.

Three of the more familiar names announced were Leo Hayden and Bruce Jankowski from Ohio State and Northwestern's Jim Anderson.

Hayden, who averaged 6.6 yards a carry as a Buckeye halfback, was drafted on the first round by Minnesota in 1970. The past two years he had played sparingly with St. Louis before becoming one of the Fire.

Jankowski, like Hayden a member of those super Buckeye teams that won three Big Ten titles and one national championship, comes from the Kansas City Chiefs. Besides being a wide receiver, Jankowski is also a punt and kickoff return man.

Anderson was a Northwestern All-American linebacker. He was the most valuable Wildcat of his class level the three years he lettered. He was also All-Big Ten.

Anderson, a 6-foot-5, 255-pounder, played against Herald area teams as a star for Deerfield High School. Drafted by Green Bay after graduation, a mixup concerning a back injury cost him a chance at trying out for the Packers.

"It was pretty much of a letdown," said Anderson of the misinformation the Packers received. He had hurt his back in high school, but the injury healed and never bothered him again. However, a pulled muscle his senior year was thought to be his old injury cropping up again, so he was dismissed from training camp.

"Dr. Fox (the Bears' team doctor) checked it out and said it was okay," said Anderson.

Five other players who came from Illinois colleges are Chuck Burgoon from North Park, Mike Rogowski from Illinois Benedictine, as well as three players from the University of Illinois — John Gann, Allan Kustok and Mike Heinrich.

Burgoon, called the "finest linebacker" ever to come out of a Chicago college by some scouts, was with Minnesota. Rogowski was a two year MVP and All-America at this west suburban college.

Heinrich was a defensive standout at tackle and end, Gann a three-year starter at offensive guard as well as being captain and All-Big Ten his senior year and Kustok also a three-year letterman at offensive guard.

Gymnasts begin new season with district eliminations

Gymnastics Editor

A new season will begin tonight in gymnastics.

It could be a one-night stand or last for over three weeks.

The new season is the start of state eliminations — district meets — that either rewards gymnasts that hit their routines with advancement to a higher level of competition or abruptly sends the ones that break to clean out their lockers.

There's absolutely no room for error for those who have circled March 8 and 9 on their calendar. That's when the state meet will unfold at Prospect High School.

Area teams are herded into five of the dozen district sites, four of which will commence tonight with four more Friday night and the final quartet on Saturday.

Districts at Maine West and Waukegan will get the ball rolling for the hopeful locals tonight. Maine West hosts Elk Grove, Forest View, Maine East, Maine South and East Leyden, while upstart Buffalo Grove will battle Deerfield, Highland Park, Lake Forest, Mundelein and North Chicago at Waukegan with both meets scheduled at 7 p.m.

Only the top five finishers in each event of free exercise, side horse, horizontal bar, trampoline, parallel bars, still rings and all-around advance from the districts to sectionals.

In addition, the top nine performers in each event among contestants of the three districts correlated with a sectional meet advance to the sectional.

District qualifiers from Maine West, Glenbrook South and Niles East will funnel into the Niles West Sectional on March 2 while those who survive the districts from Hersey, Coburn and Waukegan have a date at Rolling Meadows on Feb. 28 and March 1.

AT MAINE WEST

Elk Grove is the class of the field. The runnersup in last year's state meet have molded another powerhouse under head coach Fred Gaines.

The Grenadiers have consistently tallied in the 140's all season and should stuff the top five "ranked" qualifying positions.

Maine West, East, South, East Leyden and Forest View should stage a very competitive battle for the remaining berths. The Maine Township schools have been scoring in the 110-120 range, East Leyden is a solid 120 team and Forest View has been on the verge of cracking the century mark all season.

AT WAUKEGAN

Mundelein should command a slight edge in this balanced field on the basis of their dual-meet scores which have eclipsed 130. Deerfield and Waukegan have both tallied in the 110 range.

Buffalo Grove will rely on its non-senior team to reserve sectional berths. The Bison have hit regularly in the low 90's and upper 80's as head coach Dennis Mazur builds a brand new program.

Area product plays role on ranked college entry

"Second Season" is coming. It's only a dozen days away.

Great teams, average ones and poor ones look forward to this treasured time of year.

It's a rebirth. It's springtime. It's refreshing. It's thrilling. It's in a class by itself.

If you've forgotten, "March Madness" is the big IT. The state basketball tournament.

EACH YEAR this sports department sees its hopes for following a team downstate wiped out in regional and sectional play.

Never has a Mid-Suburban League team reached Champaign's Assembly Hall. It's always wait until next year.

Noted for being somewhat eternally optimistic when it comes to such things as state tournaments, even we sportswriters are becoming somewhat wary of those who talk of going downstate.

Going into the 1973-74 season, Conant, Arlington and Wheeling were expected to have fine teams. However, the feeling in this sports department seemed to be — let's wait and see.

Maybe, just maybe, the area's long history of tourney failure may end. Maybe.

Conant (17-3), Arlington (17-4) and Wheeling (16-5) have pretty much lived up to their expectations. Not only that, there's been a somewhat surprising fourth exceptional team — Forest View (16-5).

All are capable of winning a regional and, possibly (or maybe) a sectional. That is except for one thing — Arlington, Wheeling and Forest View are at the same regional. Conant is alone.

If the winner of the Forest View Regional happens to be knocked off before it can get downstate, those who made up the regional pairings should be... uh... barred from watching the state tournament for life. It's a crime that three fine teams be at one regional.

BESIDES TAKING aim on tourney glory, the four aforementioned teams are easily in reach of both the prestigious 20-win mark and school records for most wins in a season.

It's been seven years since a team won 20. Forest View head coach Ted Wissen turned the trick when he was with Arlington (20-4).

Arlington, should it win its remaining three games before the tourney, could go for the school record against Wissen's Falcons on March 6.

Forest View has already matched its best record and could surpass it on Friday. The Falcons could hit the 20-mark. It keeps on winning and — believe it or not — top Arlington in the tourney!

Conant is just two wins away from matching the record of its Sweet Sixteen team in 1972 (19-7).

Wheeling is closing in on its 19-6 mark, but it must win the Forest View Regional to reach the magical 20 figure.

Besides Arlington and Palatine (20-4 in 1953), only one other Herald area team (west of the Des Plaines River) has enjoyed one or more 20-game seasons — Prospect.

Under the coaching of Dick Kinneman (athletic director of Hersey), the Knights registered five such seasons, including a sparkling 25-2 mark in 1961.

I'm only dreaming but wouldn't it be nice to see that 25 total threatened, say, down at Champaign.

WHEN YOU LOOK at a college poll, you generally check out your favorites as well as the big name teams. How the Midwest teams compare to the UCLAs and the North Carolina States is always fun to check.

Next time you glance down the list, you might want to look for Utah. The

Paul Logan

Utah, presently ranked 17th in the AP and 18th in the UPI, have a local player — Prospect's Tom Bergen.

Although only a freshman, this 6-foot-9½ backup center has helped contribute to Utah's fine 18-5 record.

Recently, Tom was called on to start in place of All-America candidate Mike Sojourner, who was sidelined by illness. The opposition — then 15th ranked University of Texas-El Paso.

Tom turned in a solid defense game, blocking many Miner shots, as the Utes won a thriller, 73-72. This impressive victory solidified Utah's place among the top teams in the nation.

"He's one of the hardest working players," said his coach, Bill Foster. "And he's one of our more promising players for the future."

Ironically, the only other area player to be a member of a team ranked in the top 20 was another Prospect graduate — George Pomey. He was a starter for Michigan in the early 1960s.

LIKE BERGEN, another area product is getting a lot of playing time despite not having been All-Chicago and All-State.

Ken Peters, who starred for Arlington two years ago, lettered as a freshman, playing about 10 minutes a game. Now, as a sophomore, he's in the action about half the game because Georgia Tech uses a platoon system.

Peters said he thought a player had to be "strong to play" guard in major college ball. Not so. "Mainly quick and smart."

He and his teammates needed all the quickness and smarts they could muster recently against three Carolina teams they played consecutively — State, North and South. A good team can have a lot of trouble playing such highly ranked (NCS is No. 1, NC is in the top 10 and SC is in the second 10) teams, but for a rebuilding one it means disaster.

Georgia Tech lost all three, almost upsetting South Carolina. But the losses were expected when a team must start a front line that stands 6-7, 6-4, 6-4 and is young.

Peters is looking forward to next year's Christmas tourney test at Maryland, always highly ranked. Joining Tech and its awesome host will be UCLA and Marquette.

This former MSL leader is presently averaging about six points a game.

"IT HELPED that people didn't get down on us," said St. Viator basketball coach Steve Antrim after his team ended its 19-game losing streak last Friday. The Lions' winless season came to an end against St. Francis de Sales.

However, St. Viator rooters didn't have it so bad as the fans down in Friendsville, Tenn. Friendsville Academy suffered through a six-year losing streak — the longest prep basketball skid in history.

According to a story in the Knoxville News-Sentinel, this little Tennessee community saw its team lose 138 straight games!

Fortunately for Friendsville's team, St. Camillus' coach read about the streak and scheduled this loser team.

"The only thing we both have to lose is a losing streak," laughed James Langster after his Camillus quintet had lost to a so-so Kentucky team, 121-14, before playing the nation's worst team.

Friendsville, easily the worst team in Tennessee, broke its streak against Camillus, the worst from Kentucky and holder of a modest 49 straight losses. Both teams took a power index rating (based on a scale of 100) of 0.1 into the contest. (There are 385 teams in Tennessee and 302 in Kentucky.)

When the streak had ended, one of the 93 fans (a standing room only crowd) in the Friendsville gym fainted. The scorekeeper became so excited he left the scoreboard final buzzer ringing and joined the jubilant gathering.

Winning coach Rick Little, the school's sixth in six years, finally could shave. "I told my wife before the season started that I wasn't going to shave until we won a game," said the long-bearded Little.

As far as anybody knows, old Camillus is still looking for a worse team to play, and is still losing.

Harper looks sharp in win over Mayfair

by DON FRISKE

In one of their most impressive victories of the season, the Harper Hawks beat Mayfair, 83-65, Tuesday in the first game of the junior college district tournament at Wright Junior College.

The Hawks, after jumping out to an early 16-4 lead, stayed ahead of the Mayfair Falcons the entire game. The closest the Falcons could get after this was six points.

"We were hitting the open shot and we looked good," said Roger Bechtold, Hawk coach.

The Hawk coach felt that Harper's rebounding was the key to the game. The Hawks out-boarded the Falcons 47-35, pulling down 25 of those in the second half.

Mayfair added to their own woes by hitting only seven of 41 shots in the first half, ending the game sinking only 21 of 78.

Hitting at a 44 percentage, the Hawks sank 36 of 87 shots.

Free throws accounted for over one-third of the Falcons' scoring as they completed 23 of the 26 they attempted.

"We committed a lot of fouls," said Bechtold. "It was a very aggressive game and there was a lot of contact."

Scoring 22 points in the first half, Mike Millner led the Hawks to a 40-31 halftime lead. Millner finished the game with 30 points.

Following Millner for the Hawks was Chuck Neary with 18 points and Chris Mielke, who contributed 17 after coming off of the bench.

Steve Pappas, the Skyway Conference leading scorer, finished the game with 22 for the Falcons.

Scoring for the Flames were Chris Lidge on assists from Mark Myer and Lee Gray. Paul Stark assisted by Tom Avello and Dan Porovinski and Joe Anderson assisted by Bob Zombo and Lee Gray.

Flames 3, Schaumburg 0
Only one goal tending by Schaumburg kept the Flames from running away with this game. The Flames peppered the Schaumburg goalie with 35 shots. Kent Simon scored first for the Flames assisted by Tom Come and Tom Gianni. Gianni came back for the second goal on an assist by Rick Zombo. Bill Ceas scored the third Flame goal unassisted. Early in the second period Ceas scored again on a fine assist from Tom Anderson. Tony Aiello, assisted by Simon, scored the Flames fifth and final goal.

Meadows breaks loss skein with easy win

Picking up where Dwight D. Eisenhower left off, the Rolling Meadows varsity basketball team defeated Adlai Stevenson in a landslide, 79-41.

"Like they say in that shaving commercial, we needed that," Mustang head coach Ken Arneson beamed after his club broke a 12-game losing record with their highest output of the season.

Meadows never gave Stevenson a chance — rocketing to a 10-2 advantage en route to a 25-12 lead at the first quarter buzzer. Running at will, controlling the boards at both ends and frustrating Stevenson with a full-court man-to-man press, the Mustangs enjoyed 11 for 15 success from the floor in the decisive eight minutes.

Heading the assault was Scott Green who poured in five buckets and a free throw while Pat Geegan contributed eight points despite picking up three quick fouls.

Arneson manipulated the early rout by inserting 6-8 sophomore Bill Kiley for his first look at varsity ball. Kiley never waited for his baptism.

The big center clicked for seven of 11 shots from the floor, added a pair of free throws and hauled down seven boards.

"He makes us a whole different team when he's in there," Arneson said of his first "big" player ever at Meadows.

Geegan also finished with 16 points,

Green bagged 13, John Hogan 14, Steve Breitbeil six, Ken Hatfield, Steve Cage and Gary Olson four and Randy Kramer two.

Psychotherapy can come in many forms

(This column is presented by Forest Hospital in Des Plaines, a fully accredited 150-bed psychiatric hospital widely known for its intensive programs in psychiatric treatment, research, education and community service.)

Therapy comes in many forms, perhaps the broadest of which is psychotherapy for the mentally ill.

Psychotherapy, according to Dr. Leon Salzman, professor of clinical psychiatry at the Alfred Einstein School of Medicine in New York, is the process of trying to comprehend the development of, as well as the present source of discomforts for the individual. Then it must be decided what specific form of psychotherapy is the most suitable for that patient.

Be it individual or group therapy of a modification of these or psychoanalysis, Salzman is a proponent of behavioral therapy for the immediate relief of the patient's distressing symptoms.

"Many psychiatrists won't employ behavioral therapy or behavior modification, I think, because it's not a cure for their patients' sicknesses," said Salzman. "It's not valid for treating sickness, just the symptoms. In order to use behavior modification, one must understand the disorder is not cured. The patient is just more comfortable and that in itself seems to be a worthwhile goal.

"BEHAVIORAL THERAPY," Salzman explained, "is an attempt to alter a particular uncomfortable symptom through conditioning techniques. It grows out of the recognition that a great deal of human behavior is conditioned. One can and does condition and modify another's behavior throughout life. Behavioral therapy can only be used to alter behavior that is conditioned behavior in the first place.

"A good bit of behavior that we see in mental illness is not the result of some particular or specific conditioning process, but is based on some more extensive underlying situation, call it the character structure of the individual. For this illness, then, a different therapy is indicated. However," said Salzman, "the symptoms of this illness may be so distressing, it would be best to eliminate them right away.

"For instance," he said, "tuberculosis is a disorder with a great many manifestations but the cough is the most obvious and most distressing. The cough can be eliminated in a variety of ways, one of which is behavioral conditioning, and it is desirable to do so. The cough is removed, but the underlying problems of tuberculosis remain for other kinds of treatment.

"Behavior modification works like this," said Salzman. "If a person performs a certain act and he is punished for it, he's not likely to perform the act again for fear of further punishment. Rewarding a person for a certain act is an even more effective way of altering behavior. It's the method used in child rearing, which is actually the same as behavior modification and conditioning — a system of rewards and punishments."

SOME ILLNESSES with distressing symptoms that can be treated by behavioral therapy are the phobias of which there are 212 named varieties. A person can immediately be trained not to become crippled from a fear of heights or small rooms or airplanes at the same time he is trying to get at the reason he has this fear.

Correcting a myth about fats in milk

Our family has been drinking 2 percent low fat milk for sometime now. I have just been told that calcium from milk cannot be absorbed without the cream. Also, fat is equally necessary for absorption of vitamins A, D, E and K.

Does this mean we should use regular milk instead of low-fat milk in order to get the most benefits from it?

You didn't get that misinformation from a physician or a reputable qualified nutritionist. It is a good example of a lot of incorrect propaganda put out by a handful of unqualified, self-appointed health experts, without medical credentials and without a good standing within circles of sound nutrition.

You do not need the fat in the milk to absorb the calcium. That is pure hokum. Furthermore, there is more calcium in the two percent fat milk product because it is fortified with nonfat milk solids that contain calcium. It also contains more protein per glass. There is even more calcium and protein per glass in the fortified skim milk products.

You have listed the fat soluble vitamins. Actually, vitamin A is not very dependent upon fat for absorption.

You must go to a lot of trouble to eliminate fat from your diet. That two percent fat milk you drink has about a third of its calories from fat. Vegetables, including corn (corn oil), beans and most others, plus many fruits, including such things as raspberries all have some fat in them. It is a small portion by weight but often a significant part of the calories. The problem then is limiting the fat in most people's diet, not increasing it for the purposes you mentioned.

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

QUITE FRANKLY, some of the poor advice given by some non-medical, so-called experts is a public health hazard. Many of these individuals have had little or no scientific training. One prominent public figure responsible for much of this misinformation got her master's degree in the 1930s and apparently hasn't profited a great deal from the new information that has become available over the past quarter of a century.

She still gives out advice that fits with walking across the country to a rural school house for one to two miles after a morning of doing farm chores. Things have changed a lot since those rural days. We have developed a vast fund of new information on nutrition, and we have learned a lot about heart diseases which hardly existed when she got her master's degree.

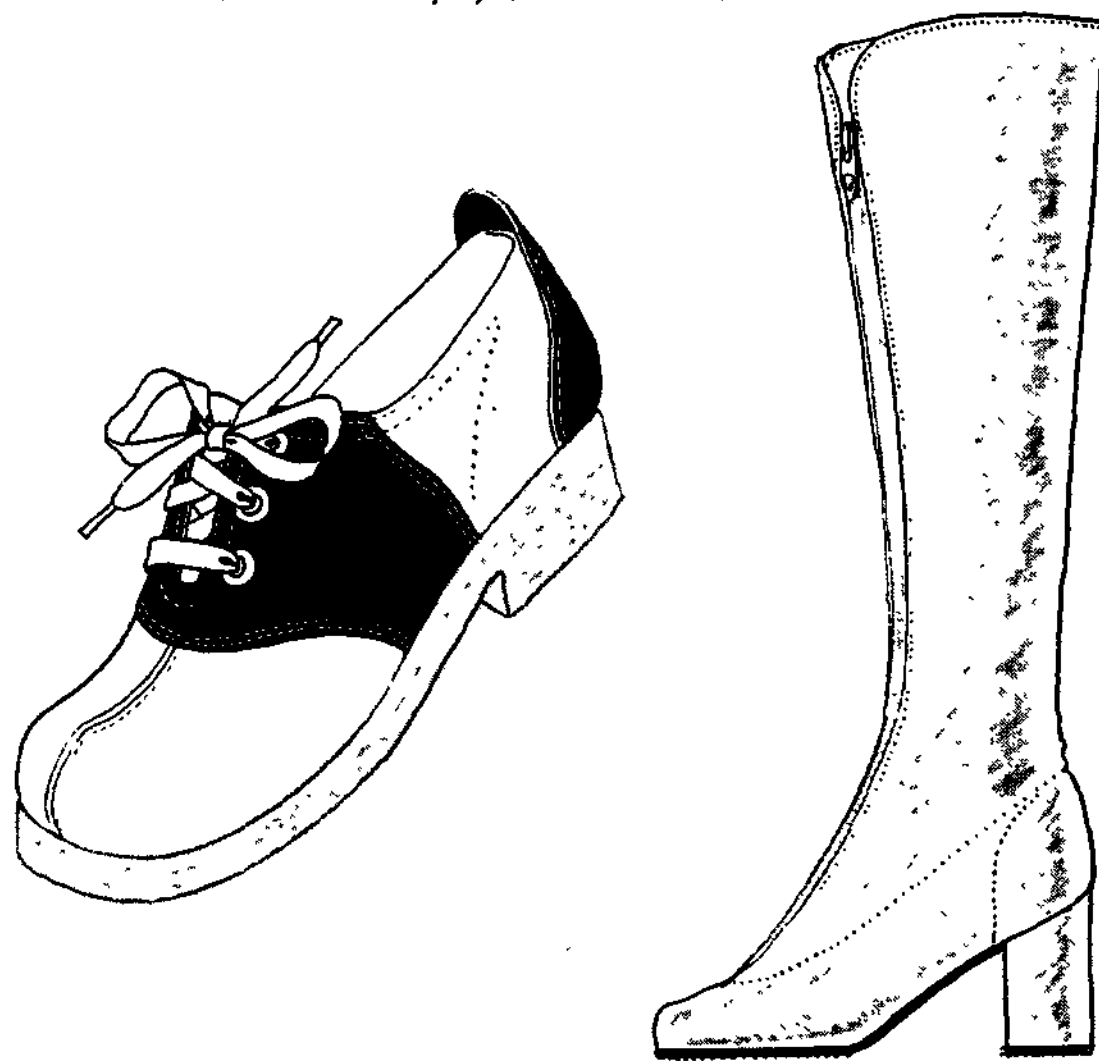

Such advice often runs counter to the important information from the American Heart Assn. and almost all reputable scientists dealing with heart disease. Much of this advice disseminated freely to the public has done a lot to undermine the good efforts of such organizations in preventing people like you from having heart disease. I don't think under these circumstances I can be too harsh when it involves the public's health.

'Elongated' coin collecting now a fast-growing facet

For those unfamiliar with "Elongated" coins, they are best described as a normal coin of the realm compressed and stretched to a piece usually twice its length. In running the coin through a series of steel rollers, one roller equipped with a message, acts as a die and imprints a message on one surface of the distorted coin. The other surface maintains a recognizable image of its original design.

The idea stemmed from placing a coin on a railroad track years ago when travelers wanted a memento of a town or place they had visited by train.

Then someone came up with the idea of impressing the words of the Lord's Prayer on one side with their name and date on the other. Today, these elongateds may appear in two categories. "Store Cards," which give the name and address of a business or collector, and "Commemoratives" honoring everything from wars to picnics.

SOME OF THE more popular subjects covered in the elongated series are the "Lord's Prayer," the "Pledge of Allegiance," "Kilroy was Here," "Smile," "Watergate," "The Energy Crisis" and many others. The "Shalom" slogans are printed on Israeli coins; "God Bless the Queen" on English coins, and commemoratives to the Japanese Expo '70 appear on Japanese coins.

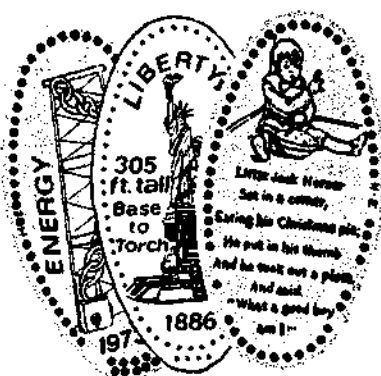

Elongateds are made by running the coin through a machine similar in nature to a jeweler's mill. Some of the die-rollers are actually engraved by hand while others are processed with electrically etched photography to incorporate more detail.

COLLECTING ELONGATED coins is one of the fastest growing facets in numismatics today. Many popular subjects are being produced on everything from one cent pieces to half-dollars and some find their way into the coin market at many times their original face value. Which is perfectly legal so long as they are not intended to defraud.

Interested readers may like to write Lee Martin, House of Elongateds, 1241-J East Chestnut, Santa Ana, California, 92701 for a FREE brochure. Please enclose a stamped, self addressed No. 10 size envelope.

Two exemptions can be claimed if 1 allotment shared

Q. I'm in the Armed Forces. I've authorized an allotment for my dependent mother. She uses the allotment to support herself and my sister. Can I claim a dependency exemption for both of them?

A. Yes. If the allotment provides more than half of their support and they otherwise qualify, you may claim exemptions for both of them, even though the allotment was authorized only for your mother.

Ask the IRS

Q. Each year I pay $20 for my automobile license plates. Can I deduct this amount on my Federal income tax return?

A. No Such fees are generally not deductible. However, if your state bases part of the tag fee on the value of the auto, that portion is deductible as a personal property tax.

Q. I was chosen by the congregation to represent them as a delegate to a church convention. Can I deduct my travel expenses to the convention as a charitable contribution?

A. Yes. An uncompensated duly elected delegate attending a convention of any qualified charitable organization, such as a church, may deduct his actual unreimbursed expenses for travel and transportation, and a reasonable amount for meals and lodging while away from home overnight in connection with the convention.

However, the delegate may not deduct personal expenses for sightseeing, fishing parties, theater tickets, night clubs, etc. The travel, meals and lodging and any other expenses for the delegate's spouse and children are also nondeductible personal expenses.

Application still good-after 2½ years

THE HERALD

Thursday, February 21, 1974

Section 2 —7

Q. When I was 65 I filed my application for Social Security so that I could qualify for Medicare benefits at that age. I haven't drawn any benefits as I have been working steadily for the last 2½ years. I will definitely be quitting work in June, 1974. Do I have to file another claim, or do anything else to start my checks coming again?

A. You do not have to file a new application. Come into the office sometime around the middle of April, 1974, to discuss your retirement date, and we will help you complete the necessary form to start your benefit checks. Please bring in the figures for your 1974 earnings when you come in to start your checks.

Q. I need some information about Medicare. I was in Florida for a month and got sick down there and had doctor bills of $89. When I got back to Indiana, I still had to continue treatments with my doctor, and my bills are about the same and still continuing. Do I have to meet the deductible in both states or do I just have to meet one deductible? How do I handle it? Thanks.

A. You only need to meet one deductible of $60 for the year. However, you will have to send the bills you incurred in Florida to the carrier for that state, and your Indiana bills will have to go to the Indiana carrier. Addresses for both carriers are in your Medicare handbook. If you have any questions, get in touch with our office.

Q. My mother recently passed away. At the time of her death, she was receiving $110 a month off father's record as his widow. She had also received a funeral benefit of $255 at the time he died. We would like to know if there is also a funeral benefit for her and how to go about applying for it?

A. There is no lump-sum death payment for a widow who was drawing benefits off of her husband's record. If she had her own number and had worked under Social Security, there is a possibility of a death payment based on her own record. You should check her papers very carefully for any such possibility, and then get in touch with us.

Q. I'm 16 and as far as I know I've never had a Social Security number. When I applied for one the other day, I was told it will be several weeks before I get it. Why?

A. All applications for Social Security numbers are now being screened against Social Security central files in Baltimore, Md., to make sure a second number is not issued to the same person.

Some parents get a Social Security number for their child when he is very young and the child may not be aware that he already has a number. By searching the central records, Social Security can be certain that only one number is given to each individual so work and earnings can be credited correctly. If you think you are going to need a Social Security number, you should apply for it at least several weeks before you will have to use it.

Homefinders, Realtors

ERA member broker with offices in Antioch
Arlington Heights

Palatine
Schaumburg
Streamwood
Investment Division, Palatine

What is Homefinders, Realtors?

The name says it all . . . a group of well over 100 skillfully trained individuals ready to assist clients in all their real estate needs! Homefinders come in all shapes and sizes, ages and personalities, but they have at least one thing in common, their quest for progress.

Progress is the watchword at Homefinders!

Homefinders is a young company with a phenomenal growth rate. They began doing business with only two offices in June, 1967. In December, 1973, Antioch became the eighth Homefinder office location.

Within the next few weeks, a ninth office will open in Roselle and the Schaumburg office will be relocated to 708 E. Higgins Rd., Schaumburg, which will be a more convenient site for clients in that area. An office in Libertyville is scheduled to open in April.

With the addition of the eighth, ninth and tenth offices, Homefinders will be able to offer complete real estate service from DuPage County north to the Wisconsin state line.

In addition to the residential offices, Homefinders has a Commercial Investment Division in the Palatine office headed by Dave Hanner, vice president of Homefinders. Hanner has years of training and experience in that phase of real estate.

Homefinders is a member of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors, the Elgin Board of Realtors, the Waukegan Lake County Board of Realtors, MAP Multiple Listing Service, Town & Country Coop. Listing Service, Elgin Multiple Listing Service and Waukegan-Lake County Multiple Listing Service.

Homefinders recently became the exclusive agents for the sale of condominium office space in an architecturally-striking building to be constructed in the heart of Arlington Heights. This is a new concept that will enable business and professional people to have all the advantages of ownership, while enjoying minimum responsibility for upkeep and maintenance.

The firm was a pioneer in joining ERA, (Electronic Realty Associates), a nationwide wirephoto network of Realtors which revolutionized the utilization of a referral service in marketing real estate. This system enables a seller to have his home marketed nationally, as well as locally.

Homes are sold through exposure and ERA gives a seller's home double action selling power. First, the Homefinders' sales staff is in constant touch with qualified local buyers. Second, because of the ERA network, photo listings of sellers' homes are fed into

John Cameron Swayze

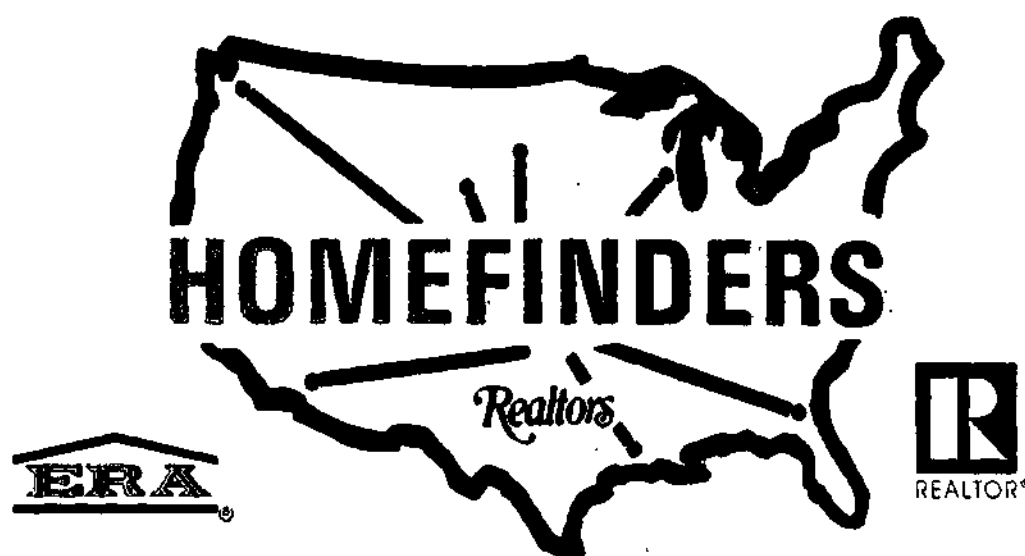

Now on national spot television for Homefinders, Realtors, and other ERA member brokers

the ERA national system to be exposed on demand to people in all parts of the country moving here. If a person is being transferred, he can actually survey the home market in the area to which he is moving in just six minutes, without leaving his home!

Homefinders' latest and greatest achievement, through the efforts of ERA, was acquiring the services of John Cameron Swayze to advertise the ERA system nationally on television. As most people know, Swayze does not advertise a product or service unless he personally believes in it.

"Take it from me," says Swayze, "ERA is the best way to take the pain out of relocating."

Progress

is the watchword at Homefinders!

In 1973 Homefinders, Realtors, participated in sales exceeding $40 million, some in cooperation with other real estate brokers. We appreciate the confidence of our clients, which made that remarkable figure possible. Without you we could not prosper and grow. We pledge to continue our search for new and ingenious methods in order to better serve you — the most important people in the world!

New home buyer plays role in quality control

As in practically every manufacturing process, inspection plays a major role in determining how well a house is built. But in the case of a house built by responsible builders, the final inspection is normally performed with you, the new owner, on the inspecting team.

This final inspection where the consumer is part of the quality control, known as the "key release," has two objectives, according to Jack Hoffman, chairman of Hoffman Rosner Corporation, a Chicago area homebuilder and community developer.

"First, we want to make sure that any last minute adjustments are properly noted so that corrective action can be taken as quickly as possible. Second, and perhaps more important, we want to advise the new owner on the proper maintenance and operation of the home, so he can enjoy it with a minimum of problems."

Sometimes, the excitement of moving into a new home — especially for first-time buyers — can make them oblivious during the inspection to imperfections in a home which later become major annoyances. Therefore, Hoffman urges home buyers to give full attention to the inspection procedure and know what to look for.

To show what a key release inspection involves, a reporter accompanied a recent Hoffman Homes buying couple, William and Sharon Haugh, while they made such an inspection of their new four-bedroom, 2½-bath split level Granville model at Westlake in west suburban Bloomingtondale.

The Haughs met Bob Prill, manager of the company's Westlake service department, at 9 a.m. in the morning of the inspection, and this is how it went:

Despite a heavy snowfall, the couple and Prill tromped around the exterior of the home first, looking for any structural defects. They noted the need for a paint touchup on wood trim above the garage door and a possible leak in one of the gutters. Prill noted the concern and asked the Haughs to inform the company if there is a leak after the first thaw.

Once inside, the trio made a thorough inspection of the home and its equipment.

Haugh, 27, a steel salesman for Western American Steel Co. in Des Plaines, fished into his pocket for a list of notes and questions that he and his wife had prepared in advance. Sharon, bristling with enthusiasm, offered that she had, in fact, visited the house "every day" since construction began. Previously the couple lived in nearby Glendale Heights.

"I feel I already know this house like the back of my hand," offered the young mother of two daughters, a nurse now employed part time at North Riverwood Center in Mundelein.

On the Haugh's prepared checklist of repairs were such entries as: a bent corner on an air register in the living room; a warped tile on the family room floor; the door frame in the master bedroom has a nick in it; there is some hardware missing on the inside of the garage door; wood trim around the exterior of the garage door needs a paint touchup; patch the dent in wall behind door caused by handle as a result of missing door-stopper.

For his part, Prill methodically noted, in writing, every request for an adjustment, answered questions and described the entire operation of the house.

At the same time, as the group moved from room to room, Prill answered a number of questions that the Haughs had jotted down in advance, such as:

What size and type of bulbs do you use in the living room chandelier?

Is the gas log starter in the fireplace hooked up? How do you start it?

Is the dishwasher connected? (While replying "yes," Prill also located the water cutoff valve for the dishwasher and showed where the plumbing was roughed in for future addition of a disposer.)

Isn't there supposed to be a door stopper at the main entry?

While inspecting for connection of all utility lines, Prill reviewed each piece of equipment: dishwasher; water cutoff valve; kitchen exhaust fan; how to remove filters for cleaning; furnace; humidifier; water softener; washing machine and dryer; and electric service box.

In the best fire-kicker tradition, Sharon tested every faucet in the house. Water closets were tested. Doors and windows were opened and closed.

"Did you know that these windows are removable?" asked Prill, demonstrating how the windows snap in or out of the spring mounted frames. "You can adjust the tension with these screws," he explained.

During the inspection tour Prill located product literature and warranties for all equipment in the house, noting: "The appliances and equipment are warranted by the individual manufacturers. I suggest that you fill out and mail the warranty cards as quickly as possible. And please read the booklets that come with the equipment. It can save you a lot of grief later."

To complete the "key release," Prill and the Haughs compared notes to be sure that every adjustment previously noted by the couple had been put on Prill's checklist, as well as any discovered during the inspection. All parties then signed a letter of agreement concerning adjustments.

Replying to a question from Mrs. Haugh, Prill commented that the most important work would be finished in a week to 10 days. Some questions, like a possible leak in a gutter, would have to wait until the first thaw.

Prill also presented the couple with two booklets.

One is a "New Home Warranty and Service Policy." It has been prepared by the Home Builders Association of Chicago and adopted as the warranty booklet for all Hoffman Homes.

The other is "Your New Home and How to Take Care of It," a booklet prepared by the National Association of Home Builders describing a host of routine maintenance matters and suggestions.

As Jack Hoffman explained later, the key release inspection has been a basic part of the Hoffman Homes operation for some time.

"Considering the thousands of parts that go into a home — from nails and

Swayze campaigns for ERA

When television audiences see John Cameron Swayze on Channel 2 and Channel 5, they will simultaneously be informed of Homefinders Realtors' participation in the ERA "moving machine."

On the television commercials, Swayze is the official spokesman for ERA, the national network of real estate brokers established by Electronic Realty Associates.

Homefinders is the exclusive ERA broker in the northwest suburbs.

The ERA "moving machine," as explained by John Cameron Swayze is the use of telephone facsimile equipment to help a home buyer in one part of the country select his home in another. Through its electronic transmitting and receiving device, ERA provides "living room" shopping for persons seeking residences elsewhere, usually because of company transfers. The man or woman can view six pictures of different homes in the new community at one time and make a preference prior to visiting the area and seeing the house in person.

Swayze appears in four different television commercials which illustrate the reason home owners should buy or sell through ERA brokers, including Homefinders.

"Because of this sensational combination of John Cameron Swayze, our ERA association and television exposure, we are in a tremendous position to assist buyers and sellers of residential property throughout this area," asserts Robert L. Zaun, president of Homefinders. "This is particularly true in showing homes to transferees from other areas of the country."

The Swayze commercials on WBBM-TV and WMAQ-TV are part of a national advertising campaign sponsored by ERA, which includes newspaper advertising, brochures and film strips in addition to television.

Homefinders maintains sales offices in Palatine, Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Schaumburg, Streamwood, Buffalo Grove, Antioch, Lake Zurich and the soon-to-be-opened Roselle office.

Homefinders also has a commercial and investment division located at 235 N. Northwest Hwy. in Palatine. David Haner, vice president of the firm, heads up this division.

Homefinders is a member of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors, the Elgin Board of Realtors, M.A.P. Multiple Listing Service, Town & Country Cooperative Listing Service, the Elgin Multiple Listing Service.

Check wheeze

A young child's wheeze may not be caused by asthma.

Dr. Arthur H. Rosenblum, a pediatric allergist, says the breathing difficulty could well be caused by something stuck in an airway.

Dr. Rosenblum cautions his colleagues to examine more closely the next time they see a wheezing child. If a foreign body in the child's airway is neglected, the physician says, it "may result in very serious pulmonary complications including lung abscess and pneumonia."

by DOROTHEA BROOKS

NEW YORK UPI — How much house can you afford?

The traditional answer to that question was a house priced up to two and one-half times your annual income, but that was before inflation, 8-9 per cent interest rates and soaring property taxes.

A better rule of thumb today involves not the purchase price of a house but the annual cost of owning it in terms of your income.

If you buy a house, according to today's conventional wisdom, it should cost no more than 25 per cent of your net income, or take-home pay, says Art Watkins, consumer money management authority.

Watkins considers housing costs in his new book, "Dollars and Sense," Quadrangle $7.95, a guide to spending and saving in all areas of family money.

The rule now, he says, allows up to 20 per cent of annual net income for basic housing costs — property taxes, mortgage payments, insurance — with another 5 per cent for heating, upkeep and repairs. A family should figure, also, on spending another 5 per cent annually on household appliances, utility bills and other such accessory costs, although not directly related to home purchase.

Thus, with a take-home income of $10,000 a year, a family could spend up to $2,500 or $208 a month for mortgage payments, property taxes, insurance, heating bills, maintenance and upkeep. A net income of $15,000 would permit $3,750 or $312 a month for those expenses.

Because of variables such as the amount and length of mortgage needed to purchase a house, the property tax rate in a community, even the difference in the cost of living between metropolitan and rural areas, one family with a $10,000 net income might be able to afford a $40,000 house, while another might find it difficult to manage one for $30,000.

For example, Watkins notes, the annual property taxes on a $30,000 house might run no more than $600 to $700 a year in one area, but up to three times as much in another area.

While it is wise to try to stay within the 25 per cent rule, Watkins says, you may stretch that rule and pay more if your income is on the rise, or if you have a tidy nest egg that permits buying a house with a large down payment and a comparatively small mortgage, thus reducing monthly mortgage payments.

On the other hand, he suggests, if you have reached an income plateau and your earnings are not likely to increase in the future, it's prudent to stay below the 25 per cent level.

This also may hinge on other family expenses. For example, a family with growing children and possibly more on the way, would do well to be conservative.

How much a family can spend on a house, can be determined only by that family. The figure is monthly income minus all other essential monthly expenditures. The difference is what a family considers essential.

As a starting point, Watkins recommends, determine what you now spend for housing. Then decide where you are able, and willing, to pare other nonhousing expenses to make money available for a house.

It's easy to figure the costs of buying and owning a home.

Just fill in the blanks below and do some simple arithmetic:

Cash To Buy and Move In

Cash down payment — 5 to 35 per cent; on the lower side for a new house, high side for used house $_____

Closing costs — for title insurance, mortgage, other fees: about 1 to 2 per cent of house price, more or less depending on house $_____

Lawyer's fee 1/2 to 1 per cent of house price $_____

Annual property taxes — up to 100 per cent of the annual property taxes payable in advance $_____

Insurance — roughly 1-2 per cent of house price, usually payable in advance $_____

Moving and settling-in expenses — $500 to $1,000 on up, depending on house, improvement, furniture and equipment required $_____

Contingency — 1/2 to 1 per cent of house price $_____

Total cash required to buy and move into house $_____

Monthly Expenses

Mortgage payment — Principal $_____ Interest $_____

Property taxes — 1/12 of annual taxes $_____

Insurance — 1/12 of annual premium $_____

Structural upkeep and maintenance — 2 to 3 per cent of house price divided by 12 $_____

Central heat $_____

Air conditioning $_____

Other $_____

Annual Income Tax Break

This results since property taxes and mortgage interest payments are deductible.

Total annual property taxes and mortgage interest payments from above $_____

Annual federal income tax savings — 10 to 50 per cent of total on above line, depending on income-tax bracket $_____

Annual savings on state income taxes $_____

Annual income tax savings — total of last two lines $_____

Annual Ownership Cost

Total monthly home ownership costs, multiplied by 12 $_____

Subtract annual income-tax savings $_____

Net annual home ownership cost $_____

Le ronde construction under way

Construction is well underway on the unique Le ronde office building located at 950 Lee St. in Des Plaines and should be ready for spring occupancy, reports Marv Kingdon, director of Commercial-Investment Division of Wm. L. Kunkel & Co., Realtors.

With a location just a few blocks from the business center of Des Plaines and the railroad commuter station, Le ronde is an ideal office site for professional services, regional offices, manufacturer's representatives or corporate sales offices.

Built on concrete columns, the approximately 30,000 sq. ft. building includes open ground floor parking for 80 cars. The exterior is finished in buff, decorative fluted blocks.

Designed by architects Erickson & Stevens, the steel, wood and concrete building features a free standing glass elevator surrounded by the 60 foot circular courtyard. All offices face the courtyard, which includes flowers and hanging plants and seats suspended by chains. The four plexiglass skylights in the dome of the building are surrounded by unusual rough sawed beams and decking.

An elevator or monumental staircase will lead to all offices. These will be finished to fit individual tenants' requirements. Among the deluxe features of the Le ronde are wall-to-wall carpeting, acoustical drop ceilings, air conditioning and janitorial services.

For more information on leasing, contact the leasing and management agents: Wm. L. Kunkel & Co., Realtors, 734 Lee St. in Des Plaines or call 298-5055.

Can rebuild old estates into apartment complexes

Old and gracious estates rebuilt into modern multiplex buildings could well result because of the current energy crisis.

Marshall C. Dennison, president and chief executive officer of Associated Mortgage Companies, Inc., says that these old and spacious homes make for ideal apartment communities when remodeled, both inside and out, as part of a neighborhood renovation package.

Dennison notes that sites for these new apartment communities can be found in the once-affluent sections of a city or the suburbs immediately bordering these areas.

"No new residential buildings need be added now," he observes. "Cultural and recreational facilities should be provided — utilizing existing structures."

For example, Dennison points out that an old garage could well be converted into an eye-catching as well as functional neighborhood cultural center.

"The overall concept is practical partly because of the energy crisis plus the moratoria on new home construction in some areas of the nation."

"Reshaping these old properties is an exciting challenge for architects and engineers. They'll have a real opportunity to sharpen their innovative skills plus finding ways to save energy," Dennison declares.

Green spaces should be maintained and new roads built, both to improve access to the multiplexes and to limit unnecessary automobile traffic.

"Creative landscape planning would make it possible to retain vast green spaces for the present while earmarking some of that land for new building projects when the energy crisis ends," Dennison continues.

He notes that some large estates could be converted into five or more apartments. Moderate sized homes could include three to five units and smaller houses, two or three apartments.

"The developer will select project sites with an eye to future building."

"Single-family homes or townhouses could be added later — and even mini-shopping centers."

Good management and building maintenance, inside and out, will make the new apartment communities attractive to potential occupants.

"Efficient security, with systems such as closed-circuit television providing 24-hour surveillance, will be needed," Dennison observes.

He sees these renovated communities as more than a challenge for builders.

"They can be a sound and viable investment both with immediate as well as long range opportunities," Dennison concludes.

screws to kitchen cabinets — it would be next to miraculous if any builder could produce a perfect home every time. The next best thing is to catch the defects as much as possible by inspections during the building process, and then take care of the rest as they crop up in the first year of ownership.

"The key release procedure assures that we and the owner together search out the things that need taking care of, and it helps the owner understand his obligations in running the home properly. Everything is above board, and it makes for a sound relationship."

The soundness of this philosophy is supported by the fact that about 25 per cent of Hoffman Homes sales are generated by referrals from satisfied buyers.

Bill and Sharon Haugh also think the builder's concern is great.

"In our first house we had to find things for ourselves and keep our fingers crossed that we were doing things right. We can do without that kind of mystery. With everything else we have on our mind now it's a great comfort to have this kind of support from the builder and to know where we can get help in the future if we need it."

WESTLAKE SERVICE manager Robert Prill (foreground) shows Sharon and William Haugh that the dishwasher in their new Granville home is connected and ready to go. Prill also locates warranty and instruction booklet for dishwasher and every other piece of equipment during the "key release" inspection.

First aid for your fireplace

Many a fireplace is going to be reactivated from its decorative status due to the national fuel crisis. Between the long disuse of the fireplace and the inexperience of the would-be user, there are going to be quite a few disappointments.

You may find yourself with a fireplace that puts out smoke but no heat. The problem could be anything — a clogged chimney, an improperly working damper or a poorly designed fireplace.

Make certain the damper works easily and that it opens and closes all the way.

Give the fireplace a good cleaning, vacuuming up into the flue as far as you can reach. To see if the flue is clogged, hold a piece of burning paper in the opening. If it burns well and the smoke goes up the chimney then the flue is clear and you can go ahead and build a fire.

IF THE SMOKE comes back in your face then the chimney may be clogged. Double check the damper and make certain it isn't partially closed.

If the chimney needs cleaning, better call in a professional. The exception — if you live in a one story house AND you are sure-footed. But chimney cleaning is messy as well as hazardous, so think twice.

You may have a fireplace that doesn't work well even with a clean chimney or a properly working damper. The problem may be the design. Builders' claims notwithstanding, a bigger fireplace isn't necessarily a better fireplace. Not unless it has a big flue to go with it.

TRY TO MEASURE both the fireplace opening and the flue opening. The flue area should be at least one-tenth the area of the fireplace opening. If it is less, then you are bound to have trouble.

You can't enlarge the flue. Cut down the size of the fireplace opening instead. Easiest method is to buy a metal hood and install it across the top of the opening.

Build a small fire in your fireplace to see just what you may have to do. With the fire going, hold a board or piece of sheet metal across the opening. Lower it until the fire seems to draw well. This will help you determine how large a hood you will need.

MAYBE THE HOOD is not enough, or more than you need. You can fill in the opening with masonry. The hearth can be built up with one or more layers of bricks. A vertical row of bricks can be added to each side.

Sometimes the opening is the right size but the damper may have been installed too low. Lowering the top of the opening in effect raises the height of the damper. The trouble may be outside rather than inside. Check the chimney. It should extend three feet above the top of the house. If it is too low it can be extended with a cap. Interference can come from overhanging branches. Have these pruned.

Kole's volume tops $36 million

Total sales volume for 1973 reported by Kole Real Estate, Ltd. exceeded $36 million and was up 51.4 per cent over 1972's total of $24,150,000.

This was despite a drop in volume during the last half of 1973, compared to sales and listings for the first six months, due to the tight money situation that hampered nearly everyone connected with residential real estate sales, according to Robert A. Kole, president of the eight-office firm in the northwest suburbs.

Leading the sales volume was Kole's Des Plaines office, with a record of nearly $9 million, followed by the Rolling Meadows and Wheeling offices with over $7 million each. These three offices boasted 12 senior salespeople who topped $1 million or more in real estate sales during the year, out of a total of 16 Kole members of the One Million Dollar Sales Club in 1973.

Over 1,000 transactions were recorded during the year, averaging some $36,000 each, said a Kole spokesman. In January, 1973, Bob Kole had predicted a volume of $35 million in residential sales for the year, and by Dec. 31, the total of sales and listings had reached $36,572,065.

"Sales figures for January, 1974, show a reversal of the downward trend which is normal in December, but was accentuated by the unfavorable economic situation in 1973," said Kole.

"We are optimistic that the home market will bounce back during the coming months, and our projection for 1974 shows $43 million in residential sales," Realtor Kole predicted.

Plans for the new year include expansion of the Commercial and Investment division, currently headquartered in the Kole office at 617 N. Main St., Mount Prospect, and possible addition of yet another residential sales office.

Kole Real Estate, Ltd. now has offices in Park Ridge, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Palatine, Barrington and Wheeling, with executive offices and training school at 1000 E. Northwest Hwy., Mount Prospect.

Robert A. Kole founded the firm which bears his name in 1965.

Hampton Court Apartments sold

Mace Cole, general sales manager of Baird & Warner's Commercial and Industrial Sales Division, was sole broker in the sale of Hampton Court Apartments at Miner and Somerset Avenue in Arlington Heights.

The seller was McHugh Construction Company who built the deluxe 91-apartment project eight years ago in downtown Arlington Heights. The purchaser was Roann Developments, condominium specialists whose principal is Richard Stillerman.

Stillerman, who recently converted the Royal Dunton apartments to condominiums in downtown Arlington Heights and other luxury apartments in suburban locations, has announced plans for the conversion of Hampton Court. Cole will serve as special project consultant.

The 91 apartments at Hampton Court consist basically of two-bedroom units with a limited number of one and three bedroom units, and a few deluxe two-story maisonette apartments. Extensive physical improvements have been started and sales programming began Feb. 10.

Company opens new plant

The R. J. Frisby Manufacturing Co. recently opened its new plant at 1500 Chase St., Elk Grove Village.

The company, which was founded in Chicago by R. J. Frisby in 1944, moved to Elk Grove Village in 1962. That new factory was expanded twice before being abandoned for the present larger facility just completed.

Among the guests was Philip Crane, United States Representative from the 12th District.

Following the ribbon cutting ceremony, the guests assembled indoors, where R. J. Frisby, founder and president of the company, spoke briefly and thanked all who had contributed to the success of the company and the rapid completion of the new plant.

The company manufactures precision parts and components for a wide variety of machines, vehicles and appliances. The new plant encompasses 100,000 square feet and utilizes, with parking, five acres with another seven acres of vacant land for future expansion.

Get to know heating system

Although it took an energy crisis to make the introduction, most homeowners now have a nodding acquaintance with their heating system, notes the National Better Heating-Cooling Council.

More than anything else in your home — more than your color TV or your new reclining lounge chair — your home heating system is responsible for your family's comfort. Yet most homeowners do not know what kind of system they have, the Council says. They think it is either gas, oil, coal or electric.

These are only fuels which power the system, and can be compared to heating comfort the same way gasoline can be compared to driving comfort. Does it matter to your car whether you use brand X gasoline or brand Y? Only the car's construction will determine your driving pleasure.

The same goes for your heating system. There are basically three systems in use in this country — hydronics (modern hot water); forced warm air, and electric heating. Hydronics and forced warm air are central heating systems. Electric heating generally operates on an individual room basis.

In a hydronic system, water is heated in a boiler and circulated through small tubing to baseboard heating panels located on the outside walls of the home. It can use gas, oil, coal and even electricity. With hydronic systems, it is possible to have thermostatic control for different 'zones' of the house so that bedrooms, for instance, can be kept cooler during the day when they are unoccupied.

Forced warm air uses a furnace to heat the air which is circulated through ducts to the various rooms by a fan or blower. Forced warm air can be powered by all fuels, too.

Electric heating works in the same way a toaster does. A coil is embedded in a baseboard unit which is mounted on the wall or in cable embedded in the ceiling. Each room usually has its own thermostat and operates independently of the others. For best results, the thermostats should be low voltage. If they are high voltage, they will not be very sensitive to temperature changes. As its name implies, electric heating only uses electricity.

It's most essential to learn some basic information to maintain your heating system properly. Not only will it last longer, but it will cost you less to operate. Your local fuel dealer or utility can show you what to do. In the case of hydronics, it may only require a few drops of oil in the circulator, with warm air you may have to adjust the belt on the fan. With electric baseboard, keep the elements clean.

Whatever it is, get real friendly. It pays.

First Federal reports growth

Despite some serious ups and downs which plagued the economy during 1973, First Federal Savings of Chicago was able to report gains in practically every activity over 1972. The year's end saw savings at just under a billion dollars, mortgages on the books at over a billion and assets at $1,307,723,296.

E. Stanley Enlund, board chairman and chief executive officer, in his annual report to First Federal account holders, pointed out that, "Economic trouble started in April when, in a series of moves to help stem inflation, the Treasury went into the retail savings market — and, tragically, money moved out of savings institutions across the country."

"Then in early July rates on savings instruments were increased. And authorities removed the upper limits of interest on the so-called 'wild-card' savings certificates offered by S&L's and banks. In the next several months well over a billion dollars moved out of S&L's. In fact, in September First Federal had to declare a temporary moratorium on mortgage lending because sufficient funds weren't available for new commitments."

"At the year's end," said Enlund, "savings relationships appeared to be getting back on track and it looks as though we may soon turn the corner regarding savings inflows. And we have been able to thaw the freeze on loans by making mortgage money available on a limited basis: to our savers, our present mortgage customers and prime real estate sources."

"With the higher cost of getting money to loan, it's necessary to charge more for a mortgage loan. Unfortunately, there's an antiquated 1879 statutory restriction in Illinois — an 8 per cent rate ceiling on residential mortgages."

"Before mortgage money becomes generally available to all of us who live in Illinois," said Enlund, "the 8 per cent state usury limit on residential mortgages must be raised by the General Assembly if current regulated interest rates on savings remain at the present bases and interest rate patterns in the money market continue close to present levels."

Enlund said that while the political arena problems, the energy shortages and inflation have been real, there has been overreaction. "But I think business and consumers are beginning to see things in a calmer perspective. We look for a sizable but short-lived drop in housing starts. Yet, 1974 has the potential of being one of the peak years of recent history in volume of savings and in housing — plus its critically needed financing."

County mortgages drop 1%

Sagging year-end activity brought the 1973 Cook County real estate market almost level with the 1972 totals, County Recorder Sidney R. Olsen announced in his annual report.

A scarcity of lendable funds, maximum interest rates and high down payments dampened the number of mortgages from 99,765 to 98,724, down 1 per cent. Highest ever was 102,144 in 1955.

Mortgage consideration dipped 1.5 per cent from the previous year's record of $4,251,176,873 to $4,186,444,254, enough to put that figure as the second highest.

Demand for housing remained high with transfers edging up 3.4 per cent from 82,327 to 85,182. Most transfers ever filed was 101,168 in 1955.

Activity through July outpaced the year earlier, but in the fall market conditions began taking its toll and by year-end had cooled considerably, dropping sharply in December by about 20 per cent.

Busiest month for transfers was July with 9,040 and, for mortgages, May, with 10,506. Least active month was December with 4,634 transfers and 5,488 mortgages.

The year was also marked by the start of a major renovation of the recorder's office. Private quarters for closing transactions were constructed on the second floor of the County Building and the first stages of modernization began in the main floor office.

Truly fine living in a home designed and built for you.

Stripping wood furniture

Experts differ on method

by FRAN HECKART

In these days of shortages, crises and erratic furniture deliveries, many people are looking for ways to rejuvenate old furniture. Whether one attempts to do the job at home, have it done by an experienced wood stripper or at a commercial process place, the intended goal is the same. A functional, attractive piece of natural wood furniture.

Paul Abel, a professional in wood and antique restoration, has his own philosophy as to why old furniture is gaining popularity.

"Furniture affords a good feeling and security when people know it's going to last," he said. "It's not like going out and having to buy three dining room sets in a lifetime when you have one good solid set."

Abel, who does wood stripping in the kitchen of his large Arlington Heights home, appreciates the beauty and quality of old furniture and antiques.

"THINGS that people once took for granted are becoming a luxury," he surmised.

"People used to joke about things their mothers grew up with. It's not the age," said Abel, "but the scarcity and rarity that make a piece valuable today."

In a time when scarcity means value, it's no laughing matter anymore, he said almost reverently.

Abel's advice for those interested in acquiring old furniture is simple. "Go ahead and pick up 'new' antiques as well as the traditional pieces. If it can be used — it's worth restoring."

Three generations without a fire in his wife's family home in Milwaukee started Woody Brothers of Mount Prospect on his way to many pleasurable hours of wood refinishing. That was 20 years ago and Brothers has been restoring furniture as a hobby ever since. The quiet, soft-spoken man has recently broadened his hobby to teaching wood stripping and chair caning in District 214 adult education classes.

BROTHERS SAYS that he enjoys teaching and has met students from all walks of life. Housewives, salesmen, executives, retired men and women, nuns and school teachers have all shared the same enthusiasm for his classes.

Although Brothers hopes to someday broaden his wood stripping hobby to a more profitable end, he is currently employed full-time.

Both Abel and Brothers love working with wood and strive for perfection in the quality and craftsmanship of each piece.

Neither has many favorable comments for the so-called commercial dipping processes.

In many larger, more careless operations the furniture is simply immersed in a hot chemical bath and left until the chemicals have stripped away the layers of paint and varnish. Paul Abel speaks vehemently against such places, maintaining that many valuable pieces have been ruined by such a process.

"THE CHEMICALS will eat through the wood as well as the paint," he said. Warping and remaining blotches of paint are other disadvantages cited by Abel.

Abel says the process method is especially bad for veneer finishes but is all right for some solid wood furniture — like oak. It's ideal for iron beds and surprisingly wicker will withstand the harsh process, according to Abel.

On the other side of the fence stands Marlyn Plotner. He is owner and operator of a franchise stripping business in Palatine.

Plotner uses Houch's process which consists of large vats of hot and cold chemicals and a neutralizer. Plotner's chemicals can do wonders in stripping furniture in minutes, rusty metals, broiler pans, brass beds, shutters and just about anything with a layer of crud or paint.

Plotner agrees that many of the stripping houses have left a bad reputation to overcome. "I try to be honest with customers and explain what the piece will probably look like — although no two are the same — as they have an idea of what to expect," he said.

Plotner also works with each piece along with the chemicals. Donning large rubber gloves, he scrubs each individual piece while it's in the chemical bath. Thus a piece is often out of the chemicals in a matter of minutes depending on how many layers of paint it had originally.

Good, clean work is what Plotner strives for at Marlyn Strips in Palatine. Initially a wooden piece goes into the cold tank of chemicals. When the old finish is off, Plotner dips it into the hot tank which chemically boils out stain and dirt. From there the piece is dipped into neutralizer which stops all chemical action.

STRIPPING AT home is hard work, says Marlyn, and quite rightly. How many people start on a set of four chairs only to never finish the job?

Plotner believes the biggest mistake people make is to attempt stripping at home and says he's had few complaints about his work.

Houch's process strips the wood of everything. Thus, many of the surfaces tend to have a "bleached" look which usually means that the piece will have to be completely refinished rather than restored. The chemical also tends to raise the grain of the wood so it will need a light sanding.

Paul Abel feels that restoration is the word for antiques. He restores antiques to the most natural state possible. This does not mean that they need to look like sterile copies, he said, but will have a well-aged natural patina and lots of character.

"IT'S THE ANTIQUITY that's important, and should be preserved," he said.

Abel says that a piece may take as long as three weeks and cost more than it would commercially but that this is a small investment when compared with the ultimate value of the piece.

He considers restoration an art and warns amateurs against just "starting out."

"If you get a piece home and don't know how to begin — don't touch it," he emphasized. "Go to the library and research it. Find out what exactly you have then find someone knowledgeable for advice on how to reclaim it."

Abel believes that antiques are a matter of taste but that you can't go wrong investment-wise with them.

"New furniture depreciates," he said, "but whether bought for fun or an investment, you can't go wrong with old furniture. It only increases in value."

ABEL, who has restored hundreds of antiques including several pieces from the prestigious Potter Palmer mansion, has his own special technique and never uses sandpaper or water on the natural wood. He also uses all natural stains which he mixes himself and is reluctant to reveal details of his special methods.

"If you obtain a piece," he said, "live with it, get to know it before you make any attempts to restore it. It's more of a restoration and preservation process than just refinishing."

Woody Brothers also has his own pet formula for wood restoration. He prefers an "in" the wood finish rather than an "on" surface one. He uses linseed oil, turpentine and varnish to achieve a dull, natural satiny finish rather than a shiny one.

Brothers is not really an antique buff but just likes the beauty and quality of old furniture. In fact, he terms working with wood his first love — after his wife, of course.

HE USES a commercial-type stripper and a putty knife to remove the old finishes. He does this as many as three times, then uses a strong detergent for a final scrub. Then all the joints are reglued and any other necessary repair work done.

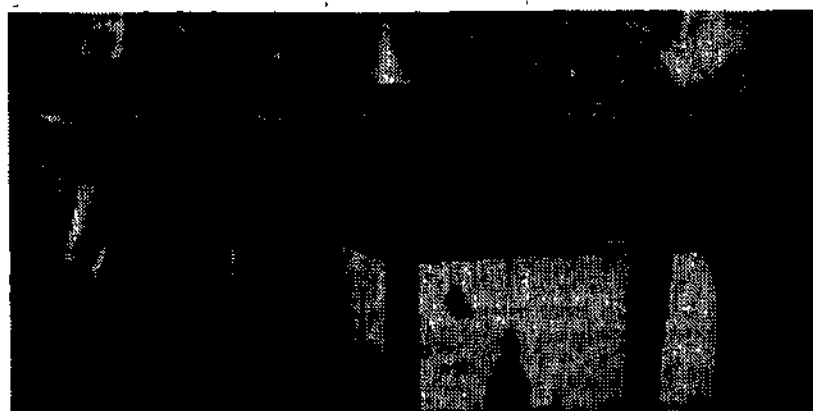

Brothers considers himself a self-taught instructor in wood stripping. He's familiar with all kinds of wood through experience and jokingly says that he should write a book someday.

There is no one good reference book on wood stripping, according to Brothers. "So many of them call for doing things to furniture that I would never do."

"Next to experience, a class is the best way to learn."

WORKING IN THE kitchen, Paul Abel uses his own techniques for restoring old furniture. He likes to preserve wood in the most natural state possible. Later this spring he hopes to move from kitchen to a shop.

BEFORE STRIPPING, this solid cherry table had several layers of paint and varnish. Paul Abel even found an inlaid leather top beneath paint.

AFTER STRIPPING, Paul Abel rubs the wood with oil to bring out the beauty and depth of the wood grain. He mixes his own stains.

Busy pair delay honeymoon

Kathleen Virginia Byrne and her bridegroom, John James Vondran, were too busy in their new jobs and in decorating their new apartment in Chicago to take a honeymoon.

The couple, who met as students at Marquette University, Milwaukee, were married Jan. 26 in a 3 p.m. mass in Our Lady of the Wayside Church, Arlington Heights. They plan a delayed honeymoon.

Kathleen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene E. Byrne, 1710 S. Fernandez, Arlington Heights, resided and worked in Paris, France, for a year following her graduation from Marquette. Now she is with Continental Bank and Trust Co., Chicago. John, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Vondran, Chicago, is with Motorola, Chicago.

For her wedding Kathleen chose a gown of antique white tulle trimmed at the neckline, waist and wrists with seed pearls. The straight-line gown had a short train. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a pearl-trimmed cap, and she carried a cascade of petite white roses, baby's breath and bachelor buttons.

MRS. NORA SLAVIN DUNN, Aurora, was Kathleen's maid of honor, and her bridesmaids were Kathleen McDermott and Mrs. Robert Weismueller, both of Chicago. Their gowns were in velvet, Nora's in purple, and the bridesmaids in plum, and they carried nosegays of pink carnations.

James Vondran, Chicago, was his brother's best man, and ushers were the bride's brother, Eugene E. Byrne, Arlington Heights, and Douglas Smith, Milwaukee.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Vondran

Among the 160 guests at the reception in the Como Inn were the bride's grandmothers from Philadelphia, Mrs. James DePalma and Mrs. Agnes Byrne.

Two hints for bread bakers

Dear Dorothy: Thought your readers might be interested in two very helpful hints about baking which I learned in a cooking school years ago. First, to make yeast doughs, bread, coffee cakes and so forth rise successfully, turn the oven on at 300 degrees for exactly 60 seconds. Turn oven off. This makes a cozy not-too-warm place to let your bread rise. Second, to ensure against sticking, grease cake pans with a mixture made by mixing thoroughly one part flour and two parts shortening. Now, may I ask a question? I've had excellent success making my own bread over the years. However, occasionally, after the loaves have risen and been placed in a 375-degree oven, they sink slightly in the middle. Could they have risen too far or was the dough not stiff enough? — Margaret Rauschenberg

Many thanks for the two helpful hints. Since I'm not a bread-baker myself, we'll have to appeal to the many experts among our readers for the answer you seek.

Dear Dorothy: One of my frustrations is the short life of batteries. We've got so many small battery-powered things around, I need a regular supply on hand. Has anybody ever found a way of adding to the life of these cells? — Marcia Thorsten

There are home battery-chargers, but they're not inexpensive. One of our readers reported a couple of years ago that he stored extra batteries in a plastic bag in the refrigerator, that he had kept check and hadn't found one to lose its power in two years.

Dear Dorothy: If you want your good cotton dresses to have body and look like new when ironed, never sprinkle them — just spray completely with spray starch. — Alice Mathews (Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Padlock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Bill proposes broader powers for FDA

The agency responsible for protecting consumers against contaminated mushrooms may finally be given the power to do the job.

The Nixon Administration has sent to Congress a bill asking broad new regulatory authority for the Food and Drug Administration, which is charged with ensuring that no hazardous substances reach the public in foods, drugs or cosmetics.

The bill would first of all, enable the FDA to inspect food, drug, medical device and cosmetic factories, and give it the power to subpoena records. Under present law, FDA inspectors can't inspect processors' records and can make only visual examinations.

"It is essential that the FDA possess sufficient authority to determine the manner in which food is being processed," Gardner said. He added that the FDA is asking subpoena authority similar to that of the Federal Trade Commission, which can, for example, demand test data from companies to determine whether it substantiates advertising claims.

The bill would also give the FDA the authority to detain suspect products for 20 days, similar to the detention power of the Agriculture Department.

"Presently, FDA's primary enforcement tool is judicial seizure," he told the Senate. "However, we have found that on a number of occasions, the suspected food has been shipped before judicial seizure can be accomplished." (This has been part of the problem with the mushrooms.)

Finally, the bill would increase criminal fines to $10,000 from the present $1,000 for first offenders and to $25,000 from the present $10,000 for each subsequent offense.

Another section of the legislative package would require labels of nonprescription drugs to list all active ingredients and their quantities, would require registration of foreign drug concerns and would prohibit exportation of uncertified human antibiotics.

TWO MAJOR clothes dryer manufacturers have warned consumers that certain fabric softeners can cause costly damage to their dryers.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Whirlpool Corp., which manufactures Kenmore dryers sold by Sears, urged customers to

by Monica Wilch Perin

use only fabric softeners specifically labeled as being non-harmful to dryers.

However, the companies would not specify which softeners they have found to be harmful and which have not.

According to a Sears spokesman, the company has found that "many softener-conditioners sold for use in dryers can cause a softening of the interior finish of Sears dryers."

"This may result in rust which can be transferred to clothing," he said. In addition, a Whirlpool spokesman said some softeners may clog lint screens and cause dryers to overdry or fail to turn off.

Such damage, since it is unrelated to product design, would not be covered by the warranties of either Sears or Whirlpool, officials said. They added that they will soon attach warning labels to their dryers, recommending that softeners be used only with great care.

The Wall Street Journal reported that soap and detergent industry sources have noted there are two kinds of fabric softener: a chemically treated bar or cloth, and aerosol spray. A spokesman for the manufacturer of Free 'N' Soft, a bar softener, said he did not believe the Sears warning applied to that product.

IN DECEMBER this column predicted that the lack of a national food policy or orderly exportation of foodstuffs was leading to the gambling of our diminishing grain reserves in the current oil game.

And now, the Department of Agriculture has disclosed that sales of U.S. wheat to the Middle East may more than double this fiscal year. Apparently attempting to placate the countries that have cut off oil to the U.S., the administration is selling them, as it were, our last kernels of wheat.

We may soon be lining up to pay a dollar for a loaf of bread, just like we're lining up to pay 58 cents for gas.

For a Happy Life

It's fun in February to:

1. Bake and frost some heart-shaped cookies.
2. Get a book of poems and read them aloud to yourself.
3. Try some ground beef that has been mixed with soybeans.
4. Write a surprise letter to a little 3-year-old.
5. Soak your fingertips in warm olive oil.
6. Rearrange kitchen utensils, cutlery and gadgets for greater efficiency.
7. Prepare homemade waffles with different syrups and serve with pork sausage at a Saturday night midnight supper.
8. Heed this by Somerset Maugham: "No matter what its miseries, life should be grasped."

Chicagoland is short on gas but not on cars and drivers. The answer is car pools. Car pools benefit everyone with more gas for personal use and greater availability when you need it. More car pools mean less traffic and safer driving conditions.

Here is something you can do about the energy crisis: Call The Herald and place your free "Car Pool Classified Ad." Just state your starting point, destination (if Chicago, give nearest intersection), job arrival and departure times, days of the week involved and phone number. (20 word maximum).

For example: Arlington Hts. to Chicago - Michigan and Ohio St. Arrive 8:30 a.m., leave 5:00 p.m. Mon. - Fri. 394-2400

More places to buy seeds

Mrs. R. from Schaumburg writes: "For the last two days, I haven't been able to do anything but read garden books and map out the plot for this year. Neighbors and family have been laughing at me for being a bit too early. Glad to see (by your column) that you agree with me."

"Please rush me 'Ten Best Planting Tips' quick!" writes Mrs. Robert E. B. of Palatine. "Do I ever need help. I can't even grow marigolds!" (Mrs. B., your tips are on the way along with a package of marigold seeds. Good luck!)

Attention, Mrs. Ellen Sohn of Arlington Heights: We don't want you to lose those horse chestnuts of yours from Berlin, Germany. I am getting the answer to your germinating problems, so hang in there. Help is on the way.

I'M GLAD TO KNOW there are so many responsive people out there. If you haven't sent for your free copy of "The 10 Best Planting Tips I Know," you can still get one if you hurry and send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to "The 10 Best Planting Tips," c/o Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Meanwhile, I've found a source for burpless, bitter-free slicing cucumber that mature in the popular American shape. Stokes Seed Co., Buffalo, N.Y. 14240, has them new this year, amazingly disease-resistant and just what the doctor ordered for people who ordinarily can't stomach cukes. Up to now, the only source has been the skinny, long Japanese type burpless. Bon appetite!

I can't say enough nice things about Park Seed Co., Greenwood, S.C. 29647.

Potting shed

by Mary B. Good

Their seeds are superb; their catalog is most helpful as to culture tips. Parks is a good source of bird-of-paradise seeds and other rare tropical plants, unusual begonia bulbs, calla lilies, scented geraniums (lemon, rose, apple), as well as Jack-in-the-Beanstalk (kudzu), tidy tips and much more.

EVER HEAR OF a mango? Jung Seed Co., Randolph, Wis. 53958, has that vegetable in its catalog. (Incidentally, mangos are cattle feed.)

Olds Seed Co., Madison, Wis., is especially good for potatoes and if you buy potato eyes instead of tubers, you'll get more for your money. Also available in the Olds catalog are sweet potatoes, native ferns, wildflowers. Olds had a crop failure with sage, but they do offer 21 kinds of herbs for sale.

Olds also has what it calls an inflation buster collection — 10 excellent varieties of corn, tomato, lettuce, radish, bean, beet, kohlrabi, carrot, squash and parsnip for $2.

And finally, Gurney Seed Co., Yankton, S.D. 57078, invites you to grow your own perfume — its catalog offers sweet-smelling clove pinks, as well as day lilies you can't kill with a club.

ALTHOUGH THE slim Japanese cucumber has long been the only burpless cucumber, "Sweet Slice" from Stokes Seed Co. are new this year. They can be eaten without peeling the dark green skin.

Seed demonstration at Klehm's Nursery

The how to, when to and where to of planting with seeds will be discussed Saturday and Sunday during demonstrations at the Charles Klehm and Son Nursery, Algonquin and Arlington Heights Roads, Arlington Heights.

Steven Cohan, Ph.D., of Pan American Seed Co., will talk on getting an early start on bedding plants, seed selection, sowing, planting of flowers and vegetables. Demonstration hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. both days with packages of zinnia and marigold seeds going to the first 1000 guests.

Mums cause rash

Chrysanthemums can cause a rash. "Mums" are one of the most common causes of skin rash among florists and gardeners, an article in a recent issue of Archives of Dermatology, a publication of the American Medical Association, points out. The offending ingredient, known medically as "sesquiterpene lactones," also is found in tulips. Leaving them out of the bouquet is the only preventive.

Lamaze childbirth film at library

A film on the Lamaze method of prepared childbirth will be shown Monday at 8 p.m. in Arlington Heights Memorial Library, 500 N. Dunton.

It is entitled "The Story of Eric" and is sponsored by Northern Illinois Chapter of ASPO (American Society for Psychoprophylaxis in Obstetrics). A question and answer period follows.

The showing is open to the public. Further information can be obtained from Mrs. Phillip Berger, Buffalo Grove, at 537-5788, or Mrs. Frank Tyska, Arlington Heights, 392-3641.

Another night of melodrama

Because of a demand for tickets, Village Theatre is presenting an additional performance tonight of its melodrama "Pure as the Driven Snow," or "A Working Girl's Secret."

The production, which begins at 8:30, is being staged at the Guild Playhouse, 620 Lee St., Des Plaines. Tickets, 250-3200. Other performances are tomorrow night and Saturday night.

Before I joined the Payroll Savings Plan, all I could save was string.

When it comes to saving money, most of us can use all the help we can get.

Joining the Payroll Savings Plan is one easy way to force yourself to save. When you sign up, an amount you specify is set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds. It's automatic. Every thing is done for you.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds -- for E Bonds, 3 1/2% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra 1/2%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970... with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

Stick with the plan and before you know it you'll have a bankroll waiting. That's when you'll find you can do a lot more with money than you can with string.

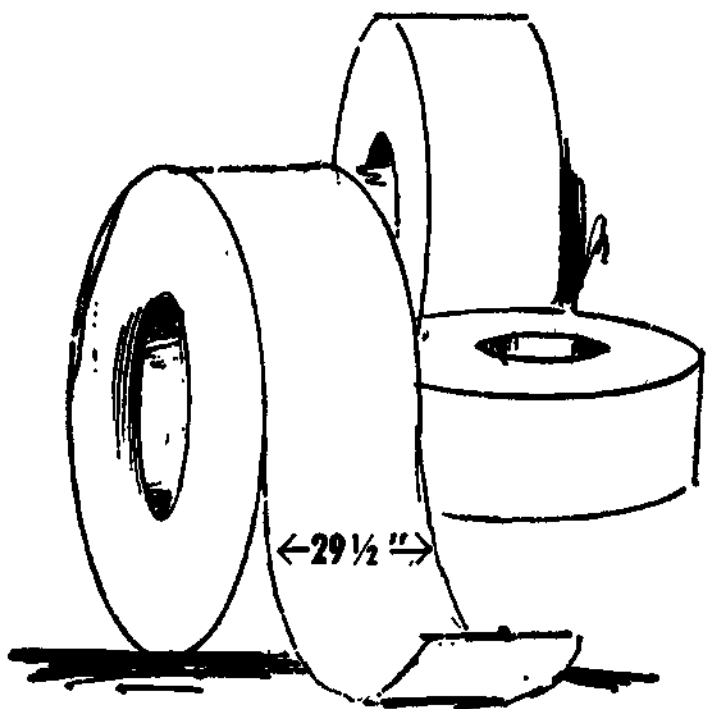

Take stock in America. Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

U.S. Savings Bonds are sold by all banks, credit unions, and other financial institutions. For more information, call 1-800-551-7373.

AND EVERYTHING NICE ABOUT FOOD

Economy is both the watchword and style for popular menus in these days of rising food prices. Simplicity's the theme for it's the guide which points the way towards economy. Today's menus are based on simple, basic foods.

With milk, two cheeses, Cheddar and the smoky flavored Provolone, plus a colorful medley of vegetables, Golden Cheese Soup is not only a joy to look at but also tempting to eat. The milk and cheese afford plenty of protein to make this soup a main dish treat. Round out the menu with a green salad, a slice or two of pumpkin bread spread with butter. Finish with old-fashioned baked apples, stuffed with mincemeat. It's an easy, economical meal.

Like most casseroles Beef Curry with Cheese Corn Bread focuses on the economical aspects of food. One and one-half pounds of boneless beef cubes extends to eight servings with gravy while apples and raisins provide texture interest. The curry is complete with vegetables and a cheesy corn bread, thus eliminating extra dishes and preparation. A seasonal citrus salad, orange and grapefruit, with avocado, if desired, repeats the colors of the casserole but contrasts in flavor and texture. Boston Cream Pie makes an excellent dessert choice.

| 3 tablespoons butter | 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour |
| 1/2 cup chopped onion | 1 medium apple, peeled, sliced |
| 1 clove garlic, minced | 1 package (10 oz.) frozen peas and carrots, thawed |
| 1 1/2 pounds boneless beef, cut in 1/2-inch cubes | 1 package (10 oz.) corn bread mix |
| 1 1/2 cups water | 1 cup (4 oz.) cubed Cheddar cheese |
| 1 to 1 1/2 tablespoons curry powder | |
| 1 teaspoon salt | |
| 1/2 cup golden raisins | |
| 1/4 cup water | |

Melt butter in a large skillet over medium heat; saute onion and garlic until tender. Add meat and brown. Blend curry powder and salt into 1 1/2 cups water; add to skillet along with raisins. Cover and simmer 20 minutes or until meat is tender. Blend flour in 1/4 cup water until smooth. Gradually stir into meat mixture. Bring to boiling point, stirring constantly. Add apple. Turn into 2-quart casserole. Arrange peas and carrots over meat mixture. Prepare corn bread according to package directions. Fold Cheddar cheese cubes into batter. Spread over top of casserole or arrange batter to make stripes across casserole. Bake in preheated 425 degree oven, 12 - 15 minutes. Makes 8 servings.

Double Mushroom and Beef Stew

Hearty family fare

Beef stew with mushroom pastries

Here are two hearty recipes, great for either family or guests. Double Mushroom and Beef Stew can be varied, if desired, adding vegetables as preferred, but fresh mushrooms make it an elegant stew and the pastry cut-outs shaped like mushrooms serve as a charming garnish.

If you enjoy Italian cooking try Chicken and Mushroom Cacciatore. Make it the day before if you're a working woman and chill until final heating for dinner the following night. Noodles or spaghetti should, however, be cooked just before serving.

DOUBLE MUSHROOM AND BEEF STEW

2 pounds boneless beef shoulder or chuck, cut into 1½-inch cubes
¾ cup flour
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground
black pepper
3 tablespoons salad oil
1 cup chopped onions
1 can (1 lb. 12 oz.)
tomatoes, broken up
1 cup water
3 cups potatoes cut into 2-inch chunks
2 cups cut green beans or 1 package (10 oz.)

frozen cut green beans
Mushroom Pastries:
1 package (1 lb.) fresh mushrooms
¼ cup butter or margarine

Place beef in a large bowl. Combine flour, salt and black pepper; sprinkle over beef; toss lightly to coat. In a large heavy saucepan or a Dutch oven heat oil. Add beef cubes a few at a time; brown well on all sides; remove and set aside. Add onions; saute for 2 minutes. Add tomatoes and water; stir and scrape drippings from bottom of pan. Add reserved beef cubes; bring to boiling point. Reduce heat, cover and simmer for 1½ hours, stirring occasionally. Add potatoes; cover and simmer 30 minutes; add green beans; cover and simmer 30 minutes longer or until beef and vegetables are fork tender. Rinse, pat dry and slice mushrooms. In a large skillet melt butter. Add mushrooms; saute 5 minutes. Spoon stew into a large serving bowl; garnish with Mushroom Pastries. Yield: 8 portions.

Mushroom Pastries: To make mushroom pastries, prepare pastry for one crust 8-inch pie. Roll out pastry ¼-inch thick. Cut out cardboard in the shape of a mushroom about 1½-inches high. With the tip of a knife, trace 8 "mushrooms" on a cookie sheet; bake in a preheated hot oven (425 degrees) for 8 minutes or until golden; set aside.

CHICKEN AND MUSHROOM CACCIATORE

mushrooms
5 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided 2½ pound chicken, cut into eighths
¾ cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1 can (1 lb.) tomatoes, broken up
¾ cup tomato paste
1½ teaspoons oregano leaves
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon ground
black pepper

Rinse, pat dry and halve mushrooms; set aside. In a large skillet melt 3 tablespoons of the butter. Add mushrooms; saute for 5 minutes. Remove mushrooms; set aside. In same skillet melt remaining 2 tablespoons butter. Add chicken parts, a few pieces at a time; brown for 3 minutes on each side; remove and set aside. To drippings left in skillet add onion and garlic; saute for 3 minutes. Stir in tomatoes, tomato paste, oregano, salt and black pepper. Add reserved chicken. Bring to boiling point; reduce heat. Cover and simmer for 45 minutes or until chicken is fork-tender, stirring occasionally. Add reserved mushrooms; cover and simmer for 3 minutes longer. If desired, serve with noodles or spaghetti. Yield: 4 portions.

Range performance

On electric ranges, cooking utensils should be essentially the same diameter as the top of the element used. The size of the unit is related to the size of the pan that goes on it and is not related to the speed at which it cooks.

On gas ranges utensils of the proper size should be used and the flame adjusted so as not to extend beyond the utensil for best cooking results and proper safety precautions. Failure to follow these guidelines increases the possibility of igniting clothing. Extreme care should be taken when wearing loose garments, particularly those with flowing sleeves.

Make certain installation of gas or electrical ranges is done by a competent serviceman. The electric circuit should be properly grounded.

College student develops new bread baking technique

A college student who bakes bread regularly bypasses some old problems of baking yeast bread. She uses the new technique of mixing undissolved yeast with flour but ignores all directions that call for beating the batter with an electric mixer. She beats the batter by hand and always kneads her dough on a pastry cloth. Using a well-floured pastry cloth (pastryframe) avoids sticking dough and extra cleanup.

WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

4 cups whole wheat flour
3 cups unbleached white flour
¼ cup non-fat dry milk
¼ cup wheat germ
3 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon salt
2 packages active dry yeast
1½ cups water
¾ cup milk
1/3 cup honey
1/3 cup vegetable oil

In a large container, stir together flours. In large bowl thoroughly mix 3 cups of the flour mixture, dry milk, wheat germ, sugar, salt and undissolved dry yeast. In a saucepan, stir together water, milk, honey and vegetable oil. Heat over low heat until liquids are very warm (120 to 130 degrees). Gradually add warm milk mixture to dry ingredients.

Beat thoroughly with wooden spoon, about 2 minutes. Add 1 cup flour mixture or enough to make a thick batter. Beat again 2 minutes. Stir in enough additional flour mixture to make a soft dough, saving at least ½ cup. Spread ½ cup flour on pastry cloth. Turn dough out onto well-floured pastry cloth. Scrape bowl with spatula and turn scrapings onto dough. Knead dough until smooth and elastic and all flour in cloth has been worked into dough, at least 8 to 10 minutes (longer for smoother texture). Place in greased bowl, turning so that the top is greased. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, 1 to 1½ hours. Punch down dough; turn out of bowl. Cut into four pieces. With hands, form each piece of dough into a rounded slightly flat loaf. Place on large greased baking sheet. Cover. Let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. Bake in 400-degree oven about 25 minutes or until loaf sounds hollow when tapped on bottom. Remove from baking sheet and cool on wire racks. Makes 4 loaves.

Steaks on a budget

Have you tried pork cubed steaks? Boneless and quick to prepare, they can contribute to the success of a budget meal. Breading before pan-frying stretches that great pork flavor and gives each tender steak a tasty, crunchy coat.

Simply dredge the pork cubed steaks in seasoned bread crumbs, dip in an egg-milk mixture (two tablespoons milk per egg) and dredge in crumbs again to coat thoroughly. Lightly brown breaded pork steaks on both sides in lard or drippings. Cook at a moderate temperature 20 to 25 minutes, or until done, turning occasionally to insure even cooking.

Seek sound advice

A University of California scientist warned that confusing and conflicting claims being made by unqualified people make it almost impossible for the consumer to know what good nutrition is.

Dr. George M. Briggs of the Berkeley Campus' Nutritional Sciences Department advised consumers to contact local public health officials and community medical associations when in need of sound nutritional advice.

Boom in home bread baking may be relative to economy

by JEANNE LESEM

If the aroma of baking bread could be bottled, it would probably outsell anything perfume makers can produce.

But flavor, texture, good nutrition and economy are more tangible benefits of homebaked loaves.

Economy is a big factor in the present boom in home baking, says Virginia Schroeder, director of consumer services for Standard Brands, Inc. Its Fleischmann's division sells about 75 per cent of the baking yeast used in the United States.

"If the economy goes down, yeast sales go up," she said in an interview. Miss Schroeder said that sales have been increasing each year for the past six years.

"Baking has become more of a creative thing," Miss Schroeder said. "It's being taught more frequently in grade school, and even in kindergarten. 'People put everything known to man in bread. Wheat germ, raisins, nuts. Sometimes they write in to say the yeast doesn't work.'

"They don't seem to realize that bread baking is based on something besides yeast."

Miss Schroeder said people who try to make bread without white flour don't realize it's needed for its gluten content — a protein substance that helps dough rise.

"There's no gluten in rice or corn or potato flour and the proportion of gluten is low in whole wheat flour," she said.

"Soy flour is popular, but it inhibits the yeast if it's used in too great quantity. A little soy flour increases nutrition by increasing protein content."

Miss Schroeder had a reminder for people who've been baking for years:

Don't worry if the addition of water doesn't make yeast foam up. A new process used in making active dry yeast permits foaming only when sugar and flour are mixed with yeast and liquid.

She said most bread failures occur because the water used is either too hot or too cool, or because dough is left in a draft or in too warm a spot for raising. It's also important to have all ingredients at room temperature or slightly higher.

The energy crisis should pose no problems for bakers, she said. Either make several loaves at a time, and freeze the extras, or bake bread with other foods that require the same temperature — usually 375 to 400 degrees for white bread.

And don't worry about steam from the other foods — it's steam, in fact, that gives French bread its crisp, delicious crust.

Dr. and Mrs. Joe Caruso

They team up for Oriental cookery

by LOIS SEILER

Culinary plaudits are shared equally in Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Caruso's household in Arlington Heights. Although they jokingly fence with each other regarding who is the better cook, each respects the other's accomplishments. Joan Caruso's familiarity with culinary procedures prompts her to follow recipes more exactly, while Joe's creativity compels him to experiment. However they combine talents when preparing one of their famous Japanese dinners.

In Dr. Caruso's dental office there is a special shelf filled with cookbooks, index cards and pencils. Patients may jot down recipes or even borrow the books until their next visit.

Joan became familiar with sashimi (raw fish) when teaching in the Orient and Joe was introduced to it in Chicago. The Carusos serve it as an appetizer or first course with their oriental dinners.

The fish must be very fresh and not frozen. Fresh fish will not smell at all fishy but rather like cucumbers, according to Joan. They usually shop at a Japanese market on N. Clark in Chicago and buy whatever is recommended, such as tuna, white fish, prawns or clams. This is sliced thin and dipped into a sauce which each person blends to his own liking.

Joe and Joan never cared for chicken livers until they tasted them prepared in the Japanese manner called Rumaki, which is also used as an appetizer. They are cooked gently, marinated in sherry and soy sauce, and then wrapped in bacon with a water chestnut and broiled until done.

Tempura may also be served as an appetizer, but the Carusos prefer it as a main dish. This is Dr. Caruso's specialty, and always makes a bit hit with guests. It is a favorite of their four-year-old daughter, Lee Adel, who shares her parents' interest in Japanese food.

This dinner is a bit messy, so the Carusos prefer to have their tempura parties in the kitchen. It can be very dangerous with small children because of the hot oil in which the ingredients are cooked.

JOE IS delighted with the performance of an electric wok, but an electric skillet may be used satisfactorily. Shrimp and vegetables such as mushrooms, eggplant, string beans and sweet potatoes are dipped into a batter and then fried in the oil in a manner similar to fondue. Joe does most of the cooking with chopsticks, but guests also have fun getting into the act, usually preferring fondue forks.

The Carusos usually make the tempura batter from a mix purchased at a Japanese store, but have also made it from scratch. It should be thin and form a light and airy coating when cooked. One or two sauces are available for dipping the cooked tempura, and rice is served in small bowls as an accompaniment.

Rice should be made in the Japanese style — sticky rather than in separate grains — for ease in eating with chopsticks. It is perfectly proper to hold the rice bowl close to one's mouth when eating it with chopsticks.

If you prefer to serve Sukiyaki as the main course, the tempura may be served as an appetizer. A good friend from Japan showed the Carusos how to make sukiyaki, and a Japanese cook from their favorite steak house, Ron of Japan, improved on the recipe.

A rump roast may be used, but a prime rib is sheer delight. The secret is to have it cut paper thin. This is attractively arranged on a platter with a variety of vegetables, both American and Japanese. It is cooked at the table using an electric skillet, and guests dip each bite into a raw egg before eating. Joe and Joan believe that the egg is essential to the taste of the whole meal, and that its bland flavor blends beautifully with the taste of soy sauce.

The Carusos have had many good times with this dinner, particularly when they have served it at a long, low table with everyone seated on the floor.

Regardless of the entire choice, Joe recommends serving it with sake, beer, a dry German white wine or tea. He likes to complete the meal with canned litchie nuts, a popular Oriental fruit, although Joan thinks that most people prefer an American dessert.

SASHIMI

Raw fresh fish such as tuna, white fish, prawns or clams

Bottled horseradish or grated white radish

Soy sauce

Hot mustard (optional)

Slice fish 1/4-inch or thinner and then into bite-size pieces. Give each guest a small bowl and let them mix the horseradish, soy sauce and mustard together to their liking, or only one of the ingredients may be used, if preferred. Use chopsticks or small forks for dipping the fish into the sauce before eating.

RUMAKI

1 box fresh chicken livers or

1/2 pound frozen

1/2 stick butter or margarine

Bacon, sliced thin

1 can water chestnuts

1/2 cup sherry

1/2 cup soy sauce

Slowly cook livers in butter until firm enough to handle but still pink inside. Marinate livers in sherry and soy sauce for 2 hours or longer.

Roll each piece of chicken liver with one slice or a half of a water chestnut in 1/2 slice bacon. Secure with a wooden toothpick. Broil a few inches from heat, turning once, until bacon is done.

These can be done ahead and reheated in a 325 degree oven; however, they are best when broiled just before serving. Serve rumaki with Reese's Hot and Sweet Mustard.

TEMPURA

Large or jumbo fresh shrimp

Sliced mushrooms or small,

whole mushrooms

Eggplant, bite size or cut like

French fries (optional)

String beans, whole with ends removed

Sweet potatoes, cut in thin slices

Tempura batter mix

Shell and devein shrimp, leaving tails on. Cut back side part way through; spread open and flatten shrimp. Wash and thoroughly dry vegetables. Arrange food as tastefully as possible on a large plate.

Prepare tempura mix according to package directions or make the following batter:

1 egg, separated

1/2 cup sifted flour

2 tablespoons cornstarch

1/2 teaspoon salt

Dash of white pepper

1/2 cup ice water

In a small bowl, beat egg white until stiff peaks form.

In another bowl, beat egg yolk and water until frothy. Gradually add flour which has been sifted with cornstarch, salt and pepper, continuing to beat; a few lumps are of no concern. Fold in beaten egg white.

Place electric wok, tempura cooker or electric skillet on table. Use about 2 cups of peanut oil. Add 1 teaspoon salt to control spattering. Preheat cooker to 400 degrees and vary cooking temperature between 350 and 400 degrees.

Using chopsticks or fondue forks, dip shrimp and vegetables into batter to coat lightly and cook in oil. Remove forks while food is cooking. Turn food once so it will cook evenly; then remove with chopsticks, a mesh strainer or a slotted spoon. It is important to remove bits of batter that have separated from the food as they will eventually burn.

Serve food immediately in baskets, small trays or on plates, and always on paper napkins to absorb extra fat. Be careful not to burn your mouth. Each guest should be given a small dish of sauce in which to dip his food.

To prepare sauce combine 1 cup chicken bouillon, 1/3 cup soy sauce, and 1/3 cup sake or white wine. Mix well. If desired, add sugar to taste.

Another sauce can be made by combining 1/4 cup soy sauce and 1/2 cup sherry. Mix well and serve with tempura.

If desired, hot mustard and grated white radish may also be used for dipping tempura.

SUKIYAKI

2 pounds rump, sirloin, beef

tenderloin or prime rib, sliced paper thin

1 cup beef suet

2 large onions

1 can bamboo shoots (optional)

1 can or fresh tofu (optional)

1 small can shirataki or dried shirataki (optional)

2 boxes spinach, frozen or fresh

1/2 pound mushrooms

1 head Chinese or celery cabbage

1 can or fresh bean sprouts

1 small bunch watercress (optional)

1 box frozen or fresh pea pods or snow peas

Black mushrooms (optional)

Most vegetables are optional and others may be used, such as green onions, carrots, green pepper, eggplant and regular cabbage.

Cut suet into 3 or 4 pieces or use cooking oil.

Cut onions in half from top to bottom, then slice 1/4-inch thick. Drain tofu and cut into 1-inch pieces. Drain shirataki (noodles). If dried shirataki is used, soak in cold water for two hours and cut into 4-inch lengths.

The fresh spinach and watercress should have stems removed. If frozen spinach is used, ring it dry with your hands and shape it into a log which is cut in four slices.

Wash and slice mushrooms. Cut Chinese or celery cabbage into 1/4-inch diagonal slices (about 4 cups). Rinse bean sprouts with cold water and drain. Wash and thinly slice the other vegetables.

Arrange meat and vegetables on trays or dishes as attractively as possible as the beauty of the food is important.

Prepare the following cooking mixture:

1/4 cup Japanese wine,

sherry or whiskey

3/4 to 1 cup soy sauce

1 teaspoon monosodium

glutamate or Ajinomoto

1 chicken bouillon cube dissolved in 1 cup water

3 tablespoons brown or white sugar

Combine all ingredients and place mixture in a pitcher at the table.

Place electric skillet on the table and pre-heat to 350 or 375 degrees. Put 1/4 of the suet in the pan and rub it around until it melts. Add about 1/4 of the ingredients at a time, keeping them in separate little heaps and turn vegetables with chopsticks as they cook. Add about 1/4 cup of the liquid cooking mixture. When everything is almost done, add the beef. As soon as it loses color, serve the guests with some of each ingredient and repeat the procedure.

At this point, the host may take over the cooking so that the hostess can eat. Some people add the beef before the liquid cooking mixture. If the liquid evaporates fast and the mixture gets too strong, add a little water to the pan. Also, bean sprouts, spinach and watercress do not need to be cooked as long as the firmer vegetables.

SUKIYAKI is often included on Joe and Joan Caruso's Oriental dinner menu. It's adventurous eating, but so successful that guests often take home the recipe. The sukiyaki consists of beef and vegetables.

Fine coastal restaurant inspires seafood recipe

A short drive from Ft. Myers brings you to the Pine Island country and a view of coastal Florida's traditional fishing villages, such as Matlacha and Bokeelia. It also takes you to Matlacha Oyster House which lives up to its motto, "all good things a good seafood restaurant should be."

Located on Route 78, the Oyster House is owned by Chris and Joe Fillingim and managed by Ron Hulet. Every dish from an extensive seafood menu is individually prepared, so don't be in a hurry when you go there. The leisurely pace gives one time to look at a marvelous display of mounted specimens of all the kinds of fish and aquatic products which come from the coastal and inland waters of Florida.

I started with raw Florida oysters from the bar. They are small but sweet and tasty. For a main course I chose soft-shell crab which was gently sauteed in butter.

My wife chose baked mullet, a fish which abounds in Florida waters and has to be netted since it is a vegetarian. I'm told more than 36 million pounds of this fish are harvested annually.

HERE ARE TWO good recipes for preparing mullet filets. To serve six you'll need two pounds of filets. Combine 1/2 cup milk with 1 teaspoon salt. Dip fish in milk, then roll in toasted fine dry bread crumbs (1 1/2 cups in all). Place the filets in a single layer, skin side down, in a well greased baking pan (15x10x1-inch). Pour over 1/4 cup melted butter or margarine. Bake in an extremely hot oven (500 degrees) for 10 to 15 minutes until fish is browned and flakes easily when tested with a fork. Serve with lemon wedges.

A more spicy mullet bake is this one with coral sauce. Again provide two pounds filets to serve six. Place the fish in a single layer skin side down, in a well-greased baking dish (12x8x2-inch). Combine 1/4 cup butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated onion, 1 teaspoon paprika, 1 teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Mix well. Pour this sauce over the fish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 20 to 25 minutes.

You'll find these recipes can be used with other varieties of fish filets whether

Low-meat main dishes go Italian

"Second generation Italian" we might call these recipes for Mushroom Manicotti and Mushroom Lasagna. Though they are genuinely "a l'italienne" in that they are flavored with mushrooms, they have been Americanized to the extent of being made with ingredients obtainable in the nearest food market and by recipes which are more quickly prepared than in their native Italy.

Either of the following recipes — Mushroom Manicotti or Mushroom Lasagna call for a minimum of ground beef or spaghetti sauce with beef, but the main protein source is cheese, ricotta or cottage or Mozzarella, to make it a substantial meal-in-a-dish.

MUSHROOM MANICOTTI
1 pound fresh mushrooms or 1 can (6 to 8 oz.) mushroom stems

Shopping habits may change as retail food prices rise

Food shoppers already faced with inflated prices have little to look forward to. The Agriculture Department has predicted that retail food prices will go up another 12 to 16 per cent this year. This increase would be in addition to the 16 per cent jump in grocery prices which faced consumers last year.

What can homemakers do when each week the grocery money buys less and less? Obviously there is no simple answer. A budget will only stretch so far and the family had to be fed. But there are guidelines for making the most of each dollar.

Fortunately many of the most nutritious foods are not the most expensive. Dollar for dollar, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, your top dozen protein buys, in order, are: dry beans, peanut butter, whole chicken, canned bean soup, whole milk, eggs, hamburger, beef liver, turkey, canned sardines, canned tuna (chunk style is your best bet) and American cheese.

IF YOU'RE A creature of habit, this might be a good time to shop around and take advantage of all the best prices.

One way to compare stores for overall price policies is to check the price of canned tomato soup. Wholesalers sell it to supermarkets at the same price but a recent check of supermarkets in Albuquerque revealed that the price charged for a can of tomato soup varied by as much as 17 cents from one store to another, according to New Mexico home economist Nancy Weaver.

Similar differences have been noted in area supermarkets on a variety of products. Prices for canned tomatoes ranged from 25 to 41 cents in four area stores on Jan. 27. A 24 oz. bottle of Wesson Oil ranged from 76 to 87 cents on the same day. Although differences in individual products seldom vary by more than a few cents, when such variances are consistent it could save you dollars.

ALSO, COMPARISON shop by familiarizing yourself with the prices you pay for most items. That way you'll know if "specials" are really that special.

Never assume that because two brands or two products come in the same size package or bottle that they contain the same amount. One well-known cereal manufacturer offers four different flavors of oatmeal in four identical boxes (usually sold at the same prices). Only when you look at the weights do you find that one box contains 13 ounces of cereal; one contains 12 ounces; one, 10 ounces; and one, only nine ounces of cereal. Hardly the same price.

Be aware that it's possible to find as many as three or four different prices for the same item in a given display. This is the result of careless marking by store personnel. Although it was most likely an unintentional error, check a couple of other products before tossing the first one you pick up into the basket.

DRIED BEANS, peas and lentils are excellent sources of protein. Even though they're not "complete proteins," the addition of only a small amount of animal protein — chicken, fish or virtually any leftover meat — renders them complete, inexpensive sources of solid, satisfying nutrition.

When buying presweetened cereal, you pay extra for the sugar. But when you buy cereal flavored with cinnamon, brown sugar, maple flavoring, raisins, or bits of dried fruits, the cost soars! Add your own flavorings, raisins or slices of fresh fruit. Of course, buy only the largest size boxes and keep cereal in airtight containers, if possible, to keep them fresh. Foil packets and individual boxes for servings can triple the price of cereal.

- 1 box (8 oz.) manicotti noodles or 16 crepes
- 8 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided
- 4 tablespoons minced onion
- 1 pound ricotta or cottage cheese
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- 4 teaspoons salt, divided
- 2 jars (14 oz. each) spaghetti sauce with meat
- ½ cup water
- 2 teaspoons basil leaves
- 4 ounces Mozzarella cheese, thinly sliced

Rinse, pat dry and chop ¼ pound of the fresh mushrooms (makes about 1½ cups) and slice remaining — pound fresh mushrooms (makes about 3½ cups) or drain canned mushrooms (keep stems and pieces and sliced separately); set aside. Cook noodles as label directs, set aside. In a skillet melt 2 tablespoons of the butter. Add onion and reserved chopped mushrooms or canned stems and pieces; saute for 2 minutes; set aside. In a medium bowl combine ricotta cheese, eggs, 3 teaspoons of the salt and sauteed mushrooms. In same skillet melt remaining 6 tablespoons butter. Add reserved sliced mushrooms; saute for 2 minutes.

Add sauce, water, basil and remaining 1 teaspoon salt. Bring to boiling point, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Fill manicotti noodles or stuff and roll crepes with ricotta mixture. Place in 2 buttered 12 x 8 x 2-inch baking pans. Pour sauce mixture over all. Top with Mozzarella cheese. Bake in a preheated moderate oven (350 degrees) for 25 minutes or until hot and Mozzarella cheese is melted. If desired, serve with bread sticks. Yield: 8 portions.

MUSHROOM LASAGNA

- 1 pound fresh mushrooms or 2 cans (6 to 8 oz. each) sliced mushrooms
- ¼ cup salad oil
- 1 pound ground lean beef
- 1 jar (14 oz.) meatless tomato sauce
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoon Italian seasoning
- 8 lasagna noodles
- 2 cups creamed cottage cheese, divided
- 4 ounces Mozzarella cheese, shredded

Rinse, pat dry and slice fresh mushrooms or drain canned mushrooms; set aside. In a large skillet heat oil; add mushrooms; saute for 5 minutes; remove and set aside. Add beef; cook and stir until brown, about 5 minutes. Add sauce, salt, Italian seasoning and reserved sauteed mushrooms. Bring to boiling point; reduce heat and simmer for 2 minutes; set aside. Cook noodles as label directs. Into a 12 x 8 x 2-inch baking pan spoon one third of the meat mixture. Top with a layer of 4 noodles, then a layer of 1 cup of the cottage cheese, another one third of the meat mixture, remaining 4 noodles, remaining 1 cup cottage cheese and remaining one third of the meat mixture. Sprinkle with Mozzarella cheese. Bake in a preheated moderate oven for 30 minutes or until hot and bubbly. Yield: 8 portions.

Pork chops rose 32 cents per pound since Feb. 11 according to a price survey by the Herald on Monday. However, other prices in the meat group declined to offset the large increases in pork chops. Ocean perch fillets reflected a nine-cent drop while whole fryer chicken and bacon went down seven and three cents, respectively.

Dairy products remained relatively stable from a week ago. Exceptions include eggs which declined eight cents and butter down three cents.

Fresh produce prices reflected general increases, but canned tomatoes and pears showed slight decreases of two cents. Celery and lettuce are selling for about seven cents more than a week ago.

Excepting a four-cent increase in salad oil, cereal and dry grocery prices remained fairly stable.

Recorded prices are based on averages obtained from four area food stores on Monday of each week.

Strawberry Bavarian Cream

Classic French dessert requires minimal work

Strawberry Bavarian Cream is a classic French dish, and generally considered one of the most superb in the dessert category. The name of the chef who first devised this airy sweet is unfortunately lost to culinary history. Most food experts believe that the dish was invented toward the end of the 17th Century by a French cook who practiced his art in some stately home in Bavaria.

In those days, Bavarians and other desserts that required stiffening were made with isinglass. This semi-transparent whitish substance was derived from the innards of sturgeon. It came in sheets, and the cook first had to break them up, wash them, and boil them with filtered water. As the isinglass boiled, it required skimming and, once finished had to be strained through a napkin.

At the end of the nineteenth century, commercial gelatin appeared on the market, but this too was in sheets and required a lengthy soaking process.

However, thanks to the convenience of today's unflavored gelatin, even a dish as elaborate as classic Strawberry Bavarian Cream requires little time in the kitchen.

STRAWBERRY BAVARIAN CREAM

3 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1 cup cold water
1 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 cups (2 pints) mashed strawberries, juice and pulp
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 cups heavy cream, whipped

Sprinkle gelatin on cold water in a 2 1/2-quart saucepan to soften. Place over low heat, stirring constantly until gelatin is dissolved. Remove from heat; add sugar and salt and stir until dissolved. Stir in mashed strawberries and lemon juice. Chill until mixture is the consistency of unbeaten egg white. Fold in heavy cream. Turn mixture into a 2-quart mold. Chill until firm. When ready to serve, unmold and garnish with fresh strawberries and mint leaves, if available. Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

Simple bean bake is tasty, cheap

A hearty one-dish meal combines brick-oven baked beans, red cabbage and knockwurst. This is an easy recipe that could well become a family Friday night or Saturday regular. It's loaded with flavor and high protein and is a good buffet dish for guests, family gatherings or club pitch-ins.

BAVARIAN BEAN BAKE

1 28-ounce can brick oven baked beans
1/4 cup red cabbage, drained
1/4 cup beer (or apple juice)

1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon caraway seed
4 knockwurst

Preheat oven to 400-degrees. In a large bowl, combine all ingredients except knockwurst. Turn into a 1 1/2-quart casserole dish. Brush knockwurst with mustard, if desired, and place on top of beans. Bake for 25 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Disadvantages 'outweigh benefits'

Committee urges sanitary landfill plans be dropped

by JOE FRANZ

A special committee in Buffalo Grove has recommended the village drop the idea of annexing a sanitary landfill proposed for unincorporated Lake County.

The landfill has been proposed by Browning-Ferris Industries Inc. for a 98-acre site northeast of Weiland and Busch roads. The firm wishes to use the area as a place to dispose of garbage for a 10-year period.

The committee's report to the village board states that it believes the benefits that would be derived from the landfill are outweighed by the disadvantages.

The vote on the landfill proposal was 4-3. Thomas Dame, chairman of the Environmental Control Commission, David Saidel and Donald Schindler, of the Board of Health and Patrick Shields, a member of the plan commission voted to recommend rejection of the proposal.

THOSE RECOMMENDING approval of the landfill were Park Board Pres. Eugene Muryn, Village Administrative Assistant William Baling and John Walker, an environmental engineer. Trustee Clarice Rech, chairman of the special committee, did not vote.

Those voting against the proposal said a sanitary landfill was not the "highest and best use" of the property. If the land is put to its best use, those members said the village will receive more tax revenue than with the landfill.

According to those opposing it, the location of the landfill could inhibit the future growth of the village. Since there has been no land use plan established for the ultimate use of the property, the members said there is no way of telling if the landfill is the most beneficial use.

The members also said the landfill could have an adverse effect on residents in nearby Horatio Gardens. The report states the landfill could affect the water supply in the area.

Residents in Horatio Gardens and the Pekara subdivision have raised objections to the Browning-Ferris proposal.

The residents said they fear heavy trucks going to and from the landfill will damage the roads.

BROWNING-FERRIS officials, however, have said it will put up a bond to cover any damages its trucks will do to the roads.

Another reason given for rejecting the project, the members said, is road access to the site is currently inadequate. The present road system will not be expanded for at least two years.

Finally, those opposing it state in the report, "The village may not be able to exert the control necessary to inspect, monitor and prevent nuisances involved with a sanitary landfill operation. The village staff at the present time is inadequate to do the surveillance necessary to insure a good operation."

Those in favor of the landfill said even if the village rejects the proposal it would be possible to operate it in Lincolnshire or under county zoning as long as a permit from the Environmental Protection Agency is obtained. Thus, the village should annex the property and exercise maximum control over it, those members said.

Those members said the EPA has adequate standards and regulations to prevent the area from becoming a health hazard or public nuisance.

IF THE LANDFILL is rejected by the village, members favoring it said increased garbage rates could result because scavengers would have to go farther to dump refuse.

The members also said the landfill would not be a detriment to village growth. As a result of the landfill, they said the residents of Horatio Gardens would ultimately get a park site at no cost to them. The owners of the property have said they will donate land for use as a park after the landfill is closed.

Members favoring the landfill said before the proposal is accepted, they would recommend a number of measures be taken to assure it is operated properly.

Mrs. Rech said that before the village board makes a decision on the landfill, the question concerning contiguity between the property and the rest of the village must be resolved.

The landowner has proposed connecting the landfill with the village by annexing 3,000 feet of the Soo Line tracks. Railroad officials, however, have said they are not sure if they will allow the tracks to be annexed.

If the railroad refuses to allow the annexation, the work of the committee might have been for nothing, Mrs. Rech said.

The village board will consider the committee's recommendation Monday night at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

permission to leave the northern district of Illinois for a vacation.

A trial date for Stavros is scheduled to be set March 1 when Judge Will will rule on any other pretrial motions entered by Murray. The judge gave Murray until next Thursday to file his pretrial motions.

Murray said he plans to file motions in all three of the pending Stavros cases. "They will be motions to dismiss all of the indictments on technical legal grounds and possibly other constitutional grounds," he said.

OTHER HEARINGS scheduled on the charges against Stavros are not scheduled until March 29 when he will appear before both Judge Abraham Lincoln Marovitz and Judge Philip Tone.

Also indicted with Stavros were Nicholas Phillips, a Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals employee and Stavros' cousin; William Bieber, Wheeling director of building and zoning; Michael Valenza, former Wheeling trustee and chairman of the environmental commission; William Hart, former Wheeling trustee; and Ira Colitz, a county zoning board member who resigned following the indictments.

All six have pleaded innocent to the charges. The indictments followed a year-long investigation into alleged shakedowns in Wheeling.

Motion to drop Stavros case denied by judge

by LYNN ASINOF

A motion to dismiss charges against James Stavros, indicted former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, because of pretrial publicity was denied yesterday in U.S. District Court.

Stavros' attorney, Joel Murray, asked that extortion charges against his client be dropped because of publicity resulting from a press conference called by U.S. Atty. James Thompson to announce the indictments. Murray contended that newspaper, radio and television coverage of Stavros' indictment and arrest has made it impossible for his client to get a fair trial.

Judge Hubert Will denied the motion, saying it was premature. The judge said he would consider the charges of pretrial publicity when he interviews prospective jurors for the case.

THE HEARING yesterday was the first of three scheduled on motions to dismiss charges against Stavros because of pretrial publicity. Stavros was indicted on charges of extortion and conspiracy in three separate indictments last month, and is appearing before three different judges.

The matter was originally scheduled for hearing today, but was discussed in court yesterday when Stavros was given

Dr. Epstein seeks school post

Dr. David Epstein, 910 Twisted Oak Ln., Buffalo Grove, is the latest person to obtain a petition to participate in the April 13 Dist. 96 school board election.

Incumbent board members Jim Duncan, Frank Clayton and Clarke Waiser have picked up petitions of candidacy.

Persons planning to run for the school board must file the petitions between Feb. 27 and March 22 in the Dist. 96 administration office at Kildeer School in Long Grove.

The three-year terms of Buffalo Grove school board members Clayton and Duncan will expire this spring. A two-year term will also be available due to the resignation last fall of Jack Landau, also of Buffalo Grove.

Waiser was appointed by the school board two months ago to fill the vacancy until the election.

Duncan and Waiser have confirmed that they plan to try to retain their posts. Clayton could not be reached for comment.

AS THE SUN heads down, up goes just enough for these lads, even the kite. Yesterday's breezes were though it remained chilly.

Village seeks to broaden Harper area

The Village has amended its position and is now asking that residents in the proposed Buffalo Grove planning area, as well as those in the Lake County section of the village be allowed to attend Harper College.

Last week, the board voted to circulate a petition among Lake County residents asking for a hearing before the Illinois Community College Board to request the area be placed in the Harper College District.

The college board has prepared a preliminary map placing Lake County residents within the boundaries of the College of Lake County. If a change is to be made, a petition containing 50 signatures must be presented to the college board by March 1.

The village has prepared the petition because most board members believe the village should be served by only one junior college district. Until now, village residents had the option to attend the junior college of their choice because the area was not in a district.

Lake County village residents now attending junior colleges are reimbursed for their tuition by High School Dist. 125.

DIST. 125 Supt. Harold Baner Monday night asked the village board to reconsider its action. The Dist. 125 board, he said, does not want the district "fragmented" so that part of it is served by one junior college district and part by another.

If the village is going to ask to have its portion taken out of the College of Lake County district, he said it should also request that all of Dist. 125 be taken out.

Trustees Thomas Mahoney and Randall Rathjen, however, said the only portion of Dist. 125 they are interested in is the portion in Buffalo Grove or its planning area.

Both added that if all of Dist. 125 were to vote in a referendum to remove the area from the College of Lake County district, it might be defeated. However, if just Buffalo Grove and its planning area vote in the referendum, it probably would be approved.

TRUSTEE JAMES SHIRLEY, who opposes the petition said he does not think the village has the right to impose its will on unincorporated sections of its planning area. He said village residents can probably out vote those in unincorporated areas the same as all of Dist. 125 could do with the Lake County section of the village.

Trustee Clarice Rech joined Shirley in voting against circulation of the petition.

Those favoring the petition have said the entire village should be in the Harper district since the village board has asked the college to consider making Buffalo Grove the site of its second campus. If Harper locates a campus in Buffalo Grove, some officials believe all residents should be able to attend.

Unless the boundary is changed by Aug. 1, all students living in Lake County and now attending Harper will have to transfer to the College of Lake County in Waukegan or pay a higher tuition rate at Harper.

Supervision for youth for marijuana charge

An 18-year-old Wheeling youth was placed on six months' court supervision this week, after a hearing on a drug charge.

The youth, Nicholas F. Ellinger, 56 Redwood Trail, was arrested Jan. 8 by Buffalo Grove police and charged with possession of marijuana. Ellinger appeared Tuesday in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court.

No new leads in $15,000 bank robbery

Police are without new leads in Tuesday's $15,000 predawn robbery of the First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility.

Arlington Heights police questioned commuters yesterday morning in an unsuccessful effort to gather new information. A detective said a woman claimed to have made a deposit in the outside depository during the time of the holdup, but saw nothing unusual.

Bank officials set their loss at $15,000 yesterday. Earlier announcements had placed the amount at $100,000 and then $20,000.

An agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said, "We're still kicking it around. We have a lot of ends to tie up. The best thing to say is we're still investigating it."

Police said they hoped a commuter may have witnessed the robbery or seen the waiting getaway car parked next to the facility at Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road. The intersection is passed by thousands of commuters daily on their way to the Chicago and North Western Ry. station.

BRUCE DODDS, executive vice president of the bank, said early police bulletins of $100,000 were erroneous.

"The amount is $15,000. We have never had that amount ($100,000) in there. It is physically impossible to have that much money there," he said.

Dodds blamed the "exaggerated" amount released earlier on the teller's fright. "If you hear the tapes of the call to police, you can hear she is very upset — as well she might be."

The 23-year-old woman teller was surprised by a masked gunman as she opened the building at 6:45 a.m. Tuesday. The gunman forced her to open the safe and then fled after taking her out of the building and locking her keys inside.

It is believed the gunman and an accomplice fled to the Northwest Tollway in a dark late model sedan without attracting notice.

An open forum on the academic program at Adlai Stevenson High School, Dist. 125, will be conducted at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, March 9 in response to a request by a group of Lincolnshire residents.

The residents have asked for an in-depth survey of the Stevenson academic program and how it compares to programs of other schools in the area.

The Dist. 125 School Board will conduct the public forum and discuss Stevenson's college entrance record, test scores and related student performance topics.

Freshman report given

Units on communication, problems solving, the cities and the family have been completed by the 284 students enrolled in the program, Ritchie said.

Second semester topics to be covered include social law and order, natural environment and "America — the Product of Its Working People."

Karen Kolls, sponsor of the eighth-grade class, developed the program and coordinated the efforts of the class in acquiring the services of individuals throughout the community.

Among the speakers scheduled are David Mason, certified public accountant; Don Russ, State Farm Insurance agent; Stan Crosland, Buffalo Grove Park Dis-

Koeppen speaks out on indictments

Wheeling Trustee John Koeppen broke precedent at the village board's fourth accountability session by making a lengthy statement on recent indictments against six former and present village and Cook County officials.

Koeppen again asked residents not to inquire about the indictments, saying the trustees could not comment on the advice of their attorney. He did, however, explain that the village board had mixed feelings on the matter when it was discussed in a closed-door session.

"There was much discussion in the executive session that night," Koeppen said. He said the board was not unanimous on what action should be taken about the indictment of Building Director William Bieber and Environmental Commission Chairman Michael Valenza.

DURING THE executive session, the village attorney advised the board that it might face a lawsuit if they suspended either man from office and that man is found innocent. The trustees then asked Bieber and Valenza to voluntarily seek a leave of absence, and both men complied.

"When it was all explained, when we all walked out of that room, some of the trustees may not have been happy about it, but we all abided by it," Koeppen said.

The trustee said it was most difficult for the board members to "bite their tongues" and not comment on the matter when residents were so concerned about the indictments. He said the board could not comment for fear of legal complications in the case.

Koeppen suggested that residents read the newspaper accounts of the Bieber and Valenza matter. "I think The Wheeling Herald explained the situation on Mr. Bieber and Mr. Valenza," he said.

THE TWO WERE named in indictments issued last month following a year-long investigation into alleged shakedowns in Wheeling.

Bieber is charged on 15 counts, including extortion, perjury, conspiracy and filing a false income tax return. He pleaded innocent on all counts.

Valenza was indicted for extortion and conspiracy to commit extortion in connection with the delivery of more than $1,700 of furniture which he allegedly received as part of a shakedown of Wickes, Inc. He has also pleaded innocent.

Village board members have been reluctant to comment on the indictments since they were issued Jan. 31. They have repeatedly said that the charges should be resolved in court without any prejudgment by either residents or village officials.

Science fair part of Catholic schools week

by JILL BETTNER

A rocket-powered car, volcanoes and trained mice are the subjects of some of the science projects developed by students at St. Joseph the Worker School in Wheeling for a science fair this week at the school.

The fair is one of several activities being conducted as part of "Choose Catholic Schools Week," designated by the U. S. Catholic Conference and the National Catholic Educational Assn.

Working at home and in science classes, students have researched and created a variety of projects that were displayed for parents last night in an open house at the school.

All children in the first through eighth grades were required to enter a project in the fair and write a paper explaining their methods and findings. The students explored a variety of subjects including the growth of bacteria in plants, the reproduction cycle of the fruit fly, diseases of the eye, distillation of water and osmosis.

ONE GROUP trained several mice to follow a path through a maze, another built a model of a dam and several constructed small volcanoes.

The workings of a car engine were studied by one group who took the engine apart and completely reassembled it.

The projects will be graded by classroom teachers and also judged for prizes by a group of science teachers at Wheeling High School.

The dinner menu includes spaghetti and meat sauce, Italian bread, salad and a beverage. A bake sale will also be conducted during the dinner.

will be awarded to students in each grade whose projects are judged to be the best in the competition.

A display of art projects and items made in elective classes offered for the first time at St. Joseph's this year is also included in the week-long schedule of activities celebrating "Choose Catholic Schools Week."

AN ALL-SCHOOL music program will also be presented at 10:30 a.m. Friday.

Public employees to join police in bargaining unit

by JOHN MAES

Des Plaines public works employees have dissolved their old union and say they are joining police in a collective-bargaining unit to negotiate their 1974 contracts with city officials.

Spokesmen said the group decided unanimously last week on an official change from the old organization, and Municipal Employees City Coordinating Assn., to join police in a local chapter of the Assn. of Independent Municipal Employees.

The move is designed to give city workers greater strength in bargaining with the city, according to James Pocza, a spokesman for the public works group. "AIME is just a stronger bargaining agent."

Initial closed-door talks between policemen, firefighters and public works employees are in session but sources in the three departments say substantive negotiations have not begun.

THE AIME GROUP is affiliated with the Combined Counties Police Assn., a police patrolmen's union representing some 1,400 uniformed policemen in 35 northern Illinois cities.

A CCPA chapter represents Des Plaines patrolmen and CCPA attorneys will bargain for some 130 police and public works members. Although both organizations will negotiate separate contracts, Pocza said one local AIME representative will serve as a steward on a countywide board representing the union.

Efforts are under way in cities all over the county to organize AIME locals similar to the one in Des Plaines. Pocza said city employees in Park Ridge and Oak Lawn have also formed AIME chapters.

"We hope by working with the association that other departments in other towns will see it and go along with us," he said.

CCPA ATTORNEYS are also to represent city firemen in contract talks although they have not officially joined police and public worksmen, said Richard Ornberg, secretary of the Des Plaines professional firefighters Assn., the firemen's union.

"We're using the same attorney, but we're still an independent organization right now," he said. "The firefighters association feels it's adequate for our purposes to remain independent."

Because of the confidentiality of the talks, spokesman for all three groups said they would be unable to discuss the status of negotiations or the terms of the contracts.

Neither will cross Elmhurst Road

Towns settle land boundary dispute

The Mount Prospect Village Board and the Des Plaines City Council have made it official: neither community will venture across Elmhurst Road.

The compromise truce, which both municipalities approved Tuesday night, draws to an effective halt the land-grabbing tactics that have characterized relations between the two neighboring suburbs for several months.

Specifically, Elmhurst Road will serve as a dividing line from Golf Road south to Oakton Street, with Mount Prospect on the west and Des Plaines on the east.

At Oakton, the boundary will extend west, with Mount Prospect taking in property to the north of Oakton and Des Plaines property to the south.

STILL UNRESOLVED, however, is the fate of the 8.9-acre former Dawn Fresh Mushroom Farm at the southwest corner of Elmhurst Road and Dempster Street, where ground will be broken this spring on a 199-unit apartment development known as The Hawthornes.

The property, which had been the object of a 4½-year legal battle, was awarded to Mount Prospect last fall by a Cook County Circuit Court judge because of a legal technicality. Des Plaines officials have indicated a desire, however, to appeal the ruling, and the Elmhurst Road boundary agreement specifically exempts the Dawn Fresh property.

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert said Tuesday night the overall compromise "stabilizes the area to the benefit of us all."

Because the disputed property around Elmhurst and Algonquin roads had been claimed by both Mount Prospect and Des Plaines, property owners were uncertain where to pay taxes and residents of apartments were uncertain where to obtain vehicle stickers.

IN CLAIMING property to the west of Elmhurst Road, Mount Prospect will take in the Waterfall and Terranova restaurants and a 10-acre undeveloped parcel.

Des Plaines, meanwhile, will annex a 37-acre parcel including the Colonial Apartments to the east of Elmhurst Road.

The compromise averts spending time and money in a lengthy court proceeding where the two towns appeared to be headed until they agreed to try and iron out their differences a few weeks ago.

The ensuing compromise was worked out in two luncheon meetings between the mayors and two representatives of each town. The boundary dispute arose in three instances, including the mushroom farm, when Des Plaines first annexed a piece of property that was later annexed by Mount Prospect, which regarded the prior annexations as improper for legal reasons.

March 19 referendum on the Regional Transit Authority.

Behrel said Monday that if the RTA referendum fails, the city or the Des Plaines Mass Transit District might have to buy the United Motor Coach Co. to keep the bus line in operation.

WHILE BEHREL has been a staunch supporter of the RTA, he indicated the city does not want to be left without any options if the referendum fails.

"We think the referendum will pass, but we are facing the realization that if it doesn't something will have to be done about the bus company, so we have set up the meeting with NORTAN to talk over general arrangements," he said.

Behrel indicated that United Motor Coach (UMC) cannot expect continual funding from the city to remain in operation. The city has approved several grants to the bus line using revenue from the city's motor fuel tax funds.

Joseph DiJohn, NORTAN's executive director, said the talks will cover several items including the possibility of a merger of the two groups. NORTAN presently represents a number of north suburban communities.

DIJOHN EXPLAINED that NORTAN has already applied to the federal government for funds to purchase UMC equipment as part of a substantial federal grant request.

He indicated that if the grant is approved it would not be necessary for the Des Plaines district to apply for any funds to continue the operation of the bus line.

Des Plaines formed its own transit district in 1970 to funnel money to the bus company.

DiJohn said new legislation was recently approved to allow more communities to join NORTAN. He also said the district plans to hold a public hearing on their request for federal funds on March 13. After the hearing DiJohn said he hopes to receive preliminary approval of the fund request shortly after the hearing so NORTAN can order new equipment from both UMC and the Glenview Bus Co.

DiJohn added that UMC recently received $20,000 to supply bus service to routes that had been served by the Glenview Bus Co. The Glenview company went bankrupt recently and NORTAN took emergency action to continue service in the area.

In what might be considered a safety valve move, officials of the Des Plaines Mass Transit District and the North Suburban Mass Transit District (NORTAN) will discuss merging the two groups next month.

The talks, which also will involve Mayor Herbert Behrel, are seen as a precaution against the possible defeat of the March 19 referendum on the Regional Transit Authority.

Behrel said Monday that if the RTA referendum fails, the city or the Des Plaines Mass Transit District might have to buy the United Motor Coach Co. to keep the bus line in operation.

WHILE BEHREL has been a staunch supporter of the RTA, he indicated the city does not want to be left without any options if the referendum fails.

"We think the referendum will pass, but we are facing the realization that if it doesn't something will have to be done about the bus company, so we have set up the meeting with NORTAN to talk over general arrangements," he said.

Veteran high school board member McConnell dies

E. Hoy McConnell, a veteran of the High School Dist. 207 Board of Education, died Tuesday night at Lutheran General Hospital.

McConnell, 60, first joined the Maine Township High School board in 1965 and served two consecutive terms, ending in 1971. In December, 1970, he announced he would not seek reelection due to a caucus policy that limits board members to two terms.

But McConnell was drafted into service twice after his retirement. In December, 1971, McConnell was selected by the board of education to fill out the remaining four months of a term, after Wesley Hartzell resigned from his seat. Again in June, 1973, McConnell was called on to complete the term of Michael Bartos who moved out of the district.

The Park Ridge resident would have remained on the board until the April election.

"No one had more experience, expertise or contributed to the board more than Hoy McConnell," said Dist. 207 Supt. Richard Short yesterday. "We will certainly miss Hoy."

During his first two terms, McConnell served as vice-president and president of the school board. He also headed the board's education and public relations committees.

While chairman of the public relations committee he coordinated efforts to pass a $15 million referendum used to remodel three of the district's schools and partially build Maine North in unincorporated Des Plaines. When he returned to the board he helped organize the recent referendum which will be used to complete the fourth high school.

McConnell was vice-president in charge of marketing for the Interbrand Corp. of Chicago. Surviving are his wife, Dorothy, four children, Mrs. Paula (Paul) Fornfeist of Park Ridge; Mrs. Kathy (Michael) Bracken of Torrington, Conn.; Hoy of Phoenix, Ariz.; and Maureen, a junior at the University of Illinois; and seven grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at the United Methodist Church of Park Ridge, 418 Touhy Ave. The family requests that donations be made to a favorite charity in lieu of flowers.

Junior high to be dedicated May 5

The Elk Grove Township School Board has voted to move back the dedication of the district's newest school until May 5.

Friendship Junior High School in Des Plaines, which opened its doors in September after a long delay, had been scheduled to be dedicated in March.

The board switched to the May date by a 5-2 vote with members Judy Zanca and Charles Knaup voting against the change.

Several persons have been mentioned as possible speakers for the ceremony, including Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott.

Ventilating bid OK'd

The board approved a bid from the Trane Co. for ventilating units which will be used in the remodeling of Grove and Dempster junior highs this summer.

The board had earlier agreed to purchase the ventilators independently, before a contractor for the job is selected, to assure that the units will be on hand in time for them to be installed this summer.

Trane's low bid was for $107,824, with delivery promised within 60 to 75 days.

Help on way for Byrd, Jay

The long-awaited help for the heating and ventilating problems at Byrd School in Elk Grove Village and Jay School in Mount Prospect may be coming soon.

The board approved the hiring of a consultant to evaluate the systems at the two schools at a cost of $1,200 per building.

Fluid Engineering Co. will do the study and will balance the systems, if required, for an additional $1,000 per building.

Transit pact delayed

Final approval of the district's transportation contract for the 1974-75 school year with Davidmeyer Bus Service has been delayed again.

The board will discuss the contract Thursday, Feb. 28, at the administration center, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

The regular meeting of the board last Monday was adjourned to reconvene at that time.

Yearbook contract approved

The board approved the yearbook contract for Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect.

The contract, for $1,321.95, is with Josten's American Yearbook Co.

Dist. 26 wrapup

New computer service sought

Dist. 26 will seek computer services for a source other than the Northwest Educational Cooperative (NEC) next year. The school board voted Tuesday to reject the NEC proposal for computer services and seek alternate agencies to provide whatever data processing needs the district will have next year.

The NEC proposal for computer services was rejected because of the increased cost which would be assessed to the district next year for the same services received this year. Costs would jump from $9,003, which was paid this year, to $18,692 next year.

The increase is a result of a change in the basis for charging the districts for use of the computer. Additional services were also planned for some districts which also added to costs.

Dist. 26 becomes the third member of the cooperative to drop out of the computer services portion of the NEC. Dist. 214 and Dist. 23 had voted earlier to reject the services also because of excessive costs.

Board Member Michael Sheyker, the Dist. 26 representative to NEC, said the district should have no trouble finding outside sources willing to provide computer services at a lesser cost than that proposed by NEC.

The administration was directed to begin a study of what computer services the district will need next year so agencies can be contacted.

Special report presented

A report on six items deemed of special concern to the Dist. 26 School Board was presented at Tuesday's board meeting. Areas covered in the brief report included:

- Foreign language.
- Gymnastics courses.
- Attention to the underachiever.
- Drug education.
- What principals are doing to conserve energy.
- Principals' reports on needs in their schools.

In the area of foreign language the report said a second foreign language at the junior high level will be a consideration for the future. The proposal of seeking cooperative purchases of gymnastic equipment with the River Trails Park District was also classified as a future consideration.

Steps were outlined describing what is being done to help the underachiever in the district, including special reading help and tutoring help.

In the area of drug education the report said speakers from Hersey High School will be recommended for PTA and school programs.

The report also said principals are working on program budgeting by determining what materials are needed at each school. The principals have also discussed ways to conserve energy at schools such as keeping lights off and lowering thermostats.

More gasoline expected

A special gasoline allotment of 1,000 gallons was expected to be delivered to Dist. 26 yesterday. The fuel was ordered delivered to the district by the state allocation office two weeks ago when an application for the emergency supplement was approved.

Without the additional fuel, Asst. Supt. James Reitzlaff said the district would have run out of gasoline for its buses by the end of this week.

$1,000 grant to schools

A $1,000 grant from the Health Education Department of the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction has been awarded to Dist. 26.

The money will be used to purchase supplies and meet other expenses of the district's health program.

Council approves funding of plan

Discount cabs for elderly

Des Plaines senior citizens will be able to get a discount in taxi fares in the near future because of a program approved by the city council.

The program, which will allow Des Plaines residents who are 65 years of age or older to use city cabs at a discount rate, will be put into effect as soon as possible.

The city council's license and inspection committee proposed the plan Tuesday. Ald. Weald Swanson (6th) suggested the city investigate such a program several weeks ago. He noted that the village of Mount Prospect has established a federally funded taxi program for senior citizens in that town.

In proposing the plan, Ald. Charles Bolek (3rd) said a study of the Mount Prospect program indicated implementation of the program could be delayed by waiting for federal approval of the program.

THE COUNCIL approved an alternative funding proposal which calls for the city to spend $10,000 of its federal revenue sharing funds for the program.

Bolek indicated the city will apply for the additional federal funds to operate the service during 1975 and 1976.

Preliminary plans call for the service to be available to all senior citizens in Des Plaines. The residents will be able to ride anywhere in the city for 50 cents. The rides must start and end in the city, Bolek said.

He added that the city will reimburse the taxi operators $1 for each ride.

"We feel this is a very worthwhile program," Bolek noted. The program will be coordinated with both the Des Plaines and Mount Prospect Park Districts.

IN OTHER ACTION, the city council deferred a "robbing Peter to pay Paul" proposal which would have boosted Des Plaines garbage collection rates to $2 per month.

The 50-cents-per-month increase was recommended by Ald. Daniel Kisslinger, who heads the council's sanitation committee. He offered the price increase, which would be the first garbage collection fee hike in the past nine years, as a method of obtaining additional revenue to help pay for other city services.

Ald. Thomas Koplos asked the action on the increase be deferred until the city has a better idea of what the revenue needs for the coming year will be.

The council has given tentative approval to manpower increases for the police and fire departments which will cost about $250,000 during 1974. The garbage fee increase was suggested as a means of making up part of that deficit.

SEVERAL ALDERMEN suggested that the city might need to make additional increases to help pay for city services.

Other aldermen and Mayor Hebert Behrel suggested a study of the possibility of including the entire cost of garbage collection in the city real estate taxes. It was noted that this would allow residents to deduct the costs on their income taxes. No final decision was reached on the matter.

THE CITY council also approved a resolution urging approval of the Regional Transportation Authority referendum on March 19.

The action came after a lengthy debate where several aldermen attempted to delay passage of the resolution asking for additional time to study the issue.

Abrams suggested an amendment to the resolution noting several sections of the RTA legislation which have drawn criticism from RTA opponents in recent months.

However, Abrams motion was defeated and the original resolution which calls for residents to vote "yes" on the issue at the polls.

The resolution urges approval so that "the seven million affected citizens in Northeastern Illinois may have the Regional Transportation Authority which is essential to the orderly growth and well-being of the region and its citizens."

Sixth hopeful enters Oakton board contest

An executive with The Quaker Oats Co. in Chicago has announced his candidacy for the Oakton Community College board of trustees in school elections this April.

Thomas F. Roeser, 45, of 200 Cherry St., Park Ridge, will challenge incumbents Stephen Loska and Griffith MacDonald and three other candidates for two seats on the Oakton board.

Roeser is director of public affairs for Quaker Oats. Before moving to Park Ridge in 1964 he was press secretary to Minnesota Gov. Elmer L. Anderson and assistant to U. S. Rep. Walter H. Judd and Albert H. Quie. He has also been the director of public relations for the Minnesota Republican Party and city editor for the St. Cloud Daily Times, St. Cloud, Minn.

"I'M VERY MUCH interested in education," said Roeser, who now commutes to Philadelphia once a week to teach an evening course in politics and government at the University of Pennsylvania.

Roeser said, "I would like to get involved more in community activities than I have. The community college system is a very important one. I particularly feel that the open door policy is important. It's a necessary adjunct to education and a necessary part of it."

Roeser said he has no particular feelings on the college's selection of a permanent campus. "I'm still studying the matter," he said.

Other candidates for the Oakton board are Robert Doyle, Des Plaines; Dan Chubirka, Park Ridge; and Harriet Ritter, Morton Grove. Roeser, Doyle, Chubirka and the two incumbents have said they will seek the endorsement of the Oakton Community College convention, a caucus of delegates from elementary and high schools in Maine and Niles townships.

School elections are April 13. Candidates must file a nominating petition between Feb. 27 and March 22.

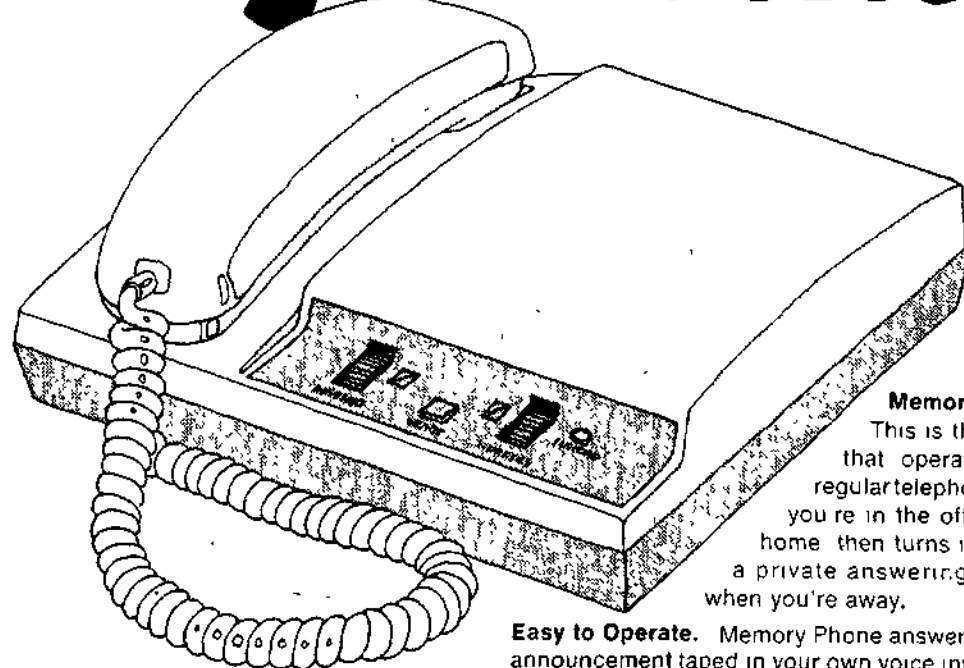

Girl gymnasts second

The Maine West High School girls' gymnastics team concluded its season of competition in the Central Suburban League with a 7-4 record and a second place tie in the South Division of the CSL.

Three success of this season in a large part was due to the efforts of the following seniors: Bernadette Binder, Carol Cahill, Nancy Franklin, Sue Jobst, Gail Kaeschele and Kim Thompson. Judy Beck is the girls' gymnastics coach.

The girls will now begin practicing for the annual gymnastics demonstration to be presented April 5 in the Herman Rider Memorial Gymnasium.

Oakton to decide March 5 how it stands on merger

The Oakton Community College board will decide March 5 whether or not to join a committee of North Shore residents to study the possibility of merging the North Shore with the Oakton district.

Oakton board chairman Paul Gilson Tuesday asked the board's community relations committee to study a proposal from William Spaulding, chairman of the Joint Community College Referendum Committee, the committee which has filed a petition with the state asking for a referendum to create a community college district on the North Shore.

In a letter to the Oakton board, Spaulding says that he realizes the efforts to form a community college on the North Shore may mean that no community college will be formed in the area. Because of this, he proposes that representatives from Oakton and from each of the high school districts on the North Shore meet with members of his committee "to evaluate those problems objectively in terms of the greatest possible educational benefits at the least possible costs."

THE NORTH SHORE communities, including the high school districts of Evanston, New Trier, Glenbrook and Highland Park-Deerfield, have been divided over the issue of whether to form a community college. One faction has wanted to merge with Oakton, another has wanted a separate college and a third has not wanted any community college in the area.

In his letter to the Oakton board, Spaulding suggests the committee could look into the possibility of providing representation of the North Shore on the Oakton board, of locating the college campus on the North Shore and of changing the college's name if the North Shore merges with Oakton.

In referring the question of whether to participate in the committee to the community relations committee, Gilson said, he recommends that Oakton be represented on the committee if the North Shore high schools agree to participate in it.

The Oakton board Tuesday night agreed to choose a site in unincorporated Maine Township as a permanent home for the college. However, college officials have said they might reconsider the campus choice if the North Shore decides to merge with Oakton this summer.

Commodities firm head faces federal charges

The problem-plagued president of a commodity investment company, which had been headquartered in Des Plaines, has been charged with federal securities violations and fraud.

The charges, which name Luigi M. (Lou) DiFonzo and the North American Trading Co., were filed by attorneys who represented former clients and creditors in the U.S. District Court in Chicago.

DiFonzo, currently involved in several other law suits involving the activities of his companies was named as defendant in the law suit.

DiFonzo's financial empire which included NATCO and a sister company known as the North American Investment Co. started to crumble earlier this year when state and federal investigators began to look into the firms' financial dealings.

BOTH COMPANIES offered investment opportunities in the silver commodity option field. The suit, filed by the law firm of Boodie, Sears, Sugrue, Giambalvo and Crowley, will be heard by U.S. District Court Judge Thomas McMillen next month.

A spokesman for the law firm said the suit charges DiFonzo and NATCO with two counts of violating the federal securities law, two counts of common fraud and one count of abusing a fiduciary relationship.

While NATCO is still permitted to engage in commodity transaction, DiFonzo has filed for bankruptcy for NAICO, stating the company was more than $1 million in debt.

While a receiver has been appointed in the bankruptcy proceedings, the matter has been stymied by DiFonzo's repeated refusal to answer questions about the company's assets.

He has taken the fifth amendment on two separate occasions during questions by court appointed receivers.

Federal and state grand juries also are probing DiFonzo's activities for several months. It has also been learned that the Securities and Exchange Commission has started an audit of DiFonzo's books.

THE SEC CHARGED DiFonzo with selling unregistered securities and fraud. DiFonzo signed a consent order regarding the charges, which while not being an admission of guilt, does require DiFonzo to not engage in the activities again.

He closed his suite of offices in Des Plaines last month and moved to an office in Chicago's financial district.

Residents ask village take over utilities

More than 2,100 residents of the New Town section of Mount Prospect have signed petitions asking the village to look into taking over sewer and water service currently provided by Citizens Utilities Co.

In presenting the stack of petitions to the village board Tuesday night, Marie L. Caylor, chairman of the Northwest Suburban Council of Associations, which coordinated the petition drive in the northeast section of the village, referred to a study of the feasibility of the village's buying Citizens' equipment as "important and long overdue."

The petitions were given to the village board's finance committee for review. The petitions specifically ask the village to make a professional appraisal of the value of Citizens Utilities' equipment in Mount Prospect.

The appraisal would be the first step toward the village's deciding whether to buy the equipment and to take over the function of providing sewer and water service in the New Town area itself. The cost of purchasing Citizens Utilities' equipment would be borne by New Town property owners in a long-term bond issue.

MRS. CAYLOR mentioned poor water quality, low water pressure and "considerable monthly costs" as prompting the request for the village to consider buying out Citizens.

Mount prospect residents with village sewer and water service pay a minimum $4.50 a month, billed quarterly. Village residents served by Citizens, which is based in Addison, pay a minimum $7.60 a month, which would rise to $13 monthly if a request by the firm for a rate increase is granted by the Illinois Commerce Commission.

The ICC is currently conducting a public hearing into the rate hike request. In the second day of cross examination of Citizens Utilities officials yesterday, it was revealed that the firm has spent $81,300 in its bid to raise rates.

A BREAKDOWN of costs provided by Jack O. Sanders, vice president of the company, indicates that $50,000 is being spent on legal services; $24,000 for testimony preparation and exhibits; $6,500, travel and living expenses for officials of the parent company in town to testify; $500, telephone; $300, publication of legal notices.

Part of the cost incurred is for an analysis of customers' bills to determine the impact of a rate increase. The study has not yet been conducted, but William J. Ide, chief water engineer for the ICC, expressed interest in reviewing the figures.

A similar study prepared by opponents of the rate hike show that bills in the New Town section of Mount Prospect and the Waycinden Park subdivision near Des Plaines would rise by $80 to $100 a year in many cases. In addition, School Dist. 28 would face a bill $7,308 higher than its utility bill last year, and River Trails Park District would be forced to pay $2,248 more.

The opponents will present their case beginning March 19, when the ICC hearing resumes. Cross-examination of Citizens Utilities officials is expected to be completed today.

Border residents air complaints, question officials

by JERRY THOMAS

Newcomers to Elk Grove Village who live on the village's border west of Ill. Rte. 53, had an opportunity to air their gripes and seek answers to many questions they fired at Elk Grove Village officials Tuesday.

Several trustees and representatives of the village's police and fire departments were featured Link Elementary School PTA speakers.

Some of the concerns residents of that area voiced were:

- A lack of police and fire protection.
- Inadequate snowplowing service.
- The unavailability of information about their village government or services.
- A lack of shopping centers.

The small group of residents in attendance did voice minor concern about their children's educational needs. But, mainly the meeting turned into a "gripe session" with new residents feeling they didn't belong to the rest of Elk Grove Village.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS agreed the owners of new homes had a right to some identity fears. That portion of Elk Grove Village is served by School Districts 54 and 211 and is in Schaumburg Township while most of Elk Grove Village is in Elk Grove Township and served by Elementary School Dist. 59 and High School Dist. 211.

Trustee Nanci Vanderweel pointed out that the fear of not belonging expressed by some of those present was a normal reaction usually felt by someone who has moved into a new community.

"The things you complain about like muddy streets or unfinished parks and lack of shopping centers are things new move-ins faced in other parts of the village and in other communities," she said.

"Things like having to put up with unfinished streets and construction traffic are not just aggravations that are occurring to you because you live west of Rte. 53. They happen to new areas even when that new area is in the middle of town," she said.

MRS. VANDERWEEL asked residents who did not receive a copy of village ordinances to stop in at the village municipal complex at 901 Biesterfield Rd.

This pamphlet will get you acquainted with the village's parking, garbage, animal and license ordinances," she said.

She urged the residents to be patient and said village officials are concerned about the area west of Rte. 53 and are planning for services to it.

Police Sergeant John Bantner said the department does patrol in the area. In answer to complaints that construction trucks litter streets with mud and speed, Bantner said the department does what it can with the force it has.

Sgt. Bantner explained that traffic control and answers to emergency calls take up most of the force's time and patrol is only part of that duty. Tickets are issued when speeders are caught and builders are required to clean streets, he said.

He said the department is training nine new men that have recently been added to the force but that it takes almost a year of training before a new patrolman is on the street's working alone.

Mrs. Vanderweel urged those present to tell their neighbors and any new move-ins to contact the village hall at 439-3900 with complaints or questions.

SHE ASSURED THEM the village was well aware it had Elk Grove Village residents west of Rte. 53 and said she and others on the board represent all of the village.

The officials refused, however, to seek builder contributions for School Dist. 54 schools as requested by a man in the audience.

A FOURTH FIRE station will be built some day near Nerge Road, said Capt. John Mergens, Elk Grove Village Fire Department, as he explains the village's future plans to provide protection.

8- through 11-year-olds may play whole game

Boys' Football changes league setup

Elk Grove Boys' Football has announced changes in its league setup for the coming season which are expected to allow boys in the through 11-year-old age bracket to play practically the entire game.

J. M. Heffern, president of Boys' Football, said the league plans to divide its "community league" into two divisions next season. The season will also start about two weeks earlier in September so that games won't be played during cold November weather.

A division for 8 and 9-year-olds, weighing up to 85 pounds and another division for 10- and 11-year-olds weighing up to 90 pounds will be formed "if enough boys sign up," said Heffern.

Heffern added that no problem was anticipated in having enough boys to implement the plan. More than 260 participated in the program last year. Heffern said about 300 are expected to sign up this year.

BOYS' FOOTBALL is in the second year of a three year co-operative agreement with the Elk Grove Park District, which will assume virtually complete control of the football program at the end of the three-year period.

Boys' Football officials will still be connected with the selection of coaches in the league, according to Heffern. The board presently screens prospective coaches carefully, through a special panel of interviewers.

The 8- and 9-year-olds will play on an 80-yard field in six-minute quarters, according to Heffern, playing "around 95 per cent" of a game. Old rules called for a player to play a minimum of one quarter per game.

The older, 12- and 13-year-old division of the program will remain the same, according to Heffern. Three divisions presently make up the 12- and 13-year old league: Junior for those under 125 pounds, Widget for those under 110 pounds and Bandit.

THE BANDIT division is primarily for boys 11- and 12-year-old according to Heffern. "It's for those younger boys who are over the weight limit for the Community League and older boys who don't have the ability to play in the Junior or Widget division."

"We hope to have a place for everybody," he added.

Heffern said plans are nearing completion for Boys' Football's annual fund raising event, "Las Vegas Night," which will be staged this year on March 2, at the Holiday Inn at 1000 Busse Rd. in Elk Grove Village.

Donation for the evening will be $3.50 per person, according to Heffern.

Commuter bus use 'not bad'

The first week of college commuter bus service from Schaumburg to Elgin and DeKalb was described as "not bad" by Dale Nygaard of Streamwood, who shares driver duty with Dennis Ward of Elgin.

About 80 riders used the bus in the first week, paying the $1.25 fare for the round trip. Nygaard said an average of 28 to 35 riders per night would bring the service to the break-even point, and permit it to continue at that charge.

If ridership does not increase, a fare hike to $1.50 round trip is possible. If patronage jumps substantially, a fare reduction would be passed along, he said. The bus can carry 44 adults.

The bus is a not-for-profit response to the energy crisis, said Nygaard, who is leasing it with Ward from Schaumburg Transportation Co. for $35 per night.

The round trip takes about 1½ hours. The bus leaves Schaumburg High School at 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, stops at Elgin Community College at about 4:55 p.m., and reaches Northern Illinois University in DeKalb at about 5:45. The return trip leaves DeKalb at about 8:40 p.m. and after stopping in Elgin reaches Schaumburg High School between 10 and 10:15 p.m., Nygaard said.

Hulett named to national emergency medical board

Elk Grove Village Fire Chief Allen Hulett has been named as a member of the board of directors of the National Registry of Emergency Medical Technicians, based in Columbus, O.

Hulett was appointed to the board by

Allen Hulett

"We must watch carefully for problems and although the program we have in Elk Grove Village now is not written to observe national standards, we will eventually be required to comply with national standards," Hulett said.

"As a member of the national committee, I will be able to make decisions and speak about problems we encounter on a local level. I welcome the appointment and the opportunity to work on the board," said the chief.

Worker at industrial park injured on job

A Chicago man employed by the Aero Box Co. of 1655 Estes St. in Elk Grove Village in Industrial Park was injured Tuesday when his arm was caught in a paper-cutting machine.

Elk Grove Village Firemen were called to the plant to rescue Pablo Barajas, 19, of 1431 W. Cortez St. Chicago when he became trapped in a paper-cutting machine.

Elk Grove Village ambulance medical technicians and rescue squad freed Barajas right arm from the machine and he was taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center where he was treated for cuts and bruises and released.

the International Fire Chiefs Assn., of which he is a member. The group of fire chiefs authorized Hulett to represent them on a national level in the registry, which sets national standards for paramedics and medical technicians.

Elk Grove Village's Fire Department now participates in a paramedic program that Hulett believes will eventually be in all fire departments.

Hulett said the paramedic program now in practice is a new and growing program that will take close watching.

Blood-assurance plan slogan 'If nobody gives nobody gets'

"If nobody gives nobody gets" is the Elk Grove Village Community Blood Program slogan.

Trustee Nanci Vanderweel, chairman of the blood assurance program said the simplest way to describe the blood program is that if 4 per cent of the community donates blood, all its residents are assured of free blood when needed.

The unlimited blood replacement from any hospital in the country is now available to every resident of Elk Grove Village. The village conducts a year round blood drive to seek donors for the 900 units of blood it must donate this year. Thus far residents have donated 128 units.

"In addition to seeking pledges, however, we want to stress that free blood replacement is available and that everyone in the village, not just those who donated blood, are covered under this program," said Mrs. Vanderweel.

Families or people who require blood should let the hospital know that the patient is covered by the village program. In addition they should call 439-3900 so the village can keep a record of all who are using the coverage, thus allowing the North Suburban Blood Center to credit the hospital properly.

For further information regarding the blood program or to set up an appointment for donation contact extension 231 at 439-3900.

FIRST GRADERS AT Grant Wood School learn values a new way. Children at the Dist. 59 school view films that depict different types of value situations, then discuss the film, applying what they've seen to situations in their own life. The program has grown to a series of eight to 10 films in less than a year.

Schoolchildren can think about 'important' things, too

by BOB GALLAS

- A child is upset by the recent divorce of his parents.
- A fellow student dies.
- A Spanish-speaking child is harassed at his new school.

Teaching school children to cope with those and other stressful situations usually falls outside the traditional "three R's" traditionally taught in school — but not at Grant Wood School in Elk Grove Village.

Earl Woodley, principal of the Dist. 59 school, believes teaching "values" is just as important as anything else, so he's started "the other curriculum."

THE CURRICULUM concentrates on values, such as honesty, morality, justice and responsibility. Children see specially selected movies that deal with various values, then discuss what they've seen.

The program, which was started by Woodley last year, has since grown to include eight to 10 films shown through the school year.

First and fourth graders alike sat watching intently this week during a film on the life of Leo Beuerman, a man who overcame severe physical handicaps and deafness to lead a self-supportive life.

Beuerman, only a few feet tall with only minimal use of his legs, trained himself to fix watches. With the aid of a specially designed tractor complete with pulleys for lowering himself to the ground Beuerman drives into town each day. A small cart allows him to get around his hometown to do business.

FOR MANY OF the children the film was their first prolonged contact, if only on film, with a handicapped person — their first chance to react to such a situation.

Following the movie, the discussion between teachers and students centered on comparing Beuerman's outstanding traits to the children's own lives.

"What would you do if you wanted very badly to go out for Little League, but they said you were too small?" asked first grader Fran Latone.

"Try to do something else, then," answered several first graders.

"TOO OFTEN EDUCATORS shy away from these types of real, difficult issues because they are not part of the curriculum, for which we already have insufficient time," said Woodley.

"By not acting, we lose a unique and powerful opportunity to influence for the better, the course of children's lives," Woodley said.

"Current research is beginning to document that the nature of children's early experience in ethical and moral situations has a profound effect upon their moral behavior as adults," he said.

So far, there's been no lack of enthusiasm for the films on the part of the students at Grant Wood. Discussion periods following the films are lively, as two, sometimes three schools of thought on an issue spring up among the students.

ONE FILM ALREADY shown depicted two boys who set up a lemonade stand, with one leaving right away to go and play. The movie ends when the youngster returns at the end of the day, expecting his share of the day's take.

"It was interesting to see how many opinions there were over that one," said Woodley.

"Some thought he should receive part because he'd helped set up the stand. Others thought he should receive all because he'd helped buy the lemons. Still others thought he shouldn't receive anything," said Woodley.

"The important thing was that they'd thought about it," said Woodley. "For the first time they realized just what their values are."

Interest in public skating sessions down; park district turning to special programs

by REGINA OEHLER

A news analysis

In 1971, as many as 550 persons skated at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex on a Friday evening. The ice arena and recreational complex was new in those days, paid for by tax dollars and apparently enthusiastically supported by residents.

Since then, public skating at the $900,000 complex had dropped off to about 300 on a Friday night. Few families now attend public skating sessions and the park district has turned to the more lucrative and popular business of special ice skating classes and hockey teams playing at the ice rink.

What happened? Park district officials aren't sure but say the decline may be because of the construction of other rinks in the area. Steve Person, director of parks and recreation, says the novelty of the Rolling Meadows facility has worn off.

He added that since the heyday of the ice arena, Rolling Meadows High School has been built. Person said many of the youngsters that used to go ice skating are now attending basketball games, football games and other activities at the high school.

THE IDEA TO build the sports complex, one of the first of its kind in the Northwest suburbs, came in 1969 after a survey revealed residents were interested in skating.

The arena was approved as part of a $900,000 referendum passed in 1969 and first opened in January of 1971. The sale of passes was high — 288 were sold within the first month of operation.

As of the end of December this season, only 64 season passes have been sold.

In 1971, daily attendance at the rink averaged from 400 to 500. This year, daily attendance averages from about 100 to 300 a session, according to facility coordinator Rudy Nelson.

Also in 1971, the district's team hockey program, boasted only about 95 youngsters. This year there are approximately 350 involved. The learn-to-skate program has increased from 436 to in 1971 to almost 700 youngsters this year.

"THIS MEANS that people have gone out of public skating and into the programs," Person said. He added that because of the shift in interest, the park district has been scheduling more programs and less public skating.

How much money does the ice arena make or lose for the park district? Person said he doesn't know. He said the ice arena income and expenditures of past years were figured in with income and expenditures from the rest of the complex, and not kept separate. This is the first year that separate figures will be available, he said. Person took over as superintendent a little more than a year and a half ago.

The number of hours scheduled for public skating per week has declined from a high of 38½ in 1972 to 26 for this year, and may be cut further succeeding seasons. Surrounding area ice rinks have between 66 to 16 hours for public skating each week.

Since the rink's opening in 1971, residents have complained about the high cost of skating and the prevalence of minor equipment thefts.

"I think if everybody stopped going there, maybe the park board would feel sorry for the poor people in Rolling Meadows who cannot afford all that money," one 10-year-old wrote in 1971.

IT WASN'T until daily general admission and the sale of passes decreased substantially during the 1972-73 season that the 10-year-old got his wish. The price of passes remained the same, but the cost of daily admission decreased from $2 to $1 per adult and from $1 to 75 cents for students.

The decrease was partially balanced out by another decrease in the number of hours during each public skating session. The Rolling Meadows Park Board last fall also cut sessions from three to two hours.

The two ice arenas in the area that report the largest numbers of skaters are the Randhurst and Woodfield facilities. Woodfield reportedly has as many as 550 at a session and Randhurst has up to 300 on a weekend session.

The Arlington Ice Spectrum has approximately the same number of skaters as the Rolling Meadows rink, according to manager Jim Brown.

Veteran high school board member McConnell dies

E. Hoy McConnell, a veteran of the High School Dist. 207 Board of Education, died Tuesday night at Lutheran General Hospital.

McConnell, 60, first joined the Maine Township High School board in 1965 and served two consecutive terms, ending in 1971. In December, 1970, he announced he would not seek reelection due to a caucus policy that limits board members to two terms.

But McConnell was drafted into service twice after his retirement. In December, 1971, McConnell was selected by the board of education to fill out the remaining four months of a term, after Wesley Hartzell resigned from his seat. Again in June, 1973, McConnell was called on to complete the term of Michael Bartos who moved out of the district.

The Park Ridge resident would have remained on the board until the April election.

"No one had more experience, experience or contributed to the board more than Hoy McConnell," said Dist. 207 Supt. Richard Short yesterday. "We will certainly miss Hoy."

During his first two terms, McConnell served as vice-president and president of the school board. He also headed the board's education and public relations committees.

While chairman of the public relations committee he coordinated efforts to pass a $15 million referendum used to remodel three of the district's schools and partially build Maine North in unincorporated Des Plaines. When he returned to the board he helped organize the recent referendum which will be used to complete the fourth high school.

A memorial service will be held at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at the United Methodist Church of Park Ridge, 418 Touhy Ave. The family requests that donations be made to a favorite charity in lieu of flowers.

Commodities firm head faces federal charges

The problem-plagued president of a commodity investment company, which had been headquartered in Des Plaines, has been charged with federal securities violations and fraud.

The charges, which name Luigi M. (Lou) DiFonzo and the North American Trading Co., were filed by attorneys who represented former clients and creditors in the U.S. District Court in Chicago.

DiFonzo, currently involved in several other law suits involving the activities of his companies was named as defendant in the law suit.

DiFonzo's financial empire which included NATCO and a sister company known as the North American Investment Co. started to crumble earlier this year when state and federal investigators began to look into the firms' financial dealings.

BOTH COMPANIES offered investment opportunities in the silver commodity option field. The suit, filed by the law firm of Boodie, Sears, Sugrue, Giambalvo and Crowley, will be heard by U.S. District Court Judge Thomas McMillen next month.

A spokesman for the law firm said the suit charges DiFonzo and NATCO with two counts of violating the federal securities law, two counts of common fraud and one count of abusing a fiduciary relationship.

While NATCO is still permitted to engage in commodity transaction, DiFonzo has filed for bankruptcy for NAICO, stating the company was more than $1 million in debt.

While a receiver has been appointed in the bankruptcy proceedings, the matter has been stymied by DiFonzo's repeated refusal to answer questions about the company's assets.

He has taken the fifth amendment on two separate occasions during questions by court appointed receivers.

Federal and state grand juries also are probing DiFonzo's activities for several months. It has also been learned that the Securities and Exchange Commission has started an audit of DiFonzo's books.

THE SEC CHARGED DiFonzo with selling unregistered securities and fraud. DiFonzo signed a consent order regarding the charges, which while not being an admission of guilt, does require DiFonzo to not engage in the activities again.

He closed his suite of offices in Des Plaines last month and moved to an office in Chicago's financial district.

'Not one' of 30 polled approves

Arlington police oppose 8% pay hike

A poll of Arlington Heights police patrolmen indicates strong opposition to the latest village offer of an 8 per cent pay increase.

The poll was based on a questionnaire circulated among patrolmen. Of the more than 30 returned so far, a police spokesman said not one responding policeman favored accepting the village's latest offer.

Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson originally submitted a proposed budget for the village with an across-the-board 5 per cent pay increase for all municipal employees. The salary raise was later upped to 8 per cent, in a written reply to demands by the Arlington Heights Firefighters Assn. Paramedics and fire department engineers were offered an additional 5 per cent raise by Hanson.

Members of the police department presented the trustees with petitions after the 5 per cent raise offer was first released. The petition, signed by all active members of the force, indicated an 11.6 per cent pay raise was needed because of rapidly increasing living costs in the Northwest suburbs.

PATROLMEN responding to the questionnaire indicated the 8 per cent offer was unacceptable, and would not meet past and projected cost of living jumps.

Some policemen objected to the creation of a Fireman II classification for the paramedics and engineers with an accompanying additional 5 per cent raise.

They said many policemen have also undergone extensive specialization training for specific details, such as the traffic and detective divisions, without receiving salaries above those of regular patrolmen.

Policemen have also said the department has gone from one of the highest paid in the area to one of the lowest. The policemen said the force is one of the smallest based on policeman per population ratio.

BASE SALARIES FROM Arlington Heights patrolmen have gone from $7,565 in 1968 to $9,468 in 1973. The average base salary for patrolmen in the area was $10,274 in 1973, according to a survey by the Northwest Municipal Conference.

The same survey places the average top patrolman's salary at $13,476 in 1973. Arlington Heights paid a top patrolman's salary of $13,390 for the same period.

Hanson, when asked, said, "We are still within reason as far as pay in the area goes."

He said Arlington Heights was within $15 to $20 annually when comparing top salaries received by patrolmen in other suburbs. He said other towns might be paying their police more because of their intradepartmental difficulties. He declined to be quoted on which towns had to pay more to keep their policemen.

During hearings for the 1970-71 budget, Hanson said in raising patrolmen's salaries from $10,600 to $11,600, "I know of one other suburban town that's higher than ours, and that's Deerfield."

YESTERDAY, Hanson said Arlington

Heights is not slipping in the pay scale as much as other towns are now catching up.

When asked about the comparatively low starting patrolman's salary, Hanson said it was compensated by the speed at which it is attained. "It only takes three years to get top pay here," he said, adding it takes 3.5 to 4 years to reach top pay in most other suburbs.

Hanson said of linking the Fireman II classification to police detective or traffic details, "I don't like comparing apples and oranges any more than necessary. Their (paramedics and detectives) work is not related in any way. There is no parallel."

Hanson said Arlington Heights is adequately protected with the present police force and saw no need for hiring additional men.

"If this were Utopia, I'd say 'yes.' All things considered though we have enough men. I heard one standard of a policeman for every 1,200 people and now I hear something else. It's a question of who sets the criteria," he said.

Motion to drop Stavros case denied by judge

by LYNN ASINOF

A motion to dismiss charges against James Stavros, indicted former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, because of pretrial publicity was denied yesterday in U.S. District Court.

Stavros' attorney, Joel Murray, asked that extortion charges against his client be dropped because of publicity resulting from a press conference called by U.S. Atty. James Thompson to announce the indictments. Murray contended that newspaper, radio and television coverage of Stavros' indictment and arrest has made it impossible for his client to get a fair trial.

Judge Hubert Will denied the motion, saying it was premature. The judge said he would consider the charges of pretrial publicity when he interviews prospective jurors for the case.

THE HEARING yesterday was the first of three scheduled on motions to dismiss charges against Stavros because of pretrial publicity. Stavros was indicted on charges of extortion and conspiracy in three separate indictments last month, and is appearing before three different judges.

The matter was originally scheduled for hearing today, but was discussed in court yesterday when Stavros was given permission to leave the northern district of Illinois for a vacation.

A trial date for Stavros is scheduled to be set March 1 when Judge Will will rule on any other pretrial motions entered by Murray. The judge gave Murray until next Thursday to file his pretrial motions.

Murray said he plans to file motions in all three of the pending Stavros cases. "They will be motions to dismiss all of the indictments on technical legal grounds and possibly other constitutional grounds," he said.

OTHER HEARINGS scheduled on the charges against Stavros are not scheduled until March 29 when he will appear before both Judge Abraham Lincoln Marovitz and Judge Philip Tone.

Also indicted with Stavros were Nicholas Phillips, a Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals employee and Stavros' cousin; William Bieber, Wheeling director of building and zoning; Michael Valenza, former Wheeling trustee and chairman of the environmental commission; William Hart, former Wheeling trustee, and Ira Collitz, a county zoning board member who resigned following the indictments.

All six have pleaded innocent to the charges. The indictments followed a year-long investigation into alleged shakedowns in Wheeling.

Heart-attack victim aided by paramedics

Elk Grove Village Fire Department paramedics came to the aid of a heart attack victim at the Elk Grove Village Bowling Alley Tuesday.

A paramedic team, led by senior paramedic John Pilkington, successfully resuscitated James Georgan, 42, of 125 King Arthur Ct., Palatine, after he suffered a full cardiac arrest.

Fire Chief Allen Hulett said Georgan, who suffered a heart attack while bowling, was treated by the paramedics and taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, where he is in serious condition in the coronary care unit.

Des Plaines man bound over on rape charge

A Des Plaines man has been bound over for a grand jury hearing on a rape charge stemming from the assault on a Maine Township woman last October.

The suspect, Robert Hinton, 24, of 1031 Linda Ln., was ordered sent to the grand jury after a preliminary hearing Tuesday in the Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court before Associate Judge Marvin J. Peters.

Hinton is charged with raping the woman after forcing his way into her apartment while she slept.

He was arrested less than a month later by Cook County Sheriff's Police outside the home of a Des Plaines woman who had complained of a "peeping tom."

Investigators had been suspicious of Hinton in the rape, connecting him to the case by using composite sketches made by police from victims' descriptions.

Hinton is currently free on $10,000 bond pending a hearing date before the grand jury.

A HOFFMAN ESTATES man, arrested the same day as Hinton by sheriff's police on separate rape charges is also awaiting a grand jury hearing date.

Harry Houck, 25, 394 Bode Rd., was ordered bound over after a preliminary hearing in the Niles circuit court branch Jan. 25.

Houck is accused of raping an Alexian Brothers Medical Center nurse Nov. 9 after pretending to take her to a gas station when he stopped to assist her when her car broke down.

Houck allegedly drove the woman to an Elk Grove Village trailer court and assaulted her.

Investigators took Houck into custody at his apartment after tying him to the rape, also through descriptions.

No tax hike despite $233,000 expenditures

Proposed township budget tops current figure by 45%

Palatine Township is considering a 1974-75 town fund budget of $233,000, more than 45 per cent higher than last year's budget of $160,000.

The increase, however, is not expected to cause a higher tax rate because homes in the township are increasing in value rapidly enough to compensate for the higher levy, according to Township Supervisor Howard Olsen.

Under the proposed budget, taxpayers would pay an estimated $5.20 to the township for a home with an assessed valuation of $10,000. The tentative budget, to be discussed Monday night does not include the township road and bridge budget.

A $50,000 SURPLUS from the 1973-74 budget is also expected to help offset the proposed 45 per cent budget increase. The surplus came from $20,000 in last year's budget set aside for the currently defunct collector's job, and $23,000 which was a carryover from the previous year.

The collector's salary and expenses are currently budgeted for a total of $23,250, in the event that the collector's duties are reinstated in court. The practice of township collectors passing on tax payments to the county while retaining a two per cent commission for the township was declared unconstitutional in 1969.

With the $50,000 subtracted from the new budget, the proposed expenditures are still up more than 14 per cent.

THE MAJOR cause of the jump is a tentative allotment of $109,000 to the Palatine Township Youth Committee, (PTYC) more than double the amount paid to the PTYC last year.

Representatives of the PTYC, which operates the Bridge youth services bureau, told township auditors at a recent meeting that the increase is caused by three things: a 1973 $30,000 contribution by other townships which will be discontinued in the coming year, $19,000 to start a joint program of health services and a hotline with those townships, and $8,000 for a full-time secretary and salary increases for counselors.

Other tentative increases include $10,000 for the Township Report, a newsletter started recently for township residents; $7,500 to repave the township parking lot and sidewalks, and $1,400 for salary increases to office and janitorial help.

For the first year, township auditors are contemplating setting aside $7,000 toward election expenses anticipated in 1977. Previous budgets have not included the $15,000 to $25,000 election costs until the actual election year, creating a strain on the election-year budget.

PLANS FOR THE revitalization of Palatine's central business district will be presented next week to the New Palatine Committee. The plan is expected to propose the construction of specialty shops, office buildings, closing of streets, changes in traffic patterns and landscaped malls with park benches.

New plans to be unveiled Wednesday

Shop centers, downtown decay lead to renewal plan

by JOANN VAN WYE
A news analysis

Competition from regional shopping centers has led to a new interest in Palatine and other communities in revitalizing their decaying central business districts.

Deteriorating buildings, vacant stores, congested traffic and lack of customer comforts, long the trademark of central business districts, have become the subjects of numerous downtown redevelopment studies.

Palatine is now working on its second downtown redevelopment plan in two years. Nothing happened after the first plan was prepared but this plan holds more promise for change.

Financing, the major stumbling block to any downtown redevelopment project, has been found Palatine's financial institutions have agreed to provide the required financing for desirable businesses to acquire land and remodel facilities in the downtown area.

A PRELIMINARY redevelopment plan will be presented Wednesday by Wilton Battles of Planning Horizons Inc., a Des Plaines planning firm.

The plan is being financed by the New Palatine Committee, a group of 12 businessmen working on the redevelopment project. A traffic study, financed by the village, is being prepared in conjunction with the redevelopment study.

Details of the plan have not been released. The redevelopment project is expected to offer shoppers an alternative to Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg.

No major retail stores are planned but rather a series of high-grade specialty stores with office space, according to Lee Morrison, chairman of the New Palatine Committee.

A similar downtown redevelopment project is being undertaken in Naperville, a town in DuPage County of the same size as Palatine and with a similar population projection.

FACED WITH GROWING competition from Yorktown only 12 miles away and the proposed Fox Valley East, less than three miles away, the downtown merchants formed the Central Area Naperville Development Organization, CAN DO.

CAN DO and the village of Naperville are jointly financing a land use study and urban design plan for a four block downtown area which is expected to be accepted by mid-March.

"In spite of the regional shopping centers, economic impact studies we have conducted justify the need to improve and renovate the downtown area," said Edward Magabery, director of the Naperville Chamber of Commerce.

"With the influx of people we are getting into the area we feel it is reasonable to assume that despite the regional shopping centers, people will support the downtown area because of its accessibility, perimeter parking and added aesthetics," said Magabery. He added studies indicate people are becoming disenchanted with the regional shopping centers and there is a trend away from them.

Skokie is now beginning the first phase of a redevelopment project expected to take nearly 10 years to complete.

The competition between Skokie's downtown business district and Old Orchard Shopping Center closely parallels the competition Palatine businessmen are feeling from Woodfield.

ROBERT MOLUMBY, planning director of Skokie, indicated he believes the regional shopping center and downtown business area could coexist. Regional shopping centers are largely a conglomeration of national stores not locally owned whereas downtown stores tend to be locally owned and operated and offer specialized items for special clientele, he said. Another advantage downtown areas have are their accessibility and the close proximity of parking, according to Molumby.

The situation is somewhat different in Oak Park, Evanston and Des Plaines which were once the regional shopping centers of their area and are now trying to redefine their position in light of the more modern regional shopping centers.

Private investors have announced plans to construct "super blocks" in Evanston and Des Plaines. Both plans call for a blend of office, retail and commercial space.

Ground is expected to be broken this spring for Des Plaines' $11 million super block. The land will be developed by J. R. Gottlieb and Co. as a two-story shopping mall topped by 10 stories of offices. Downtown merchants played an active role in attracting Gottlieb to Des Plaines. The merchants conducted several studies and then formed the Des Plaines Tomorrow Corp. to acquire land. The next step was to interview developers and sell the land.

Attorney calls bomb rap against cop 'unfounded'

Charges against Palatine policeman Richard J. Sikorski for allegedly placing a false bomb threat Feb. 11 are "completely unfounded," according to the attorney representing the patrolman.

John P. Crowley promised Wednesday that he would take "appropriate action" today on behalf of Sikorski. He would not be specific. The charges were filed Tuesday by Palatine Police Chief Jerry Bratcher.

A phone call warning of a bomb at Wilcox "Crest" (Creek) apartments was traced to Sikorski's apartment in the development, according to the police report. Bratcher said at the conclusion of his investigation that a phone tap on the line was "highly improbable."

"All we can say is that we consider the allegations to be completely unfounded," Crowley said. Crowley is a partner in the Chicago law firm of Crowley, Nash and Shea.

THE BOMB THREAT came on the eve of Sikorski's Feb. 12 testimony on behalf of former Palatine Police Chief Robert R. Centner. Sikorski told the Fire and Police Commission that he had been the subject of a possible frame-up and harassment in 1970 by dissident police who wanted Centner forced out of office.

Sikorski has been suspended without pay pending the outcome of the hearing. No date has been set for the hearing on the bomb threat, although Sikorski is scheduled for a minor unrelated disciplinary hearing tonight.

Alternatives for the patrolman include his resignation or a public hearing before the Palatine Fire and Police Commission which is also conducting the Centner hearing. The commission could either find Sikorski not guilty of placing the bomb threat, or find him guilty and dismiss or suspend him from the force for up to 30 days. Sikorski has been on the force since 1967.

At last—a happy gas crisis story

Gas station attendants and owners may complain about ruined lawns and cranky customers, but the gas shortage resulted in at least one good deed recently.

William Smedley, husband of the Pleasant Hill PTA president, showed up at the school one afternoon and offered to take teachers' cars to the gas station for a fill up.

It took him most of the afternoon to get gas for approximately three cars, according to school officials.

PTA GUEST AUTHOR, Stella Pevsner of Palatine, looks over one of her books with Paddeck School student Ed Kemnitz at Tuesday's book fair.

MAKING UP ONE of many science kits used in Dist. 15 is Fremd senior Joni Steiner and science department chairman Carl Bollwinkle. The trays in the back contain tiny items such as nails and straws.

They're part of science curriculum

Beans, crayfish and redhots

by REGINA OEHLE

Once upon a time, the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 science department chairman's major worry was passing the science books out on time.

Now he's frantically hunting for crayfish (crawdads) in the middle of winter and trying to figure out the easiest way of dividing up frog's eggs.

Shelves upon shelves loaded with boxes and packages and bottles and jars comprise the major part of his office located in Pleasant Hill School, Palatine. Mealworms crawl around in a bottle, while frog's eggs mature in an ashtray.

Sugar, salt, macaroni, wax paper, tinfoil and vinegar comprise a homely but necessary list of items essential for the new elementary science study curriculum begun in the school two years ago.

It would be easier just to give out science books, admitted science department chairman Carl Bollwinkle, but it wouldn't be as interesting to the students.

The new science curriculum, instituted two years ago, concentrates on teaching youngsters science through experience and experiments and is comprised of kits. Most of these have materials such as vinegar or crayfish that have to be replaced after each use.

THEREFORE, Bollwinkle goes to the neighborhood grocery store and purchases about 15 pounds of salt or 15 packages of steel wool.

He said that the employees of the store no longer look too surprised. "They're used to me now," he added. But sometimes he still gets funny looks from other shoppers as he wheels around a cart piled high with beans, he said.

Still, grocery stores have limitations in regard to the Dist. 15 science program. "You can't just go down to the corner store and get 15 dozen crayfish," Bollwinkle said worriedly.

Different science kits are used for first through sixth grade. Each kit is used by four different groups during the year, saving the district the money needed to purchase a science kit for each group of five to six youngsters, Bollwinkle said.

ONE OF THE kits, a study on seeds, contains various seeds, beans and candy "redhots." The "seeds" are planted and the children watch to see what will grow. "So far, we have not been able to raise a red hot tree," Bollwinkle said.

Helping refurbish the kits after each use are assistant Nancy Morgan and three high school students, Joni Steiner, Debbie McWilliams and Mitch West.

"I'm not afraid of worms or snakes," said Mrs. Morgan, "just mice."

Though the science kits do not include mice, one did drop in for a brief unexpected visit a few weeks ago, Mrs. Morgan said.

The children aren't upset by the creatures, either, Bollwinkle said. "Nothing really bothers them," he added. The program is set to encourage the youngsters' native curiosity.

"We're convinced it's worth it (all the work involved in refurbishing the science kits)," Bollwinkle said. A book wouldn't accomplish the type of thing the district is attempting, he added. The children, encouraged to investigate questions of their own, generally go to the resource center on their own and read up on the project, he said. They're not forced to read instead of do.

New plans to be unveiled Wednesday

North Western Ry. and municipal buildings to the downtown area will help bolster Des Plaines' attempt to restore its position as a commercial center, according to James Paroubek, president of the Des Plaines Redevelopment Assn.

Two 20-story office buildings with commercial and retail space are being proposed by Hawthorn Realty Groups for Evanston.

BIDS ARE NOW being let for a $1.1 million pedestrian mall in Oak Park. The project will be financed through an unprecedented special service area tax. Two 34-story apartment and condominium buildings are proposed for the fringes of the pedestrian mall.

A "super block" also may be in the offing for Palatine on the block where the old Palatine National Bank and the Ben Franklin store, gutted by fire a year ago, is located.

Morrison has indicated the Palatine National Bank is negotiating for the purchase of other property on the block and development is contingent on how much land can be acquired.

The New Palatine Committee has indicated it would like to see a planned approach taken to the redevelopment instead of piecemeal but this will depend on the availability of property to join parcels into large planning areas.

No new leads in $15,000 bank robbery

Police are without new leads in Tuesday's $15,000 predawn robbery of the First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility.

Arlington Heights police questioned commuters yesterday morning in an unsuccessful effort to gather new information. A detective said a woman claimed to have made a deposit in the outside depository during the time of the holdup, but saw nothing unusual.

Bank officials set their loss at $15,000 yesterday. Earlier announcements had placed the amount at $100,000 and then $20,000.

An agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said, "We're still kicking it around. We have a lot of ends to tie up. The best thing to say is we're still investigating it."

Police said they hoped a commuter may have witnessed the robbery or seen the waiting getaway car parked next to the facility at Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road. The intersection is passed by thousands of commuters daily on their way to the Chicago and North Western Ry. station.

BRUCE DODDS, executive vice president of the bank, said early police bulletins of $100,000 were erroneous.

"The amount is $15,000. We have never had that amount ($100,000) in there. It is physically impossible to have that much money there," he said.

Dodds blamed the "exaggerated" amount released earlier on the teller's fright. "If you hear the tapes of the call to police, you can hear she is very upset — as well she might be."

The 23-year-old woman teller was surprised by a masked gunman as she opened the building at 6:45 a.m. Tuesday. The gunman forced her to open the safe and then fled after taking her out of the building and locking her keys inside.

It is believed the gunman and an accomplice fled to the Northwest Tollway in a dark late model sedan without attracting notice.

Barrington man hurt in two-car collision

A two-car crash with a parked fork lift last night on Roselle Road north of Algonquin Road left a 24-year-old Barrington man with leg injuries.

Adrian Merchant, driver of the second auto, was treated and released from Northwest Community in Arlington Heights for a bruised leg from the accident. According to Palatine firemen, the accident occurred when an auto hit a fork lift which was parked on the side of the road and knocked it over.

Merchant's auto struck the first car and spun around. The accident occurred at 7:21 p.m. Further details of the accident were unavailable last night from Cook County sheriff's Police.

Few raise cattle in suburbs

by BETTY LEE

Local 4-H clubs are steering away from the traditional agricultural projects and are undertaking those that are more in tune with suburban living.

In the Northwest suburbs where raising cattle, growing vegetables, canning food and other farm activities are nearly impossible, the club's members are devoting time to nature studies, public speaking, arts and crafts, sewing and other activities.

"The clubs are setting programs that are not strictly agricultural," said Betty Lash, a community worker for the North Cook County 4-H Cooperative Extension in Arlington Heights. The extension service is a University of Illinois program.

She added that the main purpose of 4-H clubs remains the same despite the different activities . . . to teach boys and girls to be better citizens, to be leaders in the community and to be a better, all-around person.

CHILDREN LEARN to adapt to suburban living by the activities that are available to them. Currently there is a film series on nutrition to teach club members the importance of vitamins and nutrients in their daily meals.

For younger children whose interest may not hold well in reading textbooks, the extension service offers comic book learning geared to those in third to sixth grades.

From building model airplanes to collecting newspapers for recycling, the club members decide on their own what projects to pursue. Currently there are nine clubs in Arlington Heights, led by parents who are knowledgeable in particular activities.

A new member will be screened to the appropriate club even though most clubs carry varied projects.

"WE PLACE THE child in appropriate clubs and sometimes we get parents to start a new one and lead it," Mrs. Lash said. Children who wish to join should call the Farm Bureau Building at 201 N. Dunton at CL 3-6480.

Older children who have been in 4-H clubs can participate in the junior leadership program, said Mrs. Lash. These children can volunteer to help younger members in special meetings and workshops.

Each summer the 4-H members center activities around the 4-H state fair. More ambitious members also enter contests in the Illinois State fair. Last summer area 4-H clubs participated in an exhibition at the Future of America Fair held at the Arlington Race Track.

The University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Service will move this fall to a new two-story building still in construction on the west side of Hicks Road, just north of Euclid Avenue in Rolling Meadows. The extension service will share the building with the Cook County Farm Bureau.

Nursing facility OK'd; Crossroads 'won't be' at site

by TONI GINETTI

Fear of the possible moving of the controversial Crossroads Clinic into Rolling Meadows turned out to be the main concern last night in what was to have been a zoning hearing on a proposed nursing home.

Despite the controversy, however, a seven-man zoning panel voted 4-3 to recommend approval of the nursing home plan provided it is developed only as a convalescent and extended care facility. The vote came after the panel deliberated privately for almost half an hour.

The debate on the Crossroads Clinic, a treatment center for adolescents, started when Dr. Douglas R. Finlayson, on the board of directors of Crossroads, presented his plans to build a 93-bed extended care facility on Hicks Road and Winnetka Avenue. The site is next to a medical building now under construction which Finlayson will use as his private clinic.

FINLAYSON is seeking rezoning for a two-acre parcel for the skilled care facility.

ity. The city council must give final approval for the plan.

But the rezoning request became a secondary concern last night as commissioners began questioning Finlayson on whether Crossroads, which provides venereal disease treatment and distributes birth control information to teenagers, may be relocated into Finlayson's Rolling Meadows medical clinic.

Crossroads, located in Palatine township, will lose its lease April 1, and must find a new location. Finlayson said last night Crossroads officials are still looking for a new site.

He repeatedly denied last night, however, that the clinic would be moved into the Rolling Meadows site, for which zoning was granted by the city last year.

"Absolutely not," was Finlayson's response to a question by Commissioner Keith Bane on the moving of the clinic into the city. "I have not offered space to them in the clinic," Finlayson said. "I would not want to move them into my office. There would not be room for them."

SEVERAL RESIDENTS, including Mayor Roland Meyer, criticized the plan, implying Finlayson had misrepresented his intentions in seeking zoning for last year for the medical clinic on Hicks Road.

But Finlayson's attorney, Mark Beaubien Jr., defended the doctor, saying he has contributed much of his time to the treatment of youths at the clinic and that criticism of him from persons who morally oppose Crossroads work was unfair.

Statistics show that 64 of some 990 youths treated at Crossroads last year live in Rolling Meadows.

Several times during the hearing last night, commission chairman Richard Schar had to interrupt discussion when the Crossroads subject instead of the nursing home was continually raised.

Voting to recommend approval of the plan were commissioners Robert Byrnes, Schar, Mrs. Pat Jacobsen and Carl Couve. Opposing the plan were commissioners Bane, Bernard Macklin and Elizabeth Brissenden.

The city council is scheduled to consider Finlayson's proposal next Tuesday.

THE ROLLING MEADOWS Sports Complex ice arena was once one of the most popular meeting places in the city. However, since its completion in 1971, average daily attendance has been dropping, from a high of 550 in 1971 to a low of between 100 and 300 at a session. Skating classes, on the other hand, have increased.

Fickle skaters

Interest in public skating sessions down; park district turning to special programs

by REGINA OEHLER
A news analysis

In 1971, as many as 550 persons skated at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex on a Friday evening. The ice arena and recreational complex was new in those days, paid for by tax dollars and apparently enthusiastically supported by residents.

Since then, public skating at the $800,000 complex had dropped off to about 300 on a Friday night. Few families now attend public skating sessions and the park district has turned to the more lucrative and popular business of special ice skating classes and hockey teams playing at the ice rink.

What happened? Park district officials aren't sure but say the decline may be because of the construction of other rinks in the area. Steve Person, director of parks and recreation, says the novelty of the Rolling Meadows facility has worn off.

He added that since the heyday of the ice arena, Rolling Meadows High School has been built. Person said many of the youngsters that used to go ice skating are now attending basketball games, football games and other activities at the high school.

THE IDEA to build the sports complex, one of the first of its kind in the Northwest suburbs, came in 1969 after a survey revealed residents were interested in skating.

The arena was approved as part of a $800,000 referendum passed in 1969 and first opened in January of 1971. The sale of passes was high — 288 were sold within the first month of operation.

As of the end of December this season, only 64 season passes have been sold.

In 1971, daily attendance at the rink averaged from 400 to 500. This year, daily attendance averages from about 100 to 300 a session, according to facility coordinator Rudy Nelson.

Also in 1971, the district's team hockey program, boasted only about 95 youngsters. This year there are approximately 350 involved. The learn-to-skate program has increased from 438 in 1971 to almost 700 youngsters this year.

"THIS MEANS that people have gone out of public skating and into the programs," Person said. He added that because of the shift in interest, the park district has been scheduling more programs and less public skating.

How much money does the ice arena make or lose for the park district? Person said he doesn't know. He said the ice arena income and expenditures of past years were figured in with income and expenditures from the rest of the complex, and not kept separate. This is the first year that separate figures will be available, he said. Person took over as superintendent a little more than a year and a half ago.

The number of hours scheduled for public skating per week has declined from a high of 38½ in 1972 to 26 for this year, and may be cut further succeeding seasons. Surrounding area ice rinks have between 66 to 16 hours for public skating each week.

Since the rink's opening in 1971, residents have complained about the high cost of skating and the prevalence of minor equipment thefts.

"I think if everybody stopped going there, maybe the park board would feel sorry for the poor people in Rolling Meadows who cannot afford all that money," one 10-year-old wrote in 1971.

IT WASN'T until daily general admission and the sale of passes decreased substantially during the 1972-73 season that the 10-year-old got his wish. The price of passes remained the same, but the cost of daily admission decreased from $2 to $1 per adult and from $1 to 75 cents for students.

The decrease was partially balanced out by another decrease in the number of hours during each public skating session. The Rolling Meadows Park Board last fall also cut sessions from three to two hours.

The two ice arenas in the area that report the largest numbers of skaters are the Randhurst and Woodfield facilities. Woodfield reportedly has as many as 550 at a session and Randhurst has up to 300 on a weekend session.

The Arlington Ice Spectrum has approximately the same number of skaters as the Rolling Meadows rink, according to manager Jim Brown.

No new leads in $15,000 bank robbery

Police are without new leads in Tuesday's $15,000 pre-dawn robbery of the First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility.

Arlington Heights police questioned commuters yesterday morning in an unsuccessful effort to gather new information. A detective said a woman claimed to have made a deposit in the outside depository during the time of the holdup, but saw nothing unusual.

Bank officials set their loss at $15,000 yesterday. Earlier announcements had placed the amount at $100,000 and then $20,000.

An agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said, "We're still kicking it around. We have a lot of ends to tie up. The best thing to say is we're still investigating it."

Police said they hoped a commuter may have witnessed the robbery or seen the waiting getaway car parked next to the facility at Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road. The intersection is passed by thousands of commuters daily on their way to the Chicago and North Western Ry. station.

BRUCE DODDS, executive vice president of the bank, said early police bulletins of $100,000 were erroneous.

"The amount is $15,000. We have never had that amount ($100,000) in there. It is physically impossible to have that much money there," he said.

Dodds blamed the "exaggerated" amount released earlier on the teller's fright. "If you hear the tapes of the call to police, you can hear she is very upset — as well she might be."

The 23-year-old woman teller was surprised by a masked gunman as she opened the building at 8:45 a.m. Tuesday. The gunman forced her to open the safe and then fled after taking her out of the building and locking her keys inside.

It is believed the gunman and an accomplice fled to the Northwest Tollway in a dark late model sedan without attracting notice.

No tax hike despite $233,000 expenditures

Proposed township budget up 45%

Palatine Township is considering a 1974-75 town fund budget of $233,000, more than 45 per cent higher than last year's budget of $160,000.

The increase, however, is not expected to cause a higher tax rate because homes in the township are increasing in value rapidly enough to compensate for the higher levy, according to Township Supervisor Howard Olsen.

Under the proposed budget, taxpayers would pay an estimated $5.20 to the township for a home with an assessed valuation of $10,000. The tentative budget, to be discussed Monday night does not include the township road and bridge budget.

A $50,000 SURPLUS from the 1973-74 budget is also expected to help offset the proposed 45 per cent budget increase. The surplus came from $20,000 in last year's budget set aside for the currently defunct collector's job, and $30,000 which was a carryover from the previous year.

The collector's salary and expenses are currently budgeted for a total of $23,250, in the event that the collector's duties are reinstated in court. The practice of township collectors passing on tax payments to the county while retaining a two per cent commission for the township was declared unconstitutional in 1969.

With the $50,000 subtracted from the new budget, the proposed expenditures are still up more than 14 per cent.

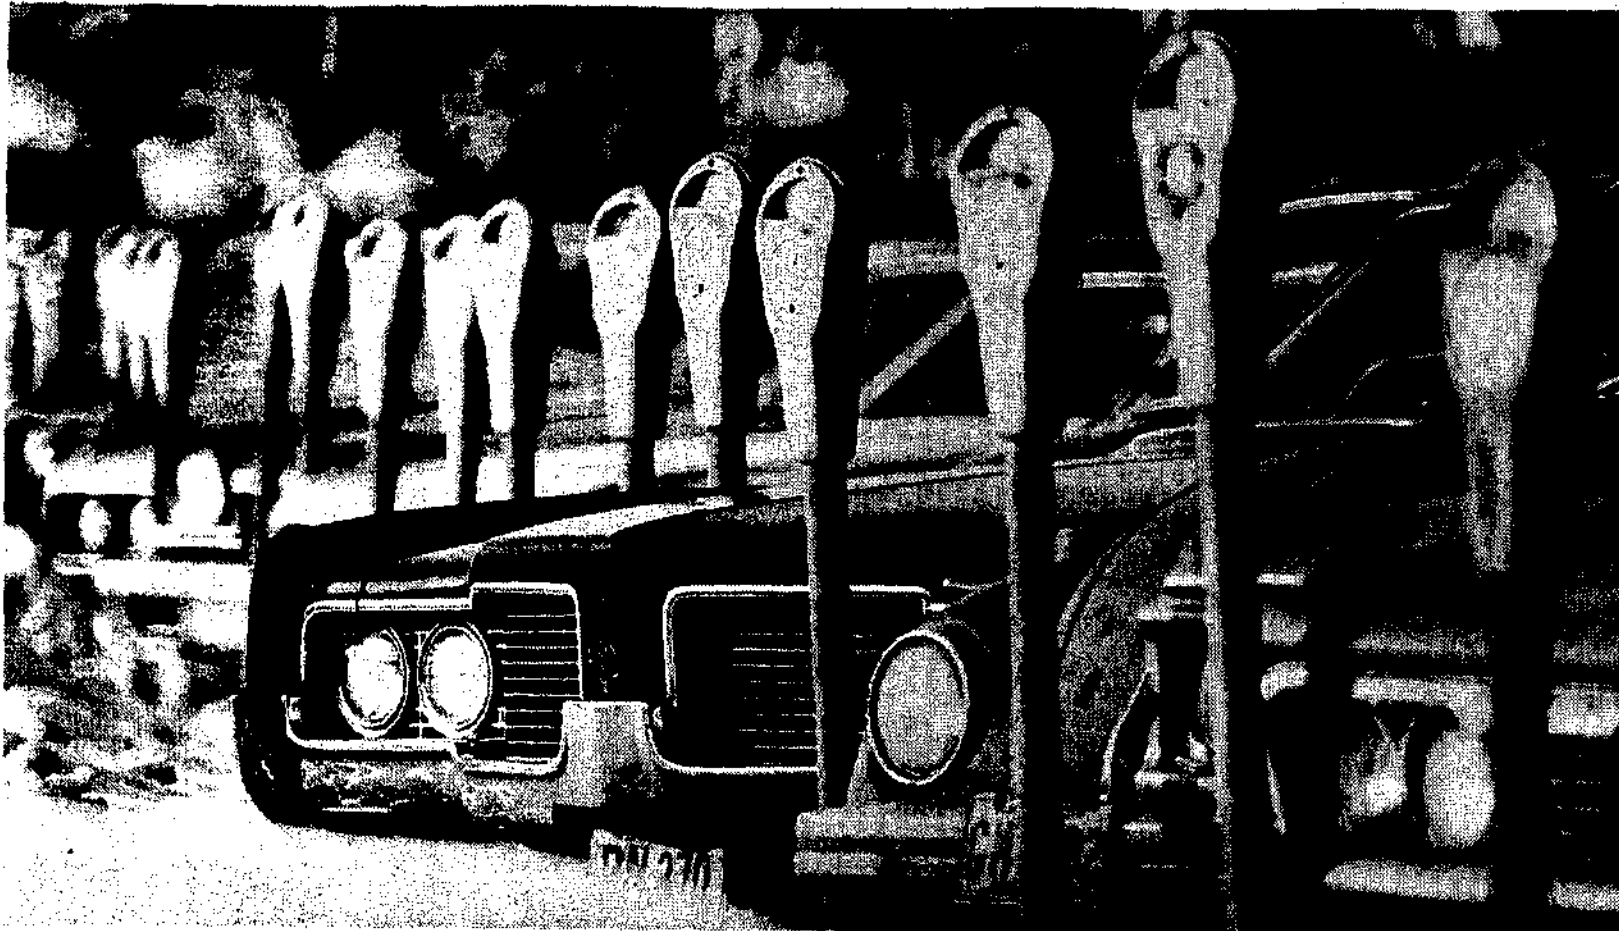

THE MAJOR cause of the jump is a tentative allotment of $109,000 to the Palatine Township Youth Committee (PTYC) more than double the amount paid to the PTYC last year.

Representatives of the PTYC, which operates the Bridge youth services bureau, told township auditors at a recent meeting that the increase is caused by three things: a 1973 $30,000 contribution by other townships which will be discontinued in the coming year; $19,000 to start a joint program of health services and a hotline with those townships, and $8,000 for a full-time secretary and salary increases for counselors.

Other tentative increases include $10,000 for the Township Report, a newsletter started recently for township residents; $7,500 to repave the township parking lot and sidewalks, and $1,400 for salary increases to office and janitorial help.

For the first year, township auditors are contemplating setting aside $7,000 toward election expenses anticipated in 1977. Previous budgets have not included the $15,000 to $25,000 election costs until the actual election year, creating a strain on the election-year budget.

MAKING UP ONE of many science kits used in Dist. 15 chairman Carl Bollwinkle. The trays in the back contain is Fremd senior Joni Steiner and science department tiny items such as nails and straws.

They're part of science curriculum

Beans, crayfish and redhots

by REGINA OEHLER

Once upon a time, the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 science department chairman's major worry was passing the science books out on time.

Now he's frantically hunting for crayfish (crawdads) in the middle of winter and trying to figure out the easiest way of dividing up frog's eggs.

Shelves upon shelves loaded with boxes and packages and bottles and jars comprise the major part of his office located in Pleasant Hill School, Palatine. Mealworms crawl around in a bottle, while frog's eggs mature in an ashtray.

Sugar, salt, macaroni, wax paper, tin-foil and vinegar comprise a homely but necessary list of items essential for the new elementary science study curriculum begun in the school two years ago.

It would be easier just to give out science books, admitted science department chairman Carl Bollwinkle, but it wouldn't be as interesting to the students.

The new science curriculum, instituted two years ago, concentrates on teaching youngsters science through experience and experiments and is comprised of kits. Most of these have materials such as vinegar or crayfish that have to be replaced after each use.

THEREFORE, Bollwinkle goes to the neighborhood grocery store and purchases about 15 pounds of salt or 15 packages of steel wool.

He said that the employees of the store no longer look too surprised. "They're used to me now," he added. But sometimes he still gets funny looks from other shoppers as he wheels around a cart piled high with beans, he said.

Still, grocery stores have limitations in regard to the Dist. 15 science program. "You can't just go down to the corner store and get 15 dozen crawfish," Bollwinkle said worriedly.

Different science kits are used for first through sixth grade. Each kit is used by four different groups during the year, saving the district the money needed to purchase a science kit for each group of five to six youngsters, Bollwinkle said.

ONE OF THE kits, a study on seeds, contains various seeds, beans and candy "redhots." The "seeds" are planted and the children watch to see what will grow. "So far, we have not been able to raise a red hot tree," Bollwinkle said.

Helping refurbish the kits after each use are assistant Nancy Morgan and three high school students, Joni Steiner, Debbie McWilliams and Mitch West.

"I'm not afraid of worms or snakes," said Mrs. Morgan, "just mice."

Though the science kits do not include mice, one did drop in for a brief unexpected visit a few weeks ago, Mrs. Morgan said.

The children aren't upset by the creatures, either, Bollwinkle said. "Nothing really bothers them," he added. The program is set to encourage the youngsters' native curiosity.

"We're convinced it's worth it (all the work involved in refurbishing the science kits)," Bollwinkle said. A book wouldn't accomplish the type of thing the district is attempting, he added. The children, encouraged to investigate questions of their own, generally go to the resource center on their own and read up on the project, he said. They're not forced to read instead of do.

Cop's bomb rap 'unfounded': attorney

Charges against Palatine policeman Richard J. Sikorski for allegedly placing a false bomb threat Feb. 11 are "completely unfounded," according to the attorney representing the patrolman.

John P. Crowley promised Wednesday that he would take "appropriate action" today on behalf of Sikorski. He would not be specific. The charges were filed Tuesday by Palatine Police Chief Jerry Bratcher.

A phone call warning of a bomb at Willow "Crest" (Creek) apartments was traced to Sikorski's apartment in the development, according to the police report. Bratcher said at the conclusion of his investigation that a phone tap on the line was "highly improbable."

"All we can say is that we consider the allegations to be completely unfounded," Crowley said. Crowley is a partner in the Chicago law firm of Crowley, Nash and Shea.

THE BOMB THREAT came on the eve of Sikorski's Feb. 12 testimony on behalf of former Palatine Police Chief Robert R. Centner. Sikorski told the Fire and Police Commission that he had been the subject of a possible frame-up and harassment in 1970 by dissident police who wanted Centner forced out of office.

Sikorski has been suspended without pay pending the outcome of the hearing. No date has been set for the hearing on the bomb threat, although Sikorski is scheduled for a minor unrelated disciplinary hearing tonight.

Alternatives for the patrolman include his resignation or a public hearing before the Palatine Fire and Police Commission which is also conducting the Centner hearing. The commission could either find Sikorski not guilty of placing the bomb threat, or find him guilty and dismiss or suspend him from the force for up to 30 days. Sikorski has been on the force since 1967.

Rolling Meadows

yearbook wins honor

The Rolling Meadows High School 1973 yearbook staff recently received the Golden Eagle award from the American Yearbook Co. for the unusual cover and layout design of the 1973 Yearling.

The tan cowhide and branding iron specially designed to stamp the word "Impressions" involved a great deal of time and effort, according to yearbook adviser Bill Leece. The staff went to a tannery and selected the cowhide. Vincent Laken, a resident of Harvey, Ill., who has crafted western items for Walt Disney Productions, donated the branding iron to the school.

The Yearling staff's Golden Eagle is the second such award given an Illinois high school this year.

Park improvement

work bids still open

Bids for improvement work in the Salt Creek Park District's three parks are still being accepted by the district. Bids were to have been reviewed at a special park district meeting Tuesday, but the bidding deadline has instead been extended to Feb. 26 to solicit more bids.

Park improvement work will include the construction of three outdoor tennis courts as well as additional playground and landscaping in Winston Park, Rose Park and South Park.

Barrington man hurt in two-car collision

Adrian Merchant, driver of the second auto, was treated and released from Northwest Community in Arlington Heights for a bruised leg from the accident. According to Palatine firemen, the accident occurred when an auto hit a fork lift which was parked on the side of the road and knocked it over.

Merchant's auto struck the first car and spun around. The accident occurred at 7:21 p.m. Further details of the accident were unavailable last night from Cook County sheriff's Police.

Camp Fire's 64th birthday

Camp Fire Girls will be celebrating their 64th Birthday with a balloon launch at Rolling Meadows High School Baseball Field, March 17.

The girls will be attending churches of their choice, then gather at the field Sunday morning.

Each balloon will carry a self-addressed stamped postcard with space for the date found and the place found. Last year, a postcard came back from a small town outside Philadelphia, Pa.

The girls will also bake cupcakes and present them to neighboring schools, churches, libraries and city officials as a way of saying thank-you for supporting local youth groups during the week of March 17.

Special recruitment committee named

11 applicants for village trustee post under review

by PAT GERLACH

Applications from 11 persons interested in being appointed to a Schaumburg Village Board vacancy are being reviewed by a special recruitment committee headed by Trustee Ray Kessel.

"We plan to interview all candidates as soon as possible and hope to select three nominees for recommendation to the executive board of Schaumburg United Party by the first week in March," Kessel, senior village trustee and deputy chairman of SUP, said yesterday. The vacancy was created by the recent resignation of Denis Ledgewood, who has moved from the community.

Kessel said it has been agreed that names of applicants will not be released but confirmed that "more than one woman" has applied.

"I think we have a good representative group to make our selection from," he said, adding applicants come "from all parts of the village."

The SUP executive board will narrow the field down to one prospective applicant for recommendation to Mayor Robert O. Atcher and trustees.

Among the 11 who have submitted applications are Suzanne Popp, an unsuccessful independent candidate for trustee in last year's village election, Dennis Conley, and Beverly Wegrzyn, The Herald has learned.

Mrs. Wegrzyn and Conley are members of SUP; Mrs. Popp is not a member of the village party.

Township acts on Jones Rd. complaints

Parents who have complained to village officials in Schaumburg Township about the condition of Jones Road may be appeased by maintenance programs that have been initiated.

Hoffman Estates Village Mgr. George Longmeyer has received letters from parents of Churchill School children, complaining about the chuckholes and ruts in the roadway. Schaumburg Village Mgr. John Coste has received similar letters from the principals of Churchill and Eisenhower schools.

The current letters follow a pattern that has evolved over several years.

Poor surface conditions on the roadway make it difficult for drivers to control cars, and increase the risk of autos striking children as they walk to school, parents have said in the past. They have also complained the autos kick up loose gravel and chunks of broken pavement, which could strike and injure a child.

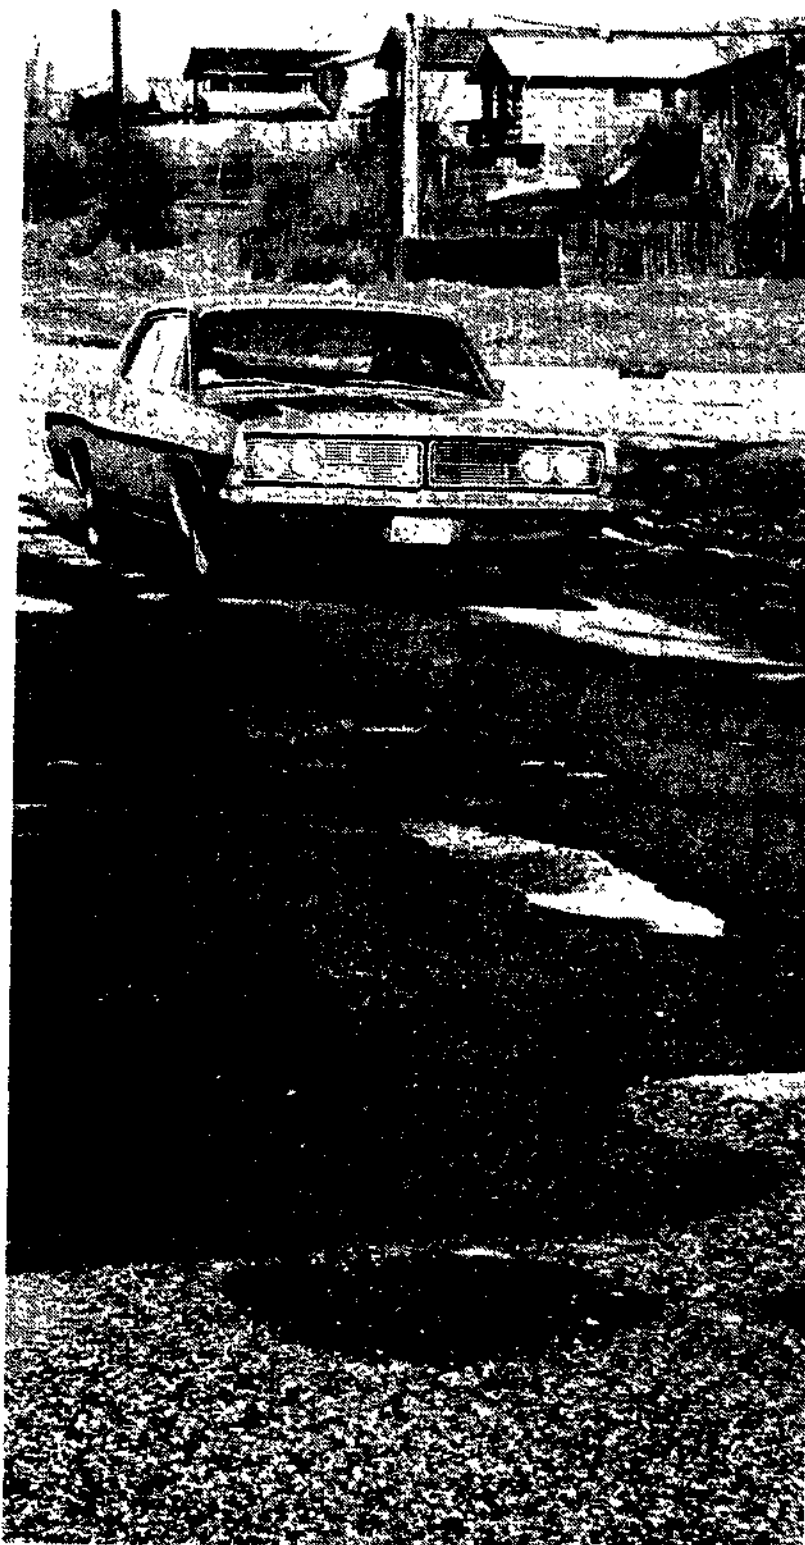

JONES ROAD is peculiar because it is divided by three invisible lines. One end is completely in Hoffman Estates, the other is completely in Schaumburg. And the piece in between is split lengthwise, with each community owning and having maintenance responsibility for half.

Jurisdictional confusion has contributed to normal maintenance problems. But the communities now are working to eliminate the odd boundaries for all time, and put the entire roadway in Hoffman Estates.

Meanwhile, Hoffman Estates has established a twice weekly program of cold patching on its share of the roadway, said Longmeyer. Coste said Schaumburg also is repairing its share, cold patching on an "as needed" basis.

After total ownership has been transferred to Hoffman Estates, the road is to be rebuilt, said Longmeyer. He estimated completion of the reconstruction in August.

SPLIT BETWEEN Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg, Jones Road is a stepchild when it comes to repairs. But, it will be rebuilt.

Rap session

School board, students open new avenues of communication...and find it valuable

by KATHERINE BOYCE

A week before a student graduates from a Dist. 211 high school, the school still sends his parents a note when he cuts a class says, Ed Bell, senior at Conant high school.

Bell told Dist. 211 Board members he doesn't think that's fair. A high school student, especially a senior, is old enough to take responsibility himself, Bell said, and when he gets into trouble it's his fault and his responsibility — not his parents.

Bell was one of 10 students who took part in Dist. 211's first "rap session" between board members and students Thursday night. The topics of discussion were varied during the 2½-hour meeting and opinions were hardly one-sided. But arguments were not heated and both students and board members were smiling at the end.

Board Pres. Robert Creek said it was the "most enjoyable board meeting I've been to in four years," and promised to hold one such session each semester.

MUCH OF THE evening was spent discussing student discipline and school rules. Several students complained that the rules are too rigid.

Board member Glenn Hargrave said, "I would hope rules in our policy book are set up with some tempered justice. If they're not, I certainly would like to know. Rules are there for the flagrant violators."

The tardy rule was particularly vexing to some students, who said it is difficult to get from one end of the school building to the other without being late to class. Board members said students often bring the tardy problem on themselves by dawdling in the halls or walking a girl friend to class. Bell said the tardy rule really didn't bother him personally because, "I've never been tardy in four years — of course I never had a girl friend either."

FREEMD HIGH School student Jonathan Nelson objected to a rule forcing a student to drop a class for cutting the class too often.

"I don't feel you should deny a student an opportunity to go to school for not exercising his right to go to school," he said. Board member Robert Seger questioned whether attendance really makes a difference if a student is getting good grades.

Board member Jean Fiesler said there are an "astronomical amount of suspensions" in Dist. 211 schools and asked Nelson if he had an alternative to them. Let a student make up the work he has missed when he cuts a class, said Nelson, and then give him extra assignments. At least he won't be denied an education, Nelson said.

Creek questioned whether giving extra assignments would be workable. What if 2,000 kids had extra projects in a month. Who would grade them, he asked.

DETENTIONS, that is requiring a student to stay after school, aren't really punishment, said Karen Winkels, student from Schaumburg High School.

"They're more a slap on the hand than a real punishment." Sometimes parents don't even find out a student has served a detention, she said. "I'm not dumb, I wouldn't go up to my parents and say 'Ha, ha, I got a detention today.'"

A few students asked the board if they could have an indoor area for cigarette smokers in the school or a shelter over the outdoor area now set aside for them. When it's cold students smoke in the bathrooms, said Miss Winkels, and you "gag when you walk in there."

Nelson said he is against an indoor smoking area because it would give smokers a lounge of their own. It would "set up smoking as a privileged status," he said.

Smoking is on the way out, said Bell. This year some boys at Conant went into the bathroom and made some other boys put out their cigarettes, he said.

ON ANOTHER issue, Bell said all unnecessary student driving should be eliminated to conserve gasoline. School parking permits for students should be reviewed and violators should be ticketed by the police, he said. Alex Iuorio from Palatine High School agreed, saying, "Are we just fooling ourselves that there isn't an energy crisis? It's got to be done."

Students expressed good feelings about the meeting once it was over. Nelson said he was glad it was informal, but "we didn't get as deep into policy matters as I would have liked."

"It's great. I'm sorry it didn't happen before," said Bell. The session covered "just about everything that we were concerned about," he said.

Firemen's union rebuffed in bid for recognition

Unionized employees of Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District were rebuffed again last night in their attempts to obtain recognition of their firefighters' local.

Fire District Trustees Tom Cussen and William Brilliant, district president, responded with a "no comment" to a written statement delivered last night asking for an answer to a petition filed with the board last August. The petition had sought recognition for Local 2061 of the International Association of Firefighters.

Richard Cordova, president of the local, read the statement, which cited services the firemen have provided "beyond the realm of our paid positions as firefighters." He noted the men have created unity among paid and volunteer firemen, have promoted professionalism through use of the international union's research department, have improved public relations for the department by working with local Jaycees and raised funds for the Muscular Dystrophy Foundation in their annual Fire-Boot drive.

CORDOVA SAID the firemen "feel it is now time to unite the fire district and the union local. The trustees agreed they would discuss the union question "among ourselves," but did not promise an answer on any specific date. Cussen said he agreed the firemen have "done a fine job as firemen and individuals in the community."

Brilliant commented the board had voted in August not to recognize the union. However, after the meeting, Cordova said that vote had been to take the recognition question under advisement. Cordova said the firemen hoped to maintain communications with the board, but will look forward to the establishment of a municipal fire department as the beginning of labor relations with the Village of Hoffman Estates.

Although the board did not recognize the union last night, it did authorize the firemen to place a plaque recognizing Local 2061 for its contributions in the Muscular Dystrophy drive on the wall in the board meeting room. The plaque was presented by the Muscular Dystrophy Foundation and specifically names the local.

Peskin trial delayed—by fuel crisis

by NANCY COWGER

The trial of Bernard Peskin, accused of passing bribes to six former Hoffman Estates officials, has been postponed because of the energy crisis.

Assistant U. S. Atty. Anton Valukas confirmed yesterday that jury selection, to have started Monday, now is slated to start at 10 a.m. March 11.

Valukas said the primary reason for the delay is the need to bring witnesses in from out of state. Short supplies made it necessary to provide more leeway time in bringing the witnesses to Chicago, he said.

Although Valukas declined to discuss the identity of out-of-state witnesses, attorneys for the former village officials who pleaded guilty have indicated their clients are willing to cooperate in any fashion requested by the U. S. Attorney's office. Several of them are serving their sentences in out-of-state prisons.

PESKINS, A FORMER state legislator, is accused of passing $50,000 in bribes to two former village mayors and four ex-trustees in exchange for favorable zoning for the Barrington Square development built by Kaufman and Broad Homes, Inc. (K&B). He is charged with 11 counts of bribery, one count of conspiracy to commit bribery and two of income tax evasion.

The tax evasion charges allege Peskin misstated his family income and his legal partnership's income on federal tax returns for 1968 by a total of about $40,000.

Peskin was one of seven persons named in the original indictment in October in the zoning bribery scheme. The six past village officials have all pleaded guilty to portions of the charges each faced. All but one of them have been sentenced to jail terms ranging from six months to two years.

HERBERT GIBSON, 46, of 1816 James-town Circle, Hoffman Estates, is scheduled for sentencing at 10 a.m. Tuesday on his guilty pleas to two bribery charges and one count of conspiracy and filing a false income tax return. He was indicted on 11 bribery counts, as well as the single conspiracy and tax charges.

The eighth defendant in the case, K&B, pleaded no contest to five bribery charges, and paid a $50,000 fine.

Gibson, a village trustee from 1965 to 1969, could face maximum penalties of 18 years in prison and $40,000 in fines. But in light of the sentences, handed out by Judge McGarr to other defendants in the bribery scheme, it is expected his sentence will be well below the maximum.

Peskin, 51, of 7 Timberland Dr., Northbrook, a Chicago attorney, was state representative for the old Sixth District, from 1958 to 1966. That district included Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine, Schaumburg, Hanover, Barrington and Northfield townships. Until two weeks prior to the indictment, he was Northfield Township Democratic Committeeman.

College commuter bus to Elgin, DeKalb 'not bad'

The first week of college commuter bus service from Schaumburg to Elgin and DeKalb was described as "not bad" by Dale Nygaard of Streamwood, who shares driver duty with Dennis Ward of Elgin.

About 80 riders used the bus in the first week, paying the $1.25 fare for the round trip. Nygaard said an average of 28 to 35 riders per night would bring the service to the break-even point, and permit it to continue at that charge.

If ridership does not increase, a fare hike to $1.50 round trip is possible. If patronage jumps substantially, a fare reduction would be passed along, he said. The bus can carry 44 adults.

The bus is a not-for-profit response to the energy crisis, said Nygaard, who is leasing it with Ward from Schaumburg Transportation Co. for $35 per night.

The round trip takes about 1½ hours. The bus leaves Schaumburg High School at 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, stops at Elgin Community College at about 4:55 p.m., and reaches Northern Illinois University in DeKalb at about 5:45. The return trip leaves DeKalb at about 8:40 p.m. and after stopping in Elgin reaches Schaumburg High School between 10 and 10:15 p.m., Nygaard said.

STUDY ON THE BUS, suggests Dale Nygaard, co-sponsor in a week-old commuter bus for night students at Elgin Community College and Northern Illinois University, DeKalb. The bus leaves Schaumburg High School at 4:30 p.m. and reaches DeKalb at 5:45 p.m.

The bus arrives back at Schaumburg High School at about 10:15 p.m.

Builder perjury charges in limbo

County and federal authorities have not decided whether a developer will be investigated for possible perjury charges in connection with tentative zoning granted in Schaumburg last week. Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board Pres. Donnie Rudd requested the probe in a Feb. 11 letter to Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey, with a carbon copy sent to U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson. Rudd named Ronald Benach of Hallmark Homes, who plans to develop Lexington Green, a 480-unit condominium project, on property owned by Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher and Chicago philanthropist Jack M. Pritzker.

Rudd contends Benach told school officials that because Atcher is partial owner of the land, and the mayor controls zoning, the developer did not need to make the standard cash donation to the school district.

Benach later denied having made such statements during testimony under oath at a zoning board hearing, Rudd added.

Rudd's request has been referred to Kenneth Gillis, chief of Carey's special investigations unit, Laurie Granger, public relations director for the state attorney's office, said yesterday. "It is being evaluated but there has been no decision yet," she added.

ANTON R. VALUKAS, deputy chief of the official corruption section of the U.S. Attorney's office, said he expects to make no decision in the Benach matter yet for "at least another week."

"I haven't had a chance to review the evidence to see if there is any violation of federal law," Valukas said yesterday. School officials consider Benach's offer of $25 per unit contributions for the development planned at Meacham and Old Schaumburg roads inadequate.

Though trustees agreed to grant zoning for the property last week they urged Benach to reopen negotiations with Dist. 54. A meeting between school officials and Benach is scheduled tomorrow morning.

When the zoning petition was announced, Atcher said he was removing himself from consideration of the project because of possible conflict of interest.

Retirement community plans to be unveiled

Plans for Friendship Village, a retirement community with nursing facilities, will be unveiled in Schaumburg early next month.

The facility, available to persons 62 years of age and older, would be located on nearly 24 acres along Schaumburg Road just east of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center North.

It is proposed by Christian Homes Services Inc., of Des Moines, Iowa, owner-operator of 25 similar facilities throughout the United States.

THE COMPANY has a contract option with J. Emil Anderson & Sons, property owners, for 23.9 acres with second option rights on an additional five-acre tract if the land is not needed for future hospital expansion, said Bill Smith, an attorney representing CHS.

Smith said 550 units are planned if the full 29 acres are used; without the additional five acres 438 units would be built.

"They will consist of alcove units, studio apartments and one and two-bedroom units," he added.

A 90-bed infirmary is planned which could be expanded to 120 beds if the larger site is developed, Smith said.

Purchase price of units, which will include full health care for retirees, is "in the $20,000 range," according to Richard Oggero of CHS.

"This is what we are planning but costs could vary a bit," said Oggero, noting that the retirement community would be controlled by a nonprofit board whose members would own and manage the facility.

ZONING FOR 537 apartments on the property, granted to J. Emil Anderson & Sons in 1971, has now lapsed. Terms of the zoning agreement stipulated construction of the proposed apartment complex, then planned as buildings to house hospital employees, required the project to begin within 18 months of the time zoning was approved.

Zoning approval for the residential development provided a 20-acre land donation from the Anderson firm on which the 180-bed RPSL branch hospital will be built.

Friendship Village was presented to the village development committee last fall as a tentative plan for the Schaumburg Road site since prior zoning had expired.

The proposal will be presented to the zoning board of appeals at 8 p.m. March 14 in Lincoln Hall, Schaumburg Civic Center, 101 Schaumburg Ct. The hearing is open to the public.

The club has announced a new policy dictating "every boy must play" on teams it sponsors. Ensuring team participants will have a good time and that they will learn the fundamentals of the game will be emphasized over winning, a spokesman said.

Sign-up times for boys and cheerleaders are daily from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Boys Club. There will be no charges until the start of the new season.

Bob Beneteau was recently elected Boys Club president. Other new officers are Bob Hill, vice president; Carol Darfner, secretary, and John Hecimovich, treasurer.

New directors are Barbara Beneteau, Claudette Conway, Ken Conway, Bob Githens, Larry Kurtz, Jerry Leavy, Doc Markgraf, Al Semnick, Larry Smith, Tony Stompanato and Louise Thiede.

Archdiocese requests TV relay tower zoning

The Chicago Catholic Archdiocese is petitioning for a zoning variation to allow construction of a 285-foot relay tower to be placed in unincorporated Schaumburg Township.

The tower is planned for construction on an undeveloped portion of St. Michael The Archangel Cemetery, Algonquin and Roselle roads.

The Schaumburg tower and other identical structures planned for Orland Township in southern Cook County and Mundelein in Lake County will be used as relay towers in a four-channel television network to be operated by the Archdiocese.

Broadcast equipment for the system has been purchased by the Chicago Arch-

Parks set costs for pool passes

Hoffman Estates Park District board members agreed this week to keep the cost of Lions Pool season family passes to $29. Individual passes will be sold for $10.

There will be no preseason reduction in the cost of pool passes.

Bus service will be provided for pool users for the first time this summer at a cost of 25 cents per individual ride. Family bus passes will be sold for $10; individual season tickets will cost $10, and 10-ride passes may be purchased for $3.

Private rental pool costs have been reduced from $50 to $30 in order to make the pool more accessible for private parties, said Park Director Al Binder.

On recommendation of the recreation committee, park board members authorized plans for a summer athletic camp for boys in grades three through six.

The program will be limited to a maximum of 60 days. The camp will be held for two 3-week sessions at Hoffman Estates High School, Binder said. Cost is $35 per boy with a $5 deposit paid at registration and final payment due June 1.

Binder said an Akido program will be attempted at Barrington Square March 1, and additional Beaver clubs for children entering kindergarten or first grade will be planned at Sheffield Towne, Barrington Square and possibly Moon Lake Village.

Final summer program plans will be completed and available for review at the March 5 park board meeting. Planning is being coordinated by Binder and Recreation Supt. Bill Hinkins.

Jaycees to ask village help in funding teen drug clinic

Hoffman Estates Jaycees will ask the village to consider cosponsorship of local participation in a teen-age institute on drug addiction to be held in June.

"We would like to be able to send 10 high school sophomores or juniors to the institute being held at Hudson Camp near Bloomington," said Archie Nykaza, Jaycees president. The program is modeled after the Ohio Institute on Addiction which has operated since 1962.

Nykaza said he plans to ask the village to donate $300, which would provide for five students.

The initial presentation will be made to the youth commission at 8 p.m. tonight in the lower level conference room of the Hoffman Estates municipal building, 1200 N. Gannon Dr.

"The Jaycees will sponsor one or two students and we are hoping to convince other community organizations that it would be a worthwhile expenditure," Nykaza explained.

The program, sponsored by the Illinois diocesan Multi-Media Communications Center and Network. Partial broadcasting will begin within the next few weeks and the system is expected to be fully operational within one year.

CAMCAN is planned as an audio-visual communications network to serve the needs and interests of the Archdiocese — including schools, seminaries, parishes, catechetical centers and other agencies, according to network officials.

The petition will be heard at 3 p.m. March 1 when the county zoning board of appeals meets at the Schaumburg Township Public Library, 32 W. Library Ln., Schaumburg.

Petitions presented to officials

New Town residents asking village utilities takeover

More than 2,100 residents of the New Town section of Mount Prospect have signed petitions asking the village to look into taking over sewer and water service currently provided by Citizens Utilities Co.

In presenting the stack of petitions to the village board Tuesday night, Marie L. Caylor, chairman of the Northwest Suburban Council of Associations, which coordinated the petition drive in the northeast section of the village, referred to a study of the feasibility of the village's buying Citizens' equipment as "important and long overdue."

The petitions were given to the village board's finance committee for review. The petitions specifically ask the village to make a professional appraisal of the value of Citizens Utilities' equipment in Mount Prospect.

The appraisal would be the first step toward the village's deciding whether to buy the equipment and to take over the function of providing sewer and water service in the New Town area itself. The cost of purchasing Citizens Utilities' equipment would be borne by New Town property owners in a long-term bond issue.

MRS. CAYLOR mentioned poor water quality, low water pressure and "considerable monthly costs" as prompting the request for the village to consider buying out Citizens.

Mount Prospect residents with village sewer and water service pay a minimum $4.50 a month, billed quarterly. Village residents served by Citizens, which is based in Addison, pay a minimum $7.60 a month, which would rise to $13 monthly if a request by the firm for a rate increase is granted by the Illinois Commerce Commission.

The ICC is currently conducting a public hearing into the rate hike request. In the second day of cross examination of Citizens Utilities officials yesterday, it was revealed that the firm has spent $81,300 in its bid to raise rates.

A BREAKDOWN of costs provided by Jack O. Sanders, vice president of the company, indicates that $50,000 is being spent on legal services; $24,000 for testimony preparation and exhibits; $6,500, travel and living expenses for officials of the parent company in town to testify; $500, telephone; $300, publication of legal notices.

Part of the cost incurred is for an analysis of customers' bills to determine the impact of a rate increase. The study has not yet been conducted, but William J. Ide, chief water engineer for the ICC, expressed interest in reviewing the figures.

A similar study prepared by opponents of the rate hike show that bills in the New Town section of Mount Prospect and the Waycinden Park subdivision near Des Plaines would rise by $80 to $100 a year in many cases. In addition, School Dist. 26 would face a bill $7,358 higher than its utility bill last year, and River Trails Park District would be forced to pay $2,249 more.

The opponents will present their case beginning March 19, when the ICC hearing resumes. Cross-examination of Citizens Utilities officials is expected to be completed today.

Area residents, Rob Roy developers in showdown

The first confrontation between the people who live near the Rob Roy Golf Course and the developers who hope to convert the golf course to an apartment-condominium development will take place tonight.

The Mount Prospect Zoning Board of Appeals will take up the controversial Rob Roy issue at a public hearing scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

The session will provide the first opportunity for members of the zoning board and residents of the Rob Roy area to cross-examine officials of Kenroy Inc., Skokie, on plans announced Jan. 24 to build 4,500 units on the 200-acre site, which lies east of Wheeling Road between Camp McDonald Road and Euclid Avenue in unincorporated Wheeling Township.

The questioning is expected to focus on the density and layout of the development, and its potential for worsening flooding in the area.

AS DESCRIBED by Kenroy officials, the development would house close to 11,000 persons upon its completion in 15 years, including 678 grade school children. Dist. 26 officials plan to ask Kenroy for at least seven acres of land for a school and a "reasonable amount of first-year school operating costs." Kenroy has offered the school district four acres of land.

Opposition to the proposed development is widespread among residents of the Rob Roy vicinity, and Mount Prospect village trustees are planning a village-wide survey next month to determine the extent of the opposition. The trustees were to formalize the wording of the survey this week, but postponed the matter until the March 5 board meeting.

As described by Mayor Robert D. Teichert, the survey in general will offer three options:

- That the village buy the golf course, at taxpayer expense, to block development.
- That the village permit some construction but require that open space be left on the fringes.
- That the village reject plans for development altogether, forcing Kenroy to go to Cook County for rezoning.

THE COUNTY is considered more lenient than municipalities in granting multi-family zoning, though it has twice turned down apartment developments proposed for the Rob Roy site.

Kenroy is seeking annexation to Mount Prospect and R-4 planned unit development zoning.

Following the completion of testimony in the case, the zoning board of appeals will make a recommendation on the petition to the village board, which will take final action. The trustees will take the results of the public survey into account in making a decision, according to Teichert, but will not be bound by the survey.

Village may regulate gas

Mount Prospect village officials may take steps to regulate the sale of gasoline in the village.

Mayor Robert D. Teichert has suggested that the village consider invoking its home rule authority to cope with lengthy lines of gas-hungry motorists at service stations.

Cars backed up onto main streets while waiting for gas have caused traffic hazards throughout the village, Teichert said.

"If we're going to wrestle with the matter of line queuing and loss of service," he said.

IGE: new concept

Visitors to St. Raymond's School will view Individually Guided Education plan in action

by LUISA GINNETH

Visitors to St. Raymond's School in Mount Prospect will be exposed to a new concept in education as they tour the school this week during open house for Catholic Schools Week.

The concept is known as Individually Guided Education (IGE) and with its inception three years ago, St. Raymond's School has joined a growing list of public and private schools across the country who are adopting the program in lieu of the traditional grade level system.

The focus of IGE, as described in the school handbook, is to "permit" each youngster to have the experiences that are uniquely tailored to his individual needs in each learning area.

To accomplish this the school is structured by unit levels rather than grade levels with students working independently, in small groups or in large groups depending on individual needs.

SIX UNITS comprise the levels with first and second graders in Unit A, third and fourth graders in Unit B, fourth, fifth and sixth graders in Units C and D, and seventh and eighth graders in Units E and F.

The IGE cycle starts with the definition of what is to be learned. Children are tested to see which areas they need work in and what objectives have yet to be met in the subject.

After he has completed the learning activities designated for him, the student is retested to see if he has learned the objective. The cycle is repeated over and over as each new objective is undertaken. Students know from the start what they are expected to learn and they have an opportunity to help make the decisions as to how they will learn.

THE ADVANTAGES of the IGE system are stated in the handbook as allowing each child to be educated at a level and rate appropriate for him as an individual.

At the same time teachers spend more time diagnosing student needs and helping them attain goals.

"The system is one of a personalized approach to education," said Sister Judy Herrmann, principal. "We try to teach positive concepts and self respect. The IGE is an organized way of change and it seems to be going very successfully in the 40 schools in the Chicago Archdiocese that are using the program."

ST. RAYMOND'S also uses a non-graded reporting system in its IGE program. Conferences with parents are held and summary sheets are filled out for each child indicating where improvement is needed and where progress is satisfactory but no grades are used.

Sister Judy said the flexibility of the school system extends not only to the students but to the faculty as well. A committee composed of unit leaders and the principal meets regularly to discuss instructional improvement.

"I view my role as that of being one aspect of the total educational program in the parish," Sister Judy said. "I think of myself as more of a colleague to the faculty rather than its superior."

"Decision-making is a shared responsibility because we believe the people involved in carrying out policy should be involved in making the policy, too," Sister Judy added.

SISTER JUDY, who became principal at the school in August, said she views St. Raymond's as a progressive school which offers viable educational options for the community both academically and religiously. "We are constantly updating and improving the program and we use a flexible schedule to meet the needs of the students."

Response to the program by both parents and students, according to Sister Judy, has improved over the past three years. (Continued on Page 6)

Village officially opposes RTA bill

The Mount Prospect Village Board this week went on record as opposing the Regional Transportation Authority bill and urging voters to defeat it in the March 19 referendum.

The resolution, listing nine objections to the bill, which would create a regional transit authority for the six-county Chicago metropolitan area, was adopted unanimously Tuesday night, minus absentee Trustee Kenneth V. Scholten.

The trustees indicated in previous discussions they were not opposed to the concept of a regional transit authority, but disapproved of certain facets of the compromise bill, which they called "totally unacceptable."

Main objections to the bill: There is no guarantee funds will be spent to improve forms of transportation besides the CTA; the non-elected RTA governing board has taxing powers without representation; the board can issue bonds without referendum or competitive bidding for up to half a billion dollars.

Taxi fare hike approved

A request by Prospect Cab Co. to raise taxicab fares in Mount Prospect was passed in a first reading Tuesday by the village board. Formal adoption is expected at the next meeting, March 5, and the new rates would go into effect later that month.

The present fares of 45 cents flat fee and 60 cents a mile would be upped to 55 cents flat fee and 70 cents a mile. The typical 2 1/2-mile ride, under the new fee schedule, would rise from $1.95 to $2.30.

The rate increase would not effect the 30 cent a ride flat fee for senior citizens.

Intersection study set

The village board engaged the engineering firm of Allstot, March and Guillou, of Arlington Heights, to study the intersection of Elmhurst Road and Lincoln Street.

The authorization came amidst questions raised by Trustees George B. Anderson and O. T. Gustus that it would cost $250,000 to install a pedestrian-activated traffic signal and to redesign the intersection.

Mayor Robert D. Teichert also questioned the estimate, stating that the intersection merits "A No. 1 priority in my book," but only if traffic flow would be improved. "It would be a waste of money and effort and would be improper traffic control to say we don't want anyone to turn" from northbound Elmhurst Road lanes onto Lincoln Street, as plans are currently drawn, Teichert said.

"While people on Lincoln Street may say we don't want more traffic, the signal would in fact create more traffic on Lincoln Street and that's what it's supposed to do." Prohibiting left turns onto Lincoln would simply create more traffic on Shabonee Tr. and other side streets, the mayor said.

The Elmhurst-Lincoln intersection will be discussed by the village board's fire and police committee next Wednesday night.

Cable TV study funds OK'd

The trustees appropriated up to $10,976 for a detailed study involving cable television and how it would best fit into Mount Prospect.

The study will be conducted by Telcom Engineering to help the village board decide what a franchise for CATV should include. The cost of the study will be passed on to the franchise holder.

New rules of order adopted

A new set of parliamentary rules of order for village board meetings was adopted this week. The rules, drafted by the judiciary committee, generally follow Robert's Rules of Order, the traditional parliamentary guidelines.

The main difference between the new and former rules is that now, when a trustee votes "present" or "pass" on a matter because he holds "a direct, personal or pecuniary interest, his seat will be considered vacant. Therefore, four of the remaining six board members must vote aye for a motion to pass, rather than four of seven.

Runoff from homes to be eyed

The village engineer has been asked to study the impact of three homes being built at the northeast corner of Noyes Street and Belmont Avenue in unincorporated Elk Grove Township. The property owner may be required to chip in toward the Hatlen Heights special assessment for sewers if it is determined that storm water from his property would run off into the Mount Prospect sewer system.

Parks' high school cage team takes first in state

The Mount Prospect Park District's entry placed first in the Illinois Parks and Recreation Society state high school basketball tournament played over the weekend in Lake Forest.

The local team defeated a Chicago Heights park district team, 69 to 41, Sunday for the championship. Mount Prospect recorded earlier victories over Glenview, 53 to 43; Lake Forest, the defending champion, 63 to 34; and Worth-Palos, 56 to 37. Sixteen teams were entered in the single-elimination tournament.

Mount Prospect Coach Rick Pyle of the park district staff said he is "really proud of our kids. They played terrific ball."

The team was presented a trophy for winning the tournament — the first time it's been won by a Mount Prospect team — and individual trophies are expected to be given to the team members.

One Mount Prospect player, Dave Anderson, was voted most valuable player in the tournament. He scored 78 points in the four games, including a high of 22 points against Worth-Palos.

Other team members are Ralph Voyta (captain), Mike Bernard, Len Beyer, Ken Holan, Rod Klobassa, Pete Panopolos and Gary Willert.

Panopolos attends Prospect High School, and the other players go to Forest View High School. Two team members, Beyer and Panopolos, will return next year.

The team posted a 12-0 record against high school and men's teams prior to its 4-0 record in the state tournament. During the regular season, the team scored as many as 110 points in a single game.

IGE: new idea in education years since the program began. "It seems to have become a settling atmosphere and parents seem to be responding very favorably to it," she said. "They have expressed the same concerns to us that we look at when we view the program and look at ways to improve it."

"The children seem to be very happy with it, too, and I think most of them deep down would say they enjoy coming to school."

SISTER JUDY believes in a progressive school system and thinks the IGE method of personalized education is a good alternative to the traditional educational system.

vice, maybe we ought to invoke some kind of control ourselves," he told village trustees Tuesday night.

Teichert did not propose a specific method of dealing with the problem, but made reference to voluntary and involuntary rationing plans in other states, such as Oregon and Hawaii. There gas purchases are restricted to certain days according to license numbers. Such plans, Teichert said, "seem to have lessened the lines."

The mayor's suggestion represents a softening of a position he took earlier that the village should not get involved in gasoline sales because it would interfere with the free enterprise system.

SO FAR, STEPS to regulate gas sales have been taken chiefly by states rather than individual municipalities, but Teichert proposed some form of local control be exercised because "Illinois doesn't seem to be doing anything. I think we ought to study it and if necessary exert our home rule power."

Teichert suggested that suburbs adjacent to Mount Prospect also consider gas rationing plans to strengthen its effectiveness. He said he would suggest that the Northwest Municipal Conference, scheduled to meet last night, take up the question.

Police oppose village's offer of 8% pay hike

A poll of Arlington Heights police patrolmen indicates strong opposition to the latest village offer of an 8 per cent pay increase.

The poll was based on a questionnaire circulated among patrolmen. Of the more than 30 returned so far, a police spokesman said not one responding policeman favored accepting the village's latest offer.

Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson originally submitted a proposed budget for the village with an across-the-board 5 per cent pay increase for all municipal employees. The salary raise was later upped to 8 per cent, in a written reply to demands by the Arlington Heights Firefighters Assn. Paramedics and fire department engineers were offered an additional 5 per cent raise by Hanson.

Members of the police department presented the trustees with petitions after the 5 per cent raise offer was first released. The petition, signed by all active members of the force, indicated an 11.6 per cent pay raise was needed because of rapidly increasing living costs in the Northwest suburbs.

PATROLMEN responding to the questionnaire indicated the 8 per cent offer was unacceptable, and would not meet past and projected cost of living jumps.

Some policemen objected to the creation of a Fireman II classification for the paramedics and engineers with an accompanying additional 5 per cent raise.

They said many policemen have also undergone extensive specialization training for specific details, such as the traffic and detective divisions, without receiving salaries above those of regular patrolmen.

Policemen have also said the department has gone from one of the highest paid in the area to one of the lowest. The policemen said the force is one of the smallest based on policeman per population ratio.

BASE SALARIES FROM Arlington Heights patrolmen have gone from $7,565 in 1968 to $9,468 in 1973. The average base salary for patrolmen in the area was $10,274 in 1973, according to a survey by the Northwest Municipal Conference.

The same survey places the average top patrolman's salary at $13,476 in 1973. Arlington Heights paid a top patrolman's salary of $13,980 for the same period.

Hanson, when asked, said, "We are still within reason as far as pay in the area goes."

He said Arlington Heights was within $15 to $20 annually when comparing top salaries received by patrolmen in other suburbs. He said other towns might be paying their police more because of their intradepartmental difficulties. He declined to be quoted on which towns had to pay more to keep their policemen.

During hearings for the 1970-71 budget, Hanson said in raising patrolmen's salaries from $10,600 to $11,600, "I know of one other suburban town that's higher than ours, and that's Deerfield."

YESTERDAY, Hanson said Arlington Heights is not slipping in the pay scale as much as other towns are now catching up.

When asked about the comparatively low starting patrolman's salary, Hanson said it was compensated by the speed at which it is attained. "It only takes three years to get top pay here," he said, adding it takes 3.5 to 4 years to reach top pay in most other suburbs.

Hanson said of linking the Fireman II classification to police detective or traffic details, "I don't like comparing apples and oranges any more than necessary. Their (paramedics and detectives) work is not related in any way. There is no parallel."

Hanson said Arlington Heights is adequately protected with the present police force and saw no need for hiring additional men.

"If this were Utopia, I'd say 'yes.' All things considered though we have enough men. I heard one standard of a policeman for every 1,200 people and now I hear something else. It's a question of who sets the criteria," he said.

The commission plans to use the money for printing special publications for senior citizens, analyzing the results of its recent senior citizens questionnaire, and training for commission members.

The budget allocation was made with comment that the commission could request additional money from the village board during the year for special projects.

"I really don't think you should handcuff us," commission member Esther Rabchuk told the finance committee Tuesday night. "There are 4,500 people over 60 in the community and they know we're trying to do something."

An upcoming project for the commission is the publication of a handbook that would list the services, medical aid and special activities of interest to seniors.

The handbook, which would be printed in large type for easy reading, could be published in cooperation with Wheeling Township, Mrs. Rabchuk said.

Another activity may be a senior citizens column in the village's quarterly newsletter which is mailed to all Arlington Heights residents.

Incorporation opposition still expected

Prospect Heights refiles its petitions

by TOM VON MALDER

A new petition calling for a vote on Prospect Heights incorporation is set for a March 13 hearing in Cook County Circuit Court. Several boundary changes were made, including the deletion of a section of the Rob Roy Golf Course.

The incorporation-sponsoring Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. had included a strip along the west and north edges of the golf course in its previous incorporation petitions.

The idea was to permit Prospect Heights to exert some control over the future of the golf course. At the last court hearing, however, the owners of the golf course (the McDonald Family Trust), the contract purchasers of the property (Kenroy Inc. of Skokie) and neighboring Village of Mount Prospect all had objected to incorporation because of the golf course.

The golf course, on the north side of Euclid Avenue east of Wheeling Road, is currently the subject of a rezoning and annexation petition before the Village of Mount Prospect. Kenroy wants to build 4,501 apartments on the site.

THERE WERE four other boundary changes made by the PHIA, these were:

- Deletion of Patriot Park, west of Schoenbeck Road and south of Palatine Road, as it has already been annexed to Arlington Heights.

- Deletion of the so-called Chesny property, north of Willow Road and east of Waterman Avenue, which is currently the subject of an annexation petition before the Village of Arlington Heights. With guarantees that the property will be developed as single-family homes rather than the originally proposed apartments, the PHIA has no further interest in the property.

- Deletion of the E. F. Smetana residence, 201 S. Wolf Rd. Smetana appeared in court as an objector to his house's inclusion in the Prospect Heights plans. Since then he has had his property annexed to the Village of Wheeling.

- Addition of two Village Pump gas stations, at Hintz and Elmhurst roads and at Wolf and Palatine roads, at the owners' request.

Property west of Schoenbeck Road and south of Hintz Road, owned by six men including Don Schmitt of Schmitt's Nursery, will still be included in the incorporation proposal, despite the owners' objections. Also still included is All-gauer's Fireside Restaurant, 2855 N. Milwaukee Ave., which also had objected.

BOTH Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights officials yesterday indicated their communities will continue to oppose Prospect Heights incorporation, despite the boundary changes.

Mount Prospect Village Trustee Richard Hendricks said his village's objections were based on two factors, only one of which was the Rob Roy Golf Course. "The one remaining item we would object to would be the inclusion of a part of Pal-Waukee Airport," Hendricks said.

The matter will probably be discussed at the March 5 village board meeting, Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert said. "The (village) board hasn't indicated any other course (except to continue to object). We haven't talked about the changes."

Teichert did think the PHIA move was a step in the right direction. "I'm glad," he said. "At least they're making an effort to get away from the controversial issues."

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Village Pres. Jack Walsh said the two changes affecting Arlington Heights do not touch on his community's basic objection to incorporation. "We're concerned about a straight-line border," he said.

Arlington Heights officials have long objected to Prospect Heights' boundaries extending to the west side of Waterman Avenue.

Objectors have until March 8, five days before the hearing, to file objections in the circuit court. The incorporation petition was filed Feb. 8 with 337 signatures, well above the required amount.

Arlington Heights' Senior Citizens Commission, in its first year, has been assigned a tentative budget of $3,500.

Trustees seek master plan of buildings

Arlington Heights trustees have asked for a master plan of the public buildings contemplated by the village administration.

The request was prompted by current proposals for a public safety building and an additional public works building.

The public safety building would include new police offices and circuit court facilities and $96,000 from the utility tax fund is included in the proposed 1974-75 village budget to begin a building fund for the structure. And $40,000 is earmarked to draw plans for the additional public works garage.

The village board finance committee agreed to consider a long-range plan for public buildings at a future meeting.

No new leads in $15,000 bank robbery

Police are without new leads in Tuesday's $15,000 pre-dawn robbery of the First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility.

Arlington Heights police questioned commuters yesterday morning in an unsuccessful effort to gather new information. A detective said a woman claimed to have made a deposit in the outside depository during the time of the holdup, but saw nothing unusual.

Bank officials set their loss at $15,000 yesterday. Earlier announcements had placed the amount at $100,000 and then $20,000.

An agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said, "We're still licking it around. We have a lot of ends to tie up. The best thing to say is we're still investigating it."

Police said they hoped a commuter may have witnessed the robbery or seen the waiting getaway car parked next to the facility at Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road. The intersection is passed by thousands of commuters daily on their way to the Chicago and North Western Ry. station.

BRUCE DODDS, executive vice president of the bank, said early police bulletins of $100,000 were erroneous.

"The amount is $15,000. We have never had that amount ($100,000) in there. It is physically impossible to have that much money there," he said.

Dodds blamed the "exaggerated" amount released earlier on the teller's fright. "If you hear the tapes of the call

Redevelopment plans meet topic Tuesday

Downtown redevelopment plans recommended by economic consultants Larry Smith & Co. will be discussed at a joint meeting of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce and the village board of trustees Tuesday night.

The Mayor's Round Table discussion is scheduled for 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Arlington Inn, 948 E. Northwest Hwy.

Downtown redevelopment is included in Larry Smith's economic projections for Arlington Heights. The $20,000 study, commissioned by the village board, is a proposed section of the village's new master plan.

The report identifies parking, esthetic and geographic problems downtown, as well as competition from surrounding shopping centers, as the major obstacles to rebuilding the central business district.

to police, you can hear she is very upset — as well she might be."

The 23-year-old woman teller was surprised by a masked gunman as she opened the building at 6:45 a.m. Tuesday. The gunman forced her to open the safe and then fled after taking her out of the building and locking her keys inside.

It is believed the gunman and an accomplice fled to the Northwest Tollway in a dark late model sedan without attracting notice.

Few raise cattle in suburbs

4-H members branching out

by BETTY LEE

Local 4-H clubs are steering away from the traditional agricultural projects and are undertaking those that are more in tune with suburban living.

In the Northwest suburbs where raising cattle, growing vegetables, canning food and other farm activities are nearly impossible, the club's members are devoting time to nature studies, public speaking, arts and crafts, sewing and other activities.

"The clubs are setting programs that are not strictly agricultural," said Betty Lash, a community worker for the North Cook County 4-H Cooperative Extension in Arlington Heights. The extension service is a University of Illinois program. She added that the main purpose of 4-H clubs remains the same despite the different activities... to teach boys and girls to be better citizens, to be leaders in the community and to be a better, all-around person.

CHILDREN LEARN to adapt to suburban living by the activities that are available to them. Currently there is a film series on nutrition to teach club members the importance of vitamins and nutrients in their daily meals.

For younger children whose interest may not hold well in reading textbooks, the extension service offers comic book learning geared to those in third to sixth grades.

From building model airplanes to collecting newspapers for recycling, the club members decide on their own what projects to pursue. Currently there are nine clubs in Arlington Heights, led by parents who are knowledgeable in particular activities.

A new member will be screened to the appropriate club even though most clubs carry varied projects.

"WE PLACE THE child in appropriate clubs and sometimes we get parents to start a new one and lead it," Mrs. Lash said. Children who wish to join should call the Farm Bureau Building at 201 N. Dunton at CL 3-6460.

Older children who have been in 4-H clubs can participate in the junior leadership program, said Mrs. Lash. These children can volunteer to help younger members in special meetings and workshops.

Each summer the 4-H members center activities around the 4-H state fair. More ambitious members also enter contests in the Illinois State fair. Last summer area 4-H clubs participated in an exhibition at the Future of America Fair held at the Arlington Race Track.

The University of Illinois Cooperative

Extension Service will move this fall to a new two-story building still in construction on the west side of Hicks Road, just north of Euclid Avenue in Rolling Meadows. The extension service will share the building with the Cook County Farm Bureau.

THE ROLLING MEADOWS Sports Complex ice arena was once one of the most popular meeting places in the city. However, since its completion in 1971, average daily attendance has been dropping, from a high of 550 in 1971 to a low of between 100 and 300 at a session. Skating classes, on the other hand, have increased.

Interest in public skating waning

by REGINA OEHLER

A news analysis

In 1971, as many as 550 persons skated at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex on a Friday evening. The ice arena and recreational complex was new in those days, paid for by tax dollars and apparently enthusiastically supported by residents.

Since then, public skating at the $900,000 complex had dropped off to about 300 on a Friday night. Few families now attend public skating sessions and the park district has turned to the more lucrative and popular business of special ice skating classes and hockey teams playing at the ice rink.

What happened? Park district officials aren't sure but say the decline may be because of the construction of other rinks in the area. Steve Person, director of parks and recreation, says the novelty of the Rolling Meadows facility has worn off.

He added that since the heyday of the ice arena, Rolling Meadows High School has been built. Person said many of the youngsters that used to go ice skating are now attending basketball games, football games and other activities at the high school.

THE IDEA TO build the sports complex, one of the first of its kind in the Northwest suburbs, came in 1969 after a survey revealed residents were interested in skating.

The arena was approved as part of a $900,000 referendum passed in 1969 and first opened in January of 1971. The sale of passes was high — 268 were sold within the first month of operation.

As of the end of December this season, only 64 season passes have been sold.

In 1971, daily attendance at the rink averaged from 400 to 500. This year, daily attendance averages from about 100 to 300 a session, according to facility coordinator Rudy Nelson.

Also in 1971, the district's team hockey program, boasted only about 95 youngsters. This year there are approximately 350 involved. The learn-to-skate program has increased from 436 to in 1971 to almost 700 youngsters this year.

"THIS MEANS that people have gone out of public skating and into the programs," Person said. He added that because of the shift in interest, the park district has been scheduling more programs and less public skating.

How much money does the ice arena make or lose for the park district? Person said he doesn't know. He said the ice arena income and expenditures of past years were figured in with income and expenditures from the rest of the complex, and not kept separate. This is the first year that separate figures will be available, he said. Person took over as superintendent a little more than a year and a half ago.

The number of hours scheduled for public skating per week has declined from a high of 38½ in 1972 to 26 for this year, and may be cut further succeeding seasons. Surrounding area ice rinks have between 66 to 16 hours for public skating each week.

Since the rink's opening in 1971, residents have complained about the high cost of skating and the prevalence of minor equipment thefts.

"I think if everybody stopped going there, maybe the park board would feel sorry for the poor people in Rolling Meadows who cannot afford all that money," one 10-year-old wrote in 1971.

IT WASN'T until daily general admission and the sale of passes decreased substantially during the 1972-73 season that the 10-year-old got his wish. The price of passes remained the same, but the cost of daily admission decreased from $2 to $1 per adult and from $1 to 75 cents for students.

The decrease was partially balanced out by another decrease in the number of hours during each public skating session. The Rolling Meadows Park Board last fall also cut sessions from three to two hours.

The two ice arenas in the area that report the largest numbers of skaters are the Randhurst and Woodfield facilities. Woodfield reportedly has as many as 550 at a session and Randhurst has up to 300 on a weekend session.

The Arlington Ice Spectrum has approximately the same number of skaters as the Rolling Meadows rink, according to manager Jim Brown.

Rolling Meadows

yearbook wins honor

The Rolling Meadows High School 1973 yearbook staff recently received the Golden Eagle award from the American Joeten Yearbook Co. for the unusual cover and layout design of the 1973 Yearling.

The tan cowhide and branding iron specially designed to stamp the word "Impressions" involved a great deal of time and effort, according to yearbook adviser Bill Leece. The staff went to a tannery and selected the cowhide. Vincent Laken, a resident of Harvey, Ill., who has crafted western items for Walt Disney Productions, donated the branding iron to the school.

The Yearling staff's Golden Eagle is the second such award given an Illinois high school this year.
